BOLINAS VICTORIAN BURNS

Arson Feared In 2 Fires

Three house fires — two of them the apparent work of arsonists — kept firemen busy in pre-dawn hours today.

In Bolinas, a $58,000 Victorian house at 19 Brighton Avenue burst into flames at 4:30 a.m. Its former owner was arrested later in Petaluma on suspicion of arson.

In Forest Knolls, an empty house at 13 Forest Drive erupted into flame at 5:30 a.m., and arson investigators were called in.

And in Petaluma, firemen took 90 minutes to bring under control a fire at 238 Keller Street after being called out at 1:53 a.m.

Twenty volunteer firemen fought the blaze in Bolinas with three engines, and laid extra lines along Brighton Avenue to save neighboring houses.

Capitola Kimball and three children were asleep in the old frame house when neighbors saw flames coming from the right side and sounded the alarm.

Fire Chief Jose Silva said later the fire began in a crawl space alongside the house and there was a strong smell of oil or gasoline. County arson investigators were summoned.

Flames shot through the home's roof as volunteers battled the blaze, and a preliminary estimate of damages was put at $25,000. None of the house's occupants or firemen was injured.

A unit from the Stinson Beach Volunteer Fire Department stood by at the Bolians Station while the kre was fought.

Less than two hours after the fire started, one of its former owners, Charles K. Post of 390 Edd Tide, Sausalito, was arrested in Petaluma.

Post — until two years ago a Bolinas volunteer fireman — was stopped at 6:10 a.m. at Kentucky and Washington streets, according to Petaluma Police.

Police on routine patrol said they saw his car northbound on Petaluma Boulevard, passing a stop sign at about 70 miles per hour. After an 80 mile-per-hour chase southbound, roadblocks were set up, police said, and he finally was cut off and stopped by a police car.

Post was arrested for reckless driving, and held in city jail on suspicion of arson for Marin authorities.

Post reportedly sold the home on Brighton Avenue last year, and Mrs. Kimball had recently offered it for sale at $58,500. One of the oldest houses in Bolinas, it was built in 1885 by Chips Anderson, and was for many years owned by Jack Pepper — who sold it to Post in December 1969.

An hour later the county fire department at Woodacre was besieged by alarm calls from Forest Knolls residents reporting the house at 13 Forest Drive on fire.

Three trucks, six firemen, and as assistant chief took 19 minutes to bring the blaze under control. Most of the damage was in the home's basement, living room and in one bedroom, with damage estimated at $7,500 to the structure and $2,500 to its contents.

The house, owned by John Dent of 61 Birch Avenue, Corte Madera, has been unoccupied.

County fire officials said arson investigators were called to the scene, and reportedly a store in the San Geronimo Valley was broken into and flammable liquids stolen just prior to the fire.

Authorities said they were unaware of any connection between the Forest Knolls and Bolinas fires.

The Petaluma fire was at the home of Ronald Pyle on 238 Keller Street at 1:53 a.m., and firemen remained on the scene for 90 minutes. The home was damaged by smoke throughout, and the cause is under investigation, firemen said.

ARMIES IN CONFRONTATION

Israelis Strike Deep Into Lebanon

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Strong Israeliiair and ground forces struck deep into Lebanon today in what the military command in Tel Aviv called a search-and-destroy mission against Palestinian Arab guerrilla bases. The guerrillas fought back and Lebanese spokesmen said Lebanese army units also engaged the Israeli raiding force in fierce fighting.

An Israeli military source said there was no indication when the Israeli ground forces would be withdrawn. Hours after the attack was launched, the spokesman said, "when we are through mopping up and when we finish the job we have to do, we will clear out—the Lebanese will not dictate when we should withdraw."

Military sources said the clash between the Israeli and Lebanese armed forces was one of the biggest since the 1948 war. Labanon did not take part in the 1967 war and in previous Israeli raids most opposition came from the guerrilla forces.

Lebanese military sources said the Israeli strike appeared aimed at isolating South Lebanon militarily.

The Beirut government, at 3:30 p.m., about 10 hours after the Israeli strike was launched, declared a state of emergency throughout Lebanon. It also called on citizens to donate blood.

The Israeli air, artillery, armored and infantry strike into the central sector of the 50-mile border was the biggest in nearly seven months. The Israelis did not disclose the size of the force but Beirut said it included an armored brigade and at least 25 warplanes.

Both sides reported casualties during the hours-long twin-pronged attack which the Lebanese said penetrated up to 14 miles. While the fighting continued, Israel reported one soldier killed. Lebanese military spokesman said seven of their soldiers were killed and three wounded. They also reported three tanks destroyed, a gun-carrier burned and three anti-aircraft batteries hit.

An Israeli military correspondent said Lebanese tank fire scored a hit on an Israeli tank. Israeli military sources said there were "dozens" of guerrilla casualties while other Palestinians were captured. There was no immediate report from the Palestinian headquarters but a guerrilla spokesman said Israeli losses included one plane, two tanks and three military vehicles. The guerrilla spokesman in Beirut said 60 Israeli Skyhawk and Mirage jet fighter-bombers took part in the assault. The Egyptian Middle East News Agency said Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), was directing guerrilla operations from "an advanced position in the central sector of south Lebanon."

Israeli planes attacked what the Tel Aviv command described as the "main headquarters of the terrorists" at Nabatiyeh, about 10 miles inside Lebanon, and destroyed two bridges across the Litanij River linking the town with the border regions known as "Fatahland." A Lebanese military spokesman said the Israeli warplanes dropped napalm on its military positions.

The Israeli command said Israeli armor and infantry penetrated up to 12 miles inside Lebanon, flushing out guerrillas in 13 villages and killing and capturing "a number of them." It said "dozens of terrorists' houses" were blown up in the villages of Rmaich, Ein Abel, Bint Jbeil, Ainata, Beit Yahoune, Jaijme, Brachite, Kafra, el-Tori, el-Abeisa, majdal Islam, Kabarikha and Tulin.

Humphrey To Stump For McGovern

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who bitterly fought Sen. George McGovern in the California primary, will campaign side-by-side with the Democratic presidential nominee in an effort to shore up his underdog campaign in this state.

McGovern strategist Frank Mankiewicz disclosed the plan Friday, telling newsmen "it would be very difficult to win" in November without carrying California and New York "and I would think certainly impossible to win if we lost both."

Mankiewicz, in a telephone conference call interview with several newsmen, said McGovern is "probably better off" politically in California "than almost any other" state because he spent a lot of time campaigning here during the primary.

"Senator Humphrey will be campaigning with him in California," said Mankiewicz, McGovern's national political director.

McGovern campaign headquarters in Los Angeles later said the two senators probably would campaign together in California during mid-October.

Humphrey will campaign separately in San Francisco a week from today and in Los Angeles Sept. 24. McGovern will campaign in Northern California Sept. 25 and Los Angeles Sept. 26.

McGovern defeated Humphrey by less than five percentage points in California, a primary which all but assured the South Dakotan of the Democratic nomination and splintered the party with disunity.

Some former Humphrey supporters—noteably among organized labor, the Jewish community and old-line party fundraisers—have given McGovern only lukewarm support at best.

The joint campaigning will represent a continuation of the strategy begun this week when McGovern toured the Midwest and East with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mankiewicz said McGovern next week would campaign with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, another losing candidate for the Democratic nomination, and join up with Humphrey the following week.

"I would not refer to it as a celebrity of the week campaign," said Mankiewicz, answering a newsman's question. "It is evidence that he's able to get prominent Democrats to endorse him and others to campaign with him."

Mankiewicz sat in a Baltimore airport telephone booth during the conference call, the first of several the McGovern campaign intends to hold with reporters in various California cities.

He said the "economy is a very crucial issue in California" and "the people are beginning to realize (McGovern) is committed to full employment."

He said "if the election were held today it would probably be close" in California.

Quang Tri Citadel Falls To The South

Red Forces Ousted—Long Battle At End

SAIGON (UPI) — The red and gold flag of South Vietnam fluttered in a typhoon wind atop the scarred walls of the Quang Tri Citadel today, officially marking the end to one of the most significant battles of the war. Hastily sewed into one corner of the standard was the green and yellow shoulder patch of government marines who raised it.

In a scene reminiscent of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima by U.S. Marines in World War II, rain-soaked South Vietnamese marines raised their national flag on a 20-foot pole atop the west wall of the battered fortress, recaptured by government forces Friday.

The marines huddled under tents and ponchos and military spokesmen said there probably would be relatively little activity by them Sunday while the slashing rain and wind of Typhoon Flossie covered the northern segment of South Vietnam. Air support has been at a minimum because of the bad weather for several days.

Top military officials involved in the fight turned their attention to the question of "what next?" The most logical target was the town of Dong Ha, eight miles north. The North Vietnamese still held the 18 miles of territory between Quang Tri and the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), and everything west of the Thach Han River which passes the west wall of the Citadel.

All North Vietnamese opposition within the walled 19th century fortress was reported removed, as well as in the surrounding city, which was the only provincial capital to fall during the Communist offensive, UPI correspondent Barney Seibert said.

Seibert said 27 prisoners were taken in the final sweep of the Citadel, some with documents that showed the Communist defenders were short on all types of supplies. He said requests for food, ammunition and other supplies returned with the notation "don't have any, don't have any." He said a request for replacements noted 54 men were being sent as reinforcements, but only 27 had weapons. "You must provide weapons yourselves for the others," the document read.

A military source said the Communists stopped firing their longrange 130 mm cannon into the Quang Tri area to give any remaining North Vietnamese troops time to withdraw. He said heavy barrages may hit the marines soon, and they were spreading out and digging bunkers to meet such a threat.

The capture of the Citadel was announced late Friday by official military spokesmen in Saigon, but was officially sealed at noon today when the gold flag with three horizontal red stripes was planted.

President Nguyen Van Thieu sent his personal congratulations to the marines and bottles of champagne were dispatched to top officers by the military commander of the northern region, who was in charge of the

Swedish Skyjack Ordeal Ends In Madrid Surrender

MADRID (UPI)—Three Yugoslav terrorists who hijacked a Scandinavian airliner and flew to Spain with a ransom of six prisoners and $100,000 in cash surrendered to Spanish authorities today.

The climax to the suspense-filled incident came after three hours of tense negotiations with Spanish and Swedish officials while the plane was parked in a tightly guarded corner of Madrid airport. "They have surrendered," a police spokesman said.

Spanish sources said the three hijackers may face a Spanish court for air piracy. The six freed prisoners—who had been serving terms for a variety of crimes including the murder of the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden—will be returned shortly, the sources said.

Police will also return the $100,000 ransom, Spanish officials said. They said authorities had ruled out the possibility that political asylum would be granted to the nine Yugolslavs.

The hijackers and their companions left the DC9 jetliner at 3 p.m. and a spokesman for Scandinavian Airways System (SAS) said they had surrendered.

They were driven away in a windowless police bus. A police spokesman at the scene said they were being taken to the downtown headquarters of the National Security Police.

More than 200 riot police, including sharpshooters who had been massed in a cargo shed near the parked SAS plane, were withdrawn shortly afterwards.

The hijackers and their companions are believed to be members of a Croatian anti-Tito movement known as the Ustashi.

The plane was hijacked over Sweden Friday. The hijackers released the 84 passengers after the Swedish government paid them the equivalent of $100,000 in cash and released six Croats who had been sentenced in Sweden for various crimes, among them the murder of the Yugoslav ambassador to Stockholm.

Spanish aviation sources said the hijackers had indicated by radio that they intended to refuel the plane, change crew, and then continue to an undiclosed destination,

But about 45 minutes after the plane landed here, three unidentifed men left the plane through the forward door and were escorted away by Spanish police. A fuel truck pulled up at about the same time but drove off a short tima later without attaching its hoses to the plane's tanks.

Several Spanish officials boarded the plane later to negotiate with the hijackers. Authoritiative sources said the Swedish embassy had asked Spain not to take any action which might lead to bloodshed or destruction of the plane.

The first indication of a break came when the crew was released and was driven off in a small SAS truck.

The jet left Malmo, Sweden, with the three terrorists, six of their countrymen whom they were able to free from Swedish jails by threatening to blow up the airplane, and the equivalent of $100,000 in ransom.

The Swedish government agreed to the ransom to save the lives of 83 hostage passengers who were left in Malmo. The plane touched down at 11:44 a.m. (6:44 a.m. EDT).,

Former Capitol Aides Indicted In Bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A federal grand jury climaxed a three-month investigation Friday by indicting two former White House aides and five other men on charges of breaking into and attempting to bug Democratic National Headquarters.

The eight-count indictment returned in U.S. District Court alleged that the seven men conspired to steal documents and install electronic eavesdropping devices inside the party headquarters located in the plush Watergate apartment complex.

The indictment also said some telephone conversations originating in Democratic offices had been monitored for three weeks before five of the men were arrested in the predawn hours of June 17 inside the headquarters.

The five originally charged in the case were caught by police who arrived after being alerted by a Watergate security guard.

The two additional men indicted Friday were ex-White House aides G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr. The indictment said Liddy and Hunt fled the scene moments before police arrived.

The other five men indicted were James W. McCord Jr., the former security chief of President Nixon's re-election committee; Bernard L. Barker, a Miami real estate man; Eugenio R. Martinez, an employee of Barker's firm; Virilio R. Gonzalez, a Cuban-born locksmith and a Barker associate, and Frank Sturgis, another associate of Barker's.

Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, who released the indictment, said the grand jury action climaxed "one of the most intensive, objective and thorough investigations in many years, reaching out to cities all across the United

Corona Attorney Goes To Jail

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — The defense attorney for accused mass-murderer Juan V. Corona was sentenced to two days in jail for contempt of court Friday for allegedly trying to prejudice the jury.

A few hours later, the prosecution admitted it also ran the risk of contempt action by discussing the case outside the courtroom in violation of the trial judge's orders.

Attorney Richard E. Hawk was given the jail term and fined $200 by Superior Court Judge Richard Patton after an outburst over use by the defense of a psychologist for help in jury selection.

Hawk had told venireman Chris Lawson that the psychologist had come from Los Angeles free of charge because he believed Corona innocent of charges that he murdered 25 field hands and buried their bodies in graves along the Feather River near Yuba City.

The prosecution protested vigorously and Patton ordered lawyers from both sides to his chambers. Court sources confirmed the sentence against Hawk, who served 48 hours in jail for refusing to allow the defendant to give a handwriting sample in pretrial proceedings.

Selection of a jury has been marked throughout the week by sharp exchanges between attorneys on both sides, and warnings on behavior by the judge.

After the trial recessed for the day, the prosecution held a news conference to disclose that it had failed to link Corona with a 1970 assault it had hoped to use as an important part of its case.

Bart Williams, Sutter County assistant district attorney, admitted he faced possible contempt action for his disclosure.

He said he had decided to make the findings known "because it's the only chance we had to neutralize the issue and hopefully reinstate our credibility."

Williams said he fears that Hawk's repeated accusation that the state was "hiding evidence" has "hurt our credibility with the public."

Ships Which Collided Are Freed

CAPE HATTERAS, N. C. (UPI)—Two merchant ships jammed together by a collision at sea were freed late last night and headed to port for repairs today.

Risking the danger of sinking by more flooding and the possibility of fire, the Trans Hawaii safely yanked its bow free from the 30-foot gash it tore into the amidships engineroom of the vessel Republica de Colombia Thursday 12 miles off the coast.

"But the best we can tell, she's faring all right," said a Coast Guard spokesman of the badly-damaged Colombian vessel. "She's down a little bit at the stern but she was all the time."

Three of the ship's seven compartments were flooded during the collision which ruptured diesel tanks, spilling some 24,000 gallons of oil into the Atlantic and creating a slick six miles long and 100 yards wide.

The spokesman said the slick appeared to pose no danger to the North Carolina Outer Banks. A first-light survey put the slick 16 miles due east of the Cape Hatteras light.

"We're just watching it right now. We've sent the (cutter) Laurel to Morehead City to pick up oil booms—sausage looking things—to put around the oil slick to keep it from spreading," he said.

The Colombia, disabled in the crash, was taken into tow by the tug Cape Henry and was headed for Norfolk. The Trans Hawaii proceeded under its own power to Baltimore, its intended destination at the time of the collision.

When the two ships were pulled apart, there were no signs of the missing chief engineer aboard the Colombia, where four other crewmen were injured and hospitalized for third degree burns.

The Coast Guard said the man would still be listed as "missing" although he was feared dead.

Teacher Pay Talks In Recess

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Contract talks aimed at ending the teachers strike that has closed 200 schools in Philadelphia have recessed until Tuesday. Teacher disputes continue in other parts of Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Wisconsin.

In Las Vegas, Nev., school is scheduled to begin Monday, 11 days late, for 30,000 Clark County elementary students but leaders of a parents group opposed to compulsory busing said Friday they will stage a boycott of classes.

Conflicting court orders from state and federal judges in Las Vegas on the busing issue had kept the schools closed. The state Supreme Court on Thursday stepped in and upheld an earlier decision ordering busing to achieve racial integration.

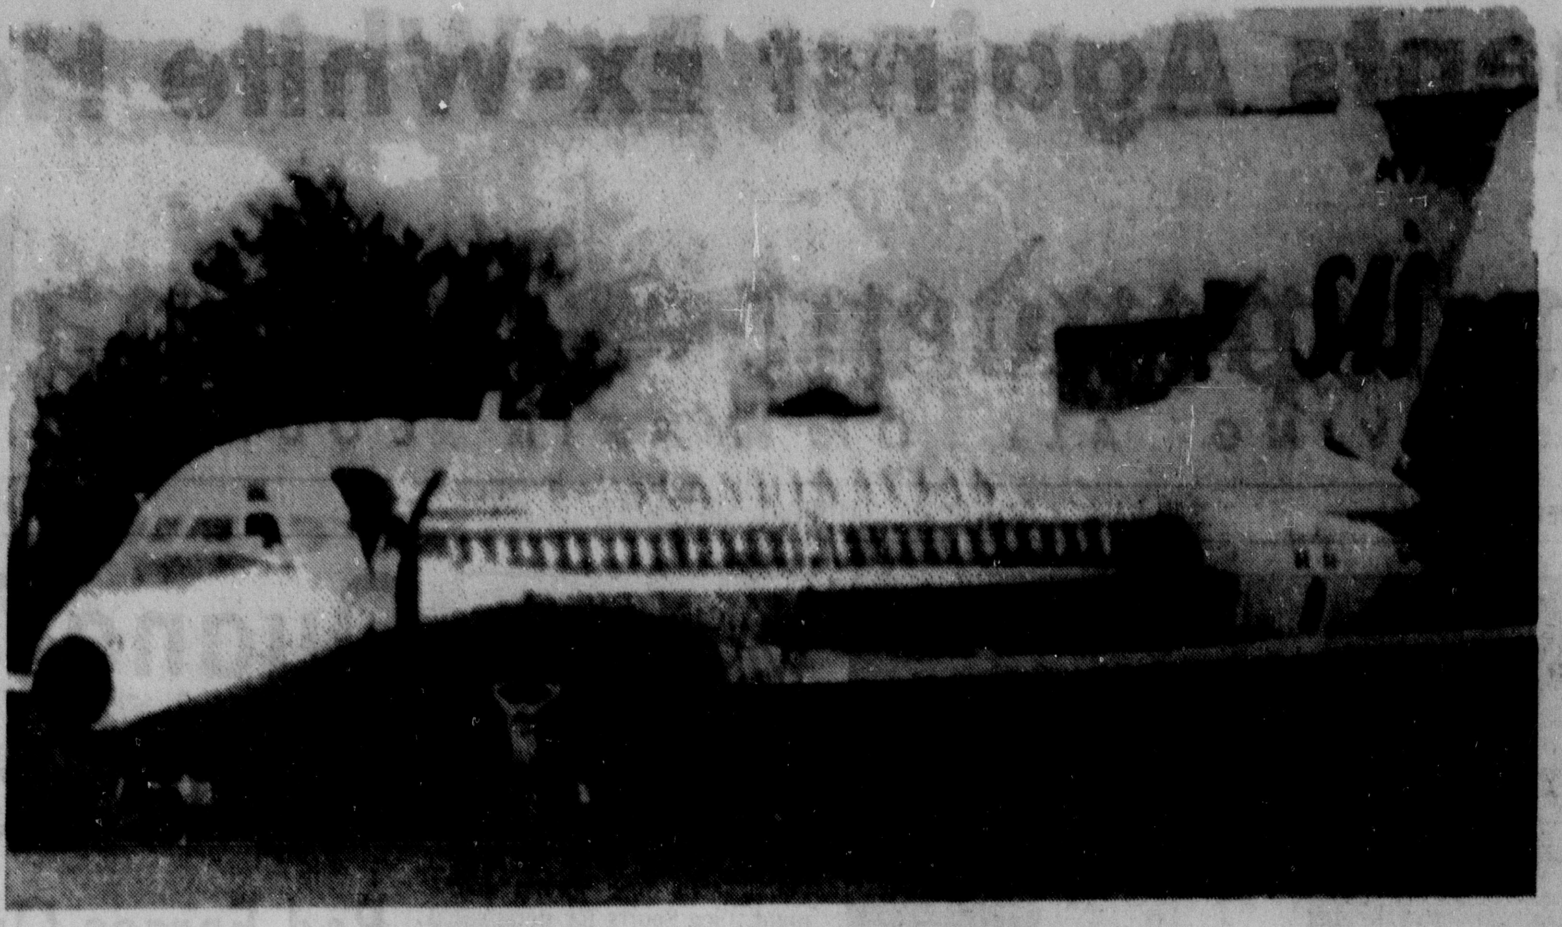
Philadelphia public school officials and representatives of the striking teachers union held a long bargaining session Friday and then adjourned until Tuesday. No progress was reported in ending the walkout by about 13,000 teachers that started Sept. 5 and has affected 285,000 students.

School Board President William Ross said the strike would last at least until October and not the three months predicted by John Ryan, negotiator for the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers.

In other teacher disputes:

Rhode Island: Strikes affecting 7,500 students in the school districts of Smithfield and Burrillville continued.

Massachusetts: Negotiators met with a mediator Friday in hopes of settling the strike by 500 teachers in Sommerville and "good progress" was reported. In Taunton, 300 teachers threatened a work slowdown if their dispute with schools is not settled by Monday.



RANSOM IS DELIVERED

Hands behind their heads, two Swedish policemen yesterday delivered $100,000 in ransom (in cases in front of their feet) to three Yugoslavs inside the hijacked Swedish jetliner in Malmo, Sweden. After securing the ransom and release of six of their countrymen in Swedish jails, the hijackers ordered the plane flown to Madrid, where it landed this morning. See story, page 1.

Massacre Lawyers Want Out

BONN (UPI)—Three West German lawyers appointed to represent three Palestinian guerrilla survivors of the Munich massacre said Friday they were trying to get out of defending the Arabs in court. It left legal proceedings against the guerrillas in doubt.

Gerhard Sieber, one of the three attorneys appointed by the Munich state court to defend the guerrillas, said he had asked to be relieved of his mandate for health reasons.

"I have been sick and I am incapable of defending the Arab," Sieber said.

Rolf Dahms and Werner Goetz, the other two lawyers, also voiced dissastifaction with the mandate.

They said they were seeking relief from the assignment "because of the emotional climate" surrounding the affair.

Under West German law, only West German lawyers can represent a defendant in court.

A justice ministry spokesman said that under certain circumstances a foreign attorney could participate in a trial only as "a guest of the court" if he were sponsored by a West German lawyer.

This, in turn, ruled out the possibility of Tunisian lawyer Mondher Ben Ammar defending the three Black September guerrillas, each now being held in a seperate and secret jail.

Ammar, whom Arab organizations had commissioned with the defense of the Palestinians, flew back to Tunis Friday after meeting officials of the Bavarian justice ministry in Munich and Dahms.

Dahms said, "I explained to him his rights under German law" but declined to give more details on his talks with the Tunisian.

In an apparent reference to the Munich shootout which claimed the lives of 11 Israeli Olympians, five Arab guerrillas and one West German policeman, Chancellor Willy Brandt demanded a crackdown on foreign guerrilla organizations operating inside West Germany.

Abrams: 'I Didn't Know About Illegal U.S. Raids'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Creighton W. Abrams swore to Senate investigators that he had no knowledge of U.S. bombing raids over North Vietnam that violated President Nixon's orders.

Nixon had ordered all bombing except for protective reaction to be halted during peace negotiations between November, 1971 and March, 1972.

In a transcript made public Friday by the Senate Armed Services Committee, Abrams said he did not know that Gen. John D. Lavelle, commander of the 7th Air Force in Southeast Asia, had supervised unauthorized raids. Abrams testified in secret before the committee on Wednesday.

In other testimony Friday, Col. Charles Gabriel said that false reports were written about the missions to make it appear they were conducted within the rules.

Gabriel confirmed accusations made by Sgt. Lonnie Franks in a letter to Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, that led to Lavelle's forced retirement and the delay of Abrams' nomination as Army chief of staff.

Abrams described an incident in January when the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) notified him as commander in Vietnam that a certain air attack on a ground radar installation in North Vietnam was illegal under Nixon's rules.

Abrams said he discussed the incident with Lavelle and came away convinced that Lavelle was abiding by the limitation, although disagreeing with it.

Lavelle has admitted conducting similar unauthorized raids — at least 28 of them, by the count of Pentagon investigators — both before and after the JCS incident. As punishment he has been allowed to retire, in lieu of being demoted.

Abrams, whose nomination as chief of staff is being considered by the committee, was closely questioned about whether he had any awareness whatsoever of the unauthorized air war Lavelle was conducting.

The testimony, which included questioning of Lavelle and members of some flight operational headquarters, generally bore out summaries of the hearing made public during the week.

Lavelle contended that while he did "stretch the rules" with the air attacks, he did so within what he thought was their intended limits and he believed Abrams was aware of his actions and interpretations. Lavelle also denied knowledge of some 75 false operation reports which according to testimony were circulated within his command.

Lavelle also testified he received permission once from Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to make an unauthorized air strike.

Lavelle said he got the permission during a discussion of increased activity by enemy MIG aircraft moving south. Hughes asked Lavelle to point out the area on a map. Then this followed:

Lavelle: "Right there, yes. We discussed the possibility, and I have to say discussed because I can't remember, of a protective reaction strike at Quang Lang....It was at this meeting that I told Adm. Moorer that that was Navy territory and we could not go up there without Navy permission and he told me 'don't worry about the Navy; I will get Navy permission.' And I said 'We'll go up there tomorrow.'"

Jews Working For State Can Have Holiday

OAKLAND (UPI) — Jews working for the state of California can take off Yom Kippur on Monday and may get paid for it.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Robert L. Bostick made the ruling Friday and said he will hear arguments Oct. 19 on whether Jewish employes are entitled to a paid holiday on Yom Kippur as Christians are on Good Friday.

Bostick granted a provisional writ on a petition by Miss Shelley Mandel, 23, a clerk-typist at the state department of Health in Berkeley.

Her class action petition said the state discriminated against Jews on the holiday question. She said her supervisors told her she could have the holiday with pay if she agreed to work overtime to make up the eight hours.

Bostick said that Miss Mandell must be paid for the holiday Monday, and if he eventually rules against her she'll have to pay back the money.

BERKELEY (UPI) — The University of California seismograph early today recorded an earthquake apparently in the vicinity of Central America which registered 5.8 on the Richter scale.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Prisoners Battle

STORMVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Two groups of convicts, some armed with broom handles, smashed wooden benches and battled each other in a dinner hour brawl yesterday at Green Haven state prison, authorities said.

Several inmates were injured in the disturbance, and seven were taken to Poughkeepsie hospitals for treatment. A spokesman said no corrections officers were hurt.

Guards fired tear gas to separate the 150 to 200 inmates, the spokesman said.

Newsmen were not allowed inside the main prison gate and were kept at the main entrance, about a quarter mile from the wall. By sunset, when officials said the convicts were being returned to their cells, searchlights could be seen lighting the wlls of the facility.

Greetings For Pat

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — Pat Nixon was greeted with cheers, antiwar chants, American flags and "Stop the Genocide" signs yesterday at Nixon-Agnew campaign headquarters.

A crowd of more than 600 persons raised "We love Pat" placards and pictures of President Nixon when she arrived in a limousine. But another group of about 50 Drew University students shouted, "Stop the war. Stop the bombing."

Mrs. Nixon accepted a bouquet of red roses and ignored the demonstrators. Then she firmly refused to follow officials guiding her along a red carpet leading to the closely guarded campaign headquarters. Instead, she moved to the right and shook hands with supports.

Vote Fraud

CHICAGO (UPI) — The U.S. attorney's office says a federal grand jury has returned 12 indictments charging more than a score of persons in connection with alleged vote fraud in Cook County.

Details of the suppressed indictments, which were returned yesterday, were to be released later today.

Several Cook County election officials were reportedly arrested by FBI agents following the indictments.

In Washington yesterday, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., asked the Justice Department to intervene in the Nov. 7 election in Chicago.

He said he wants FBI agents assigned "to selected polling places in Chicago" to guard against vote frauds.

Gay Marriage Out

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorney General Crawford Martin says homosexual marriages are permissable if the couple obtains a marriage license. The only problem, he says, is that under Texas statutes they can't obtain a license.

"At first blush, it might appear that the county clerk is authorized to issue a marriage license to persons of the same sex," Martin said in a ruling yesterday.

"But Texas lawmakers permeated the Family Code with terms 'husband,' 'wife' and 'marriage' and since the legislature must be presumed to know the definitions and usage of these words, it is eminently clear that under Texas law only two persons of the opposite sex may be granted a license to marry in Texas," he said.

Plunges To Death

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (UPI) — Hundreds of people watched in horror yesterday as a young man slipped slowly from the grasp of rescurers and plunged 120 feet to his death from the spire of Christchurch Cathedral.

Brian Herbert Sandford, 20, fell from the observation balcony on the spire in the heart of the city. Police said they believed he meant to commit suidice when he was spotted on the spire.

Police cars, fire engines and an ambulance sped to the scene. Two men, one an off-dty policeman, reached through the iron railings on the balcony and grabbed Sandford by the sleeves of his leather jacket.

The policeman tried to handcuff Sandford's wrist to the railing-but could not reach his arm.

NASA Revelation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has revealed that 15 astronauts involved in the Apollo program were paid $2,500 each for autographing postcards and blocks of stamps.

The space agency, in a letter to Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, chairman of the Senate Space Committee, said the astronauts received $5 for each of 500 signatures and placed on the postcards and stamps.

The money was paid by Horst Eiermann, who made friends with several astronauts while working at Cape Kennedy. He also was involved in a deal to sell 400 lightweight stamped envelopes placed aboard Apollo 15 shortly before it was launched to the moon July 26, 1971.

Deputy Testifies In Bomb Retrial

A Marin deputy sheriff again testified yesterday how he arrested Eddie Lee Griffin Jr. trying to make a homemade bomb into Marin City's almost completed public safety building in April.

The testimony came at the opening of Griffin's second trial.

The first trial of the 21-year-old San Franciscan began last week in Marin Superior Court, but was declared a mistrial when a juror suffered an asthma attack and was forbidden by her doctor from continuing.

Judge Henry J. Broderick had not selected alternate jurors because the trial was expected to be short.

Two alternate jurors were picked for the second trial, however.

Deputy Raymond T. Rhia reiterated for the new jury that he caught Griffin crawling through an unfinished vent in a door at the $110,000 building and, while arresting Griffin, found a bomb resting outside the door.

Rhia said Griffin was forced to carry the bomb to a eucalyptus grove where it exploded and burned. Only then did the deputy learn Griffin was armed with a pistol.

Griffin, reputedly a member of a black militant organization, is charged with burglary — in this case defined as attempting to enter a building with intent to commit a crime while armed.

Kissinger: Red Peace Plan Falls Short

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, just back from secret Vietnam talks in Paris, said today the Communists' latest peace proposal falls short of meeting U.S. demands against imposition of a Communist government in Saigon.

Kissinger met with reporters after he briefed President Nixon at the White House on his week-long mission to Europe and the Soviet Union.

While expressing reservations about the Viet Cong's most recent proposals for a political settlement, Kissinger reported a flurry of forthcoming negotiations in advance of a major new agreement on Soviet-American trade.

The President's chief foreign affairs advisers said three Soviet delegations would visit Washington next week to wrap up details of an accord on trade, shipping and settlement of Russia's World War II Lend Lease debt.

Kissinger refused to talk at length about his 17th secret meeting in Paris Friday with Le Duc Tho, a member of the North Vietnamese Politburo, and Xuan Thuy, chief of the North Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks.

But Kissinger said the latest Viet Cong proposal, advanced Monday, "leaves something to be desired. He said it does not meet the condition that no side would predominate in a coalition government.

The Viet Cong proposed a government of "national accord" recognizing, at least for a transitional period, two armies and government administrations in South Vietnam.

Kissinger, who returned late Friday from Paris, met with Nixon shortly after midnight and again this morning before he held a news conference.

3 Arrested For Sale Of Cocaine

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bail was set at $10,000 each yesterday for three men, including a vacationing lawyer from Washington, D.C., who were arrested in Sausalito on suspicion of selling a half-ounce of cocaine.

U.S. Magistrate Richard Goldsmith set the bail for attorney George E. Miller, 31, and two Sausalito men, Marco F. Madio, 29, of 241 Glen Drive, and Brian Neal Smith, 27, of 80 Cloudview Avenue.

Federal narcotics officers said Miller, also a Washington lobbyist for a Missouri firm, and the two others sold a half-ounce of cocaine for $300 after bargaining to sell seven pounds of the drug.

In a raid on the Madio home yesterday, authorities claimed to have seized an ounce of cocaine.

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Sept. 22.

Hit-Run Case To Higher Court

A 23-year-old San Rafael man charged with felony hit-and-run driving has been bound over to Marin Superior Court for trial.

Judge David R. Baty of municipal court ordered Eugene Milton Paine to appear Oct. 3 after Paine's attorney agreed there was enough evidence for a trial.

San Rafael police arrested Paine Aug. 14 after he allegedly fled the scene of an accident at Fourth and Second streets. Police said Paine's car ran through a red light and hit a vehicle driven by Jacklyn Askew, 20, of San Anselmo.

5 Hurt As Car Flips In Sonoma

Five young persons were injured today when their car hit an embankment and rolled over on a Southern Sonoma road.

The California Highway Patrol said the driver, Stephen Darling, 18, of San Francisco, lost control of the auto at about 2:30 a.m. while westbound on Lynch Road.

Darling was reported in good condition today at Hillcrest Hospital with chest pains.

Also reported in good condition at Hillcrest were his passengers: Ronald Harris, 16, of 404 South McDowell Boulevard, Petaluma, leg pains; Diane Troxell, 13, of 1719 Pauline Way, Petaluma, back pains, and Deborah Troxell, 15, same address, scalp lacerations.

Another passenger, Barry Moore, 16, of 520 Canal Street, San Rafael, was treated at Hillcrest.

Flood Barriers Due At Big Sur

SAN LUIS OBISPO (UPI)— California Division of Forestry officials have begun planning to head off flooding in the fire-scarred Big Sur State Park area.

A 16-man crew from the Los osos Ecology Center here has been assigned to build barriers in the park to prevent the flooding expected because of an Aug. 1 blaze which destroyed more than 4,000 acres of watershed.

'New' Rights Panel Names Chairman

The reconstituted Marin County Human Rights Commission has named Ernest J. Gray of Novato to serve as chairman for a year.

Gray, the only commissioner to survive a purge of the old commission earlier this year, won out in voting Thursday over June Weden of San Anselmo. Mrs. Weden was named vice-chairman.

Others on the new commission are Lily Whittle of Santa Venetia, Leland S. Bright of San Rafael, Edward W. Colthurst of Corte Madera, Rev. J. Barton Sarjeant of Sausalito and Joaquin P. Gallardo of San Rafael.

The meeting was the first held by the commission in four months. In May, the board of supervisors disbanded the previous commission of nine members and streamlined the body to seven members.

The commission, prior to being disbanded, had been criticized by supervisors for becoming involved in political matters.

In other matters, the new commission was told by executive Director Gerald J. Hood it would meet with supervisors Nov. 14 for a workshop session.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni appeared before the commission and promised a close working relationship with his board.

East Bay Cattle Rustler Sentenced

OAKLAND (UPI) — A 30-year-old carpenter was sentenced Friday to one to 10 years in prison in the first cattle rustling case in Alameda County in more than a decade.

Robert L. Sweeden was convicted after the prosecution contended he shot a calf on the Lazy L ranch and took it to his nearby home to be butchered in the kitchen.

High Court Judge Denies Storer Plea

I-J Special Report

GOOSE PRAIRIE, Wash. — U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas yesterday turned down an appeal that he order California election officials to put former Marin County supervisor Thomas T. Storer on the November congressional ballot.

Douglas said the state's election laws unconstitutionally barred nonpartisan candidates from the ballot, but he was too uncertain that four of his colleagues on the court would sustain his opinion, the American Civil Liberties Union reported.

The ACLU's chief counsel in San Francisco, Paul T. Halvonik, said the denial by Douglas killed any chance of Storer getting on the ballot in the Sixth Congressional District, which includes Marin and part of San Francisco. The legal issue, however, will be appealed to the Supreme Court, Halvonik said.

The U.S. District Court ruled Tuesday against Storer's challenge to the state laws that effectively make it impossible to qualify as an independent candidate.

The ACLU took Storer's appeal to Douglas's vacation cabin in the Cascade Mountains. Douglas considered the issue overnight before denying the appeal yesterday.

Novatan, 18, Arrested In Fight Over Girl Friend

An 18-year-old Novatan was arrested yesterday on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon on another 18-year-old in a quarrel over a girl friend, Novato police reported.

Patrick Raymond Christian Carre of 1304 Cambridge Street was released on $500 bail from Marin County Jail to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported that Benny Ray Cameron of 286 Sunset Parkway was southbound on South Novato Boulevard with his mother, Ann, as a passenger at 5:40 p.m. yesterday.

Carre and two companions followed them into Tresch Triangle, according to police. Carre stabbed Cameron in the left cheek just below the eye with a sharp instrument, according to police reports.

A youth with Carre was cited to juvenile authorities on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon because he offered Carre a screwdriver and tire iron, police reported. Police found the tire iron and screwdriver but could not find the weapon used in the assault.

The third passenger in the car was not held.

A Radio DZHP correspondent reported from the scene that 72 persons were confirmed dead in the incident in Naga City, 160 miles southeast of Manila.

Dozens of persons were pinned under the wreckage of the 18-foot wide bridge which was undergoing repairs, according to the PNS report.

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Republican program to register potential voters for President Nixon and make sure they go to the polls Nov. 7 begins in five California cities today.

BUGGING

States as well as into foreign countries."

The indictment did not mention any top Nixon campaign officials such as former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, who served as the President's campaign manager until July 1, or Maurice H. Stans, the former commerce secretary who now is Nixon's campaign finance chairman.

The Democrats, led by former National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, had accused Stans of conspiring to use $114,000 in GOP campaign contributions to finance the Watergate affair. Stans responded Thursday by filing a $5 million libel lawsuit against O'Brien.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, has determined that the funds in question were funneled through Nixon's re-election committee before being deposited in Barker's Miami bank account.

The Justice Department said the investigation of the break-in and bugging was completed. "We have absolutely no evidence that any others should be charged," press spokesman John W. Hushen said.

He added, however, that department investigators were still reviewing the GAO funds report.

All seven defendants were ordered to surrender Tuesday morning at U.S. District Court for setting of bond for Liddy and Hunt. Bonds will be unchanged for the other five suspects who already have posted it.

There appeared little chance of the men coming to trial before the Nov. 7 general election.

Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, told reporters he believes the indictment intensifies the affair as a campaign issue.

"The indictments point up the seriousness in the matter. What now needs to be pursued is how it was funded and whether there are violations as there seem to be," McGovern said.

O'Brien, who is now McGovern's campaign chief, said he was pleased with the indictments but urged the Justice Department to continue investigation of how the bugging operation was financed.

"The only way for this entire case of political espionage to be laid to rest is for Mr. Nixon to order the appointment of a special prosecutor who is not politically beholden to anyone," he said.

Republican officials, however, demanded an immediate apology from the Democrats.

"As we knew all along, and as the grand jury has now determined, there is no evidence to substantiate any of the wild and slanderous charges McGovern has been making about many high officials in the Nixon administration and campaign organization," said Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole. "Those Republicans so slandered and the American people at large are due an immediate apology from McGovern."

Sampiere, director of the comprehensive career education model research unit of Los Angeles Unified School District, and Paul Peters, chairman of the career education task force of the California State Department of Education. Protestants In Belfast March BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Thousands of militant Protestants, some wearing military uniforms and others bowler hats, marched through Belfast in a show of strength today. British troops stood by to prevent clashes with Roman Catholics.

At least 1,000 members of the Ulster Defense Assn. (UDA), a para-military organization, trooped through the capital of Northern Ireland under gray skies to rally in Grove Park in the Protestant northern section of the city.

Another 1,000 members of the Ulster Vanguard Movement marched to Woodsvale Park in the Protestant western district of the city for a rally there.

Support Sought For Transportation Act

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Citing financial difficulties facing many of the nation's major railroads, Southern Pacific President Benjamin F. Biaggini yesterday urged support of the Surface Transportation Act now before Congress.

"The most important fact in transportation today is that a number of railroads are weak and in trouble, and many of these are key segments of the national system around or beyond the Mississippi," Biaggini said.

His remarks were prepared for a speech before the Commonwealth Club of California here.

He said that while the transcontinental railorads serving California "are the nation's best," seven of the nation's railroads are in bankruptcy. The reasons for these problems, he added, include dated regulatory laws that now work against the industry and the necessity of competing against government financed transportation modes while railroads remain financed almost totally by private enterprise.

"Legislative action — soon — is essential," said "Biaggini. "The best of the various bills before the Congress in the Surface Transportation Act."

He said the act is backed by the rail, truck and waterway industries and would provide access to loans, prohibit tax discrimination against transportation and help equalize ground rules to promote fair competition among carriers.

"Only motivated management can really run either your business or a good railroad — not agency officials or union officers or anyone else," Biaggini said.

"Your support for the Surface Transportation Act would be a vote for less government interference in business generally."

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

When The Buyer Does Not Pay

It used to be that if you missed a payment or two on the refrigerator, you could expect a short, ugly visit from the store people. A couple of brawny characters knocked. If you didn't answer, they might even break the door down. Then brush you aside with a gruff, "Geddowduhway, Buster, we're pickin' up d'box."

The courts didn't think this was fair. First, they said, the seller had to give notice before he came after his property. Some years later, they added that the seller had to tell you he intends to re-sell the item. He has to tell you how much you must pay to redeem it.

That's because when you buy most things on time, you sign a "conditional sales contract." This says that while you get to take the TV home with you, the company owns it until you make the final payments and don't fall behind. Then, according to the conditional sales contract, they have a right to repossess it.

Now the courts have limited creditors still further. In a recent case, the U.S. Supreme Court looked at the laws of repossession. Mrs. Fry had bought a stove from the Burnie Stove Co. She signed a conditional sales agreement. She made her payments for a time. But when she paid over two thirds of the balance she got into a dispute over servicing the stove.

Burnie Stove went to the sheriff. It got permission to take back the stove. Then it went and took the stove from Mrs. Fry's home. The Supreme Court said this wouldn't do. Mrs. Fry had the right to a fair notice and the right to be heard. She should have some kind of impartial hearing before the company could pick up the stove. There need not be a full trial. What is needed is a hearing that will prevent unfair and mistaken taking of property.

California's retail installment sales law says the seller must make a choice if the buyer doesn't pay as promised. The seller may sue for the unpaid balance. Or he may take back the goods. He cannot take it back, sell it, and then sue for the difference between what he gets, and what the buyer still owes.

(Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

fight for Quang Tri, 404 miles north of Saigon.

In a letter to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the army's joint general staff, Thieu expressed his "warmest congratulations and boundless admiration" to the victorious marines.

Thieu had set Sept. 19 as the deadline for recapturing all lost territory, but South Vietnamese spokesmen were saying the deadline had been met and that other land was only temporarily lost.

U.S. Air Force and Navy warplanes flew 340 strikes over North Vietnam Friday, the heaviest number of raids in one day since Aug. 18, the U.S. command said. U.S. tactical bombers have flown 300 or more missions over the north every day this week.

Main target Friday was the mile-long Bac Giang railroad yard, a five-track complex 28 miles northeast of Hanoi, the command said. It was the second major rail complex wrecked this week along the vital northeast rail line between Hanoi and China.

Navy and Air Force pilots reported 90 per cent of the Bac Giang facility destroyed, including all five lines, all support and storage buildings and at least 19 box cars.

The aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk returned to another tour of duty on Yankee Station in the Gulf of Tonkin Friday, replacing the USS Hancock, which headed for port.

Thailand-based U.S. Air Force jets also attacked the Dong Hoi airfield 38 miles above the DMZ and bombed craters into the runway, 7th Air Force spokesmen said.

Big U.S. B52 bombers hit five times in the North Vietnamese panhandle Friday, all within 18 miles of Dong Hoi. There were 28 missions within South Vietnam — 14 against North Vietnamese troop concentrations in a southwest-to-north swath at times moving as close as a mile to Quang Tri.

Auto Theft Hearing Set For Marin Man

Graydon Lloyd Harr, 23, of San Rafael, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of auto theft. A preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 26.

Harr was arrested Sept. 5 by San Anselmo Police after a Novato man told them Harr was driving a pickup truck stolen from him Aug. 1. Harr was arrested on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

Stolen Property Hearing Is Set

A preliminary hearing for Timothy Mark O'Brien, 21, of San Rafael, on a felony count of concealing stolen property has been set for Oct. 3 in Marin Municipal Court.

O'Brien was arrested last month in Mill Valley after police thought his car looked like one reportedly involved in a burglary. In the car were two pistols stolen in a Sausalito burglary Aug. 3, police said.

O'Brien is also charged with carrying a concealed weapon, a misdemeanor.

Private service for Roland Hockett of Mill Valley has been held.

Hockett died at home Monday after a brief illness. He was 68.

He was a native of Richmond, Ind., and a resident of California for the past 14 years. He moved to Marin three years ago.

For more than 40 years, Hockett worked in the music business, most recently as a salesman at a Sherman Clay Music store in San Francisco.

He was an Army veteran of World War II.

Hockett is survived by his wife, Molly.

MRS. DOYLE

Private funeral for Sarah L. Doyle was held yesterday in San Rafael. Mrs. Doyle, who was 85, died Thursday in a local convalescent home.

A native of Virginia City, Nev., Mrs. Doyle had lived in California most of her life, and moved to San Rafael from San Francisco 15 years ago.

She was the widow of Edward T. Doyle, chief accountant for a title insurance firm in the East Bay.

Burial was at Holy Cross Cemetery, in Colma.

Memorial contributions to Nazareth House in San Rafael are preferred by the family.

MARY R. SCHMIT

Mary R. Schmit, 81, of 130 Villa Avenue, San Rafael, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness.

She was born in the Azores and came to this country 55 years ago. Mrs. Schmit worked in a laundry in San Rafael until she married her husband, the late Theodore Schmit, 46 years ago.

She is survived by two sisters, Mary T. Azevedo and Clementina Agular of San Rafael.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael. Recitation of the Rosary will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

Joint Study To Be Considered

The Petaluma City Council, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall, will consider launching a joint study with Marin Municipal Water District aimed at locating a site for a recreational lake to contain treated waste water.

The water district has asked the council to study possible locations for the facility. A long-range subregional sewage plan for the Marin-Southern Sonoma area calls for reclaiming waste water for irrigation purposes and a possible lake in Chileno Valley or in the Lakeville area south of Petaluma.

The council also will consider appointing a new member to the planning commission.

Judge May Stiffen Pot Jail Term

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A federal judge took under advisement yesterday a government petition to siffen the three-year prison sentences of two marijuana smugglers to five years each.

The defendants were Thomas P. Vallejo, 29, of Langhorne, Pa., and David Miller, 35, of Corte Madera.

They pleaded guilty to the March, 1971, plane shipment of a ton of marijuana valued at $3 million from Mexico to a small airport here. A government informant piloted the craft.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Miller told Federal Court Judge Charles Weiner the sentences he imposed on the defendants earlier this year were illegal. Miller said the law mandates a minimum term of five years in prison in narcotics smuggling cases.

Standford Shmukler, counsel for Vallejo, told the court its sentence was "appropriate" and represented "an exercise of leniency," which he said has been justified by his client's behavior at the Allenwood Prison Farm of the Lewisburg, Pa., federal penitentiary.

Shmukler contended the government wanted "its pound of flesh," which drew the following retort from Miller:

"The government wants one pound of flesh for the 2,000 pounds of marijuana."

Five men were tied in the case after Leonard Glassberg, 36, of Novato, pleaded guilty and testified against them. He received a two-year prison sentence.

Norman Keim, 35, Penndel, Pa., is awaiting retrial; Charles Cornet, 45, Las Vegas, won a directed verdict of acquittal, and Edson Whipple, 46, Duncan, Ariz., is awaiting sentencing.

Recognition Asked For Need Center

The Novato Citizens Advisory Committee on Human Needs has recommended that the city council formally recognize th Novato Human Needs Center as a community agency.

The committee proposed the move — designed to lift the status of the organization — after hearing a report on center status Thursday night, according to Annette Smail, volunteer coordinator for the center.

The center, operating in space at Novato United Methodist Church, 1473 South Novato Boulevard, "has demonstrated its capacity to fill many of the basic needs of a considerable number of Novatans, regardless of race or economic status," the committee resolution said.

It also has "provided a vehicle for Novato churches to coordinate their heretofore fragmented efforts to meet many tupes of crises in human needs as they arise," the resolution said.

Mrs. Smail said the center gave "direct and referral" service to 129 families in July, compared to 24 families in May when it opened.

The center is receiving growing support from churches and other groups in the form of food, money and volunteer help, Mrs. Smail said.

Tippy Makes It 400 Miles Home

CONCORD (UPI) — Tippy the tomcat is back home after what his owners say was a 400-mile walk.

The five-year-old cat disappeared while owner Nancy Kitchen, 16, was at Central Point, Ore., near the California border early in July.

Tippy showed up a week ago at Miss Kitchen's home here, about 400 miles from where he disappeared.

"I couldn't tell if it was Tippy, he was so dirty and his fur was so matted down," said Nancy's mother, Mrs. Mack Kitchen. "But I called him a few times and he followed me into the house."

CLASSROOM GUIDANCE — Teachers at the forthcoming workshop sponsored by the Independent-Journal will learn about more ways to motivate students with the daily newspaper, as this class of Hayward sixth-graders is doing. The youngsters are learning about percentages and decimals by reading the newspaper ads and stock market quotations.

Education Board May Appeal

The Marin County Board of Education at its Monday night meeting will consider Wednesday's ruling by Marin Superior Court Judge Henry J. Broderick that the board must pay the attorney's fee for a suit against it.

Ruling that the board acted arbitrarily and capriciously by withholding the names of candidates for a board vacancy, the judge ordered the board to pay Sausalito attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund $500 and court costs for the suit he filed asking the court to order the release of the names.

Asst. Supt. Robert E. Spain predicted yesterday that the board will appeal the judge's intended decision.

Board members, meeting at 8 p.m. at the county schools office, also will announce the names of two persons recommended for appointment next month to the Marin County Schools Personnel Commission.

USE OF NEWSPAPERS

Special Class For Teaching Teachers

The Independent-Journal and Sonoma State College will cosponsor a special course next month aimed at teaching elementary and secondary school teachers how to use newspapers as an educational aid.

Entitled "Motivating Students With Newspapers," the course will be given Oct. 6-7 and 13-14. Friday sessions will run 4 to 10 p.m., Saturday sessions from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., both at Vallecito Junior High School in Terra Linda.

The opening session will include a lecture by Dr. Walter McHugh of California State University, Hayward, on teaching children to read by using newspapers.

Following a dinner sponsored by the I-J, participants will tour the newspaper's plant at Fifth Avenue and B Street in San Rafael.

The tour will include a panel discussion on suburban newspaper operations by a panel of the newspaper's executives and editors.

Other topics to be discussed during subsequent meetings will include a description of the I-J's newly instituted current events filmstrip program; ways to use newspapers in teaching language arts, math, science, social studies and English, and a slide presentation of early political cartoons.

Participants in the course will produce a workbook for teachers on using newspapers as a teaching aid. It will be printed by the I-J.

The course will carry two semester credits.

More information is available from the Office of Instruction Services and Continuing Education, Sonoma State College, Rohnert Park.

Satellite Launch Delayed To Friday

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The launch of a satellite to explore the space environment halfway between Earth and the moon has been delayed one day, to next Friday, because of lagging flight preparations.

The satellite, an 860-pound Interplanetary Monitoring Platform (IMP), is scheduled to take off at 9:20 p.m. EDT Friday on a new model Delta rocket. It will soar into a distant orbit ranging from 127,000 to 155,000 miles high.

Carden Method To Be Described

Mae Carden, founder of the Carden Method of teaching, will speak in Canoles Hall of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael on Wednesday at 8 p.m., describing her system.

Miss Carden's teaching bases a complete curriculum through 10th grade on a phonetic approach to reading.

The method is used in Marin at Carden Marin, formerly Clairbourne Marin, which is now operating at the Presbyterian Church under direction of Laurene Jensen.

$556 Million To State In Sharing Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California will receive $556 million this year under a compromise federal revenue-sharing formula approved by House-Senate conferees, Sen. Alan Cranston's office said Friday.

About two thirds of the funds will go to cities and counties. The remainder will be allocated to state government.

(Although Cranston's office was able to provide an estimate for the state's share, no breakdown for Marin and Southern Sonoma counties and cities was available immediately.)

The compromise measure, which won final approval of the conferees Friday, would share about $30 billion in federal revenue with the states and local governments during the next five years.

A Cranston spokesman said the first 12-month payout is retroactive to last Jan. 1.

California's $556 million share during the first year represents a gain over the $510 million the state would have gotten under the Senate version of the measure but a drop from the $610 million in the House bill.

The Reagan administration has said it hopes to use state government's share to lighten the California income tax load.

Rallye Scheduled

The Marin Rallye Association will hold an automobile rallye tonight, with cars leaving Corte Madera Shopping Center between 6 and 9 o'clock. Participation is open to the public, and an entry fee of $3 per car will be charged.

Student Dip; Schools Ask Teacher Shuffle

Faced with an enrollment of 92 fewer children than projected for 1972-73, San Anselmo School District trustees have asked if four teachers they have hired could be employed on a temporary basis.

The reason, reported Supt. Frank R. Elliott, is an attempt to keep the new teachers' names off a lottery list if more teachers have to be dismissed in the spring.

Last spring, 10 teachers in the San Anselmo district were let go because of diminishing enrollments. The 10 were selected through lottery drawings.

Elliott said the four teachers — Jacqueline Byrne, kindergarten teacher at Isabel Cook; Lynda Dooley, second grade at Brookside; Eleanor Prentiss, language arts at Red Hill and Hidden Valley, and Ruth A. Smith, scond grade at Brookside — were hired as replacement teachers at Thursday's board meeting for staff on leave or for those who had left the district.

He said he will report on the legality of temporary hiring at the Sept. 28 board meeting.

District enrollment for this school year of 1,839 students represents a ratio of 1 teacher to 23.9 students, Elliott said. Later in the meeting, trustees approved a board policy of maintaining class size in a 1 to 25 ratio. Dissenting was Trustee Mary Helen Olive who, according to Elliott, believed the policy was too restrictive.

San Anselmo School District Board Also:

BUSING — Approved busing arrangements so that all kindergarten, first, second and most third graders would be bussed to school starting Sept. 25.

PERSONNEL — Hired Barbara Bell (language development and speech, Brookside, $8,144 annually), Margaret Bommarito (language development/speech, Isabel Cook and Yolansdale, $7,441 annually), Richard Babcock (teacher aide part-time Brookside, $321 monthly), Ann Barnecut (secretary Brookside, $505 monthly), and Bess Niemcewicz (receptionist district office, $472 monthly).

TEACHER AIDES — Employed 13 part-time teacher aides to work for two hours daily at $2.47 an hour under Title I funds.

RESIGNATIONS — Accepted the resignations of teachers Patricia Holland, Maria S. Koehane, Barry B. Connell and Marjorie Neville, and custodian Gerald L. Cruthers.

AGENDA — Adopted a policy that board meeting agenda items should be of sufficient detail that the public can obtain information from them, and instructed Elliott to revise distribution.

COMMENTS — Instructed Elliott to prepare three alternate policies on plaicng of agenda items by both trustees and the public, adding that the current requirement of a trustees' quorum approving placement of an item should be deleted.

MINIMUM DAYS — Approved board policy supporting minimum days for teacher planning, with scheduling not to exceed one day per week.

STUDENT — Held over to the Sept. 28 meeting a suggestion that a student representative sit on the board. A motion by Trustee John Hulpke that a seventh or eighth grade district student sit on the board failed.

PROJECT Approved a statement of intent to write a language development project for state Title III funds for Yolansdale and Wade Thomas schools in order to meet the state deadline.

TAX RATE — Deferred discussing the district's tax rate for 1972-73 to the Sept. 28 meeting.

SEW SIMPLE

Handling Sweater Knits —Some Dos And Don'ts

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

In answer to your many questions concerning sweater knits, I shall try to generalize some of the dos and don'ts of handling them. During the following weeks, I shall go into more specific techniques for these special knits. They are a whole new world of sewing and you'll need all the information you can get.

Please cut out and save these columns on handling of knits for your own future reference. I shall also welcome more questions from you. Believe me, when I tell you, I am learning right along with you.

Sweater knits are usually single knit fabrics, knit on one set of needles with a definite right and wrong side. They look and act like hand knits, stretching freely in both directions. These knits will need little or no ease in the patterns you use.

Check the fiber or yarns used and the care recommendations of the manufacturer. These knits are often a combination of fibers and they will take on the characteristics of the more predominant fiber. If the garment is to be washed, be sure you have taken the time to preshrink before cutting.

IF THE KNIT is still in a tube form, not cut on one side, refold the two folds and use the center of each side as the fold line. You may use the lengthwise rib as the true grainline.

Patterns must be clearly marked "for stretchable, unbonded knits only." This is not the same as using a pattern that is marked, "suitable for knits."

One very fine teacher recommends that you make a full pattern from the half pattern and cut on a single thickness if using stripes or plaid knits, which are hard to fold. Then you will be certain that the under layer is identical to the upper layer. Knits of this kind are much easier to cut single because of the bouncy quality of knit. Cut pieces of your pattern in one direction just as you would for napped fabrics.

Notches are important for marking center and other seam matching. Small clips that you might have used for woven fabrics will be lost in knits. Notches should extend past the cutting line, not into the seam allowance.

Use ball point or new sharp needles for your sewing machine. It is wise not to sew over pins because the needle will become blunt and cause the fibers to break or snag. If you are sewing on tricot or fine banlong, your only choice is a ball point needle. Use thread that has a "give" in it. I personally prefer a Swiss thread that is 100 per cent polyester. Be sure there is not too much pressure on the presser foot. Since all knits should be handled individually, it is best to test each one before proceeding.

Steam pressing is good for most fibers. However, you must use a very light touch when pressing. Some acrylic fibers stretch with steam and cannot be brought back to the original shape. Again, pre-test your fabric. A press cloth on the right side of knits will prevent shine.

You will notice that most knits create lint when stitching. For this reason, you must brush out your bobbin case often to prevent a build up of lint which will affect the stitching quality.

Remember, this is just the first of my articles on stitching with knits. Each week will go into more details. They are fun to wear and comparatively easy to sew, as long as you realize they are not woven fabric and need a whole new set of rules.

MRS. DUANE A. Kinney, San Antonio, Tex., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"Normally, I have found that one bobbin is not enough thread for making a garment. It is frustrating to have to stop in the middle and wind another bobbin. My hint is to take a few seconds more in the beginning and wind a second bobbin at least half full. Then you won't have to stop and re-thread your machine. I have also found it extremely helpful to always clip the threads at the end of the seams immediately after taking the necessary securing procedures. This eliminates the need to go back and look over the entire garment for dangling threads at completion."

DEAR EUNICE,

I enjoy using the fabric conversion chart I got from you. However, for the first time I am completely confused. My fabric is only 36-inches wide, so I bought extra fabric since the pattern only called for 54 inches. The pattern was cut with a dolman sleeve and there is no way it will fit on the fabric, because it simply isn't wide enough. Shouldn't the pattern company state on the envelope that it requires a certain width fabric? Mrs. L.O.R.

DEAR MRS. L.O.R.,

The fabric conversion chart is a great money saver in most instances. However, like everything else, it does have limitations. There are some designs that require wider fabric, such as the dolman sleeves and wide bias skirts. Probably, the fact that your pattern only suggested 54-inch fabric would have been your clue.

You can still work this pattern out if you don't object to a center front seam or closing, as well as one in the back. The problem is that the long sleeve cut without a seam at the armhole needs more width than a garment with a set-in sleeve.

When working with fabrics that are wider than the pattern suggests, you may find it worthile to place your pattern on a piece of paper the width of the fabric first. Then you will know exactly how much you will need. Fabrics that are wider than 54 inches often require as much as one length less to cut it out, this could be quite a saving. It is unfair to expect the fabric shops to guess the proper yardage when you have these extremes.

Set-in sleeves take perhaps more skill than any other operation in dressmaking. If you want professqonal looking sleeves, Eunice Farmer's illustrated booklet "All About Sleeves" tells you how to set-in sleeves successfully. For your copy send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

He 'Gave' A Little In Apology, So Maybe You Should Give Too

HELEN AND SUE:

Don and I have been going together for four months. We're both nearly 16. I can't single date yet, but he comes over almost every day. He isn't wild or anything.

A couple of days ago we went for a walk. Some of his friends drove by, stopped to talk, and offered him a beer.

I told Don before he accepted it that I wouldn't allow drinking at my house and I'd send him home, so he had a choice of staying with me the rest of the evening or drinking the beer.

He took the beer, and the guys drove off.

Later that evening he called me and apologized for drinking the beer but said I'd still have to call and ask him over before he'd return.

Should I? I think it's his place to ask if he can come see me, and my mother agrees. I told her the whole story. What do you two think? — MARY

MARY:

At first I agreed with your mother, but then I thought: look, Don "gave" a little by apologizing, so perhaps you should give some too. He might feel he's not wanted at your house (especiall if he thinks your parents heard the story).

Let him know there are no hard feelings, even if you DO have to dial his number. — SUE

DEAR M.:

Think back: You darn near forced Don to take that beer when you threatened, (in front of his friends) "I'll send you home if you do!" Had he turned it down, they'd have labeled him "Mary'sLittle Lamb" from here on out —with a ring in his nose yet.

He apologized for drinking. . .it's your turn now. When you ask him over, let him know you understand how a guy feels when his girl puts him on the spot. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I am a 12-yearold-girl who smokes. Some older people think this is really terrible, but they smoke so why not me?

I have at the most seven cigarettes a day and sometimes I don't have any. If I don't inhale, could I get lung cancer? And can I get cancer of the mouth from smoking? —S.Z.

DEAR S.:

First question: Adults think it's terrible to see a 12-year-old lighting up because they don't want you hooked, as they are — they know how hard it is to break the habit.

Second question: Chances for lung cancer are less if you don't inhale — BUT few people continue with cigarettes unless they inhale.

Third question: Your biggest worry isn't cancer (which may or may not develop after years of smoking). It's starting a habit you'll bitterly regret someday. Why don't you get smart? — HELEN

DEAR S.:

Ask yourself, "Why do I smoke?" And be honest. Do you really like cigarettes? Do you need them? Are you showing off to the kids? Are you "getting even" with your parents? Do they make you feel grown up? Help nervousness?

Then read the warning on the package, and ask one more question: "Are they really worth the risk?" Sugarless gum tastes better and isn't habit forming. — SUE

Faire Has Booths For Charities

Youth groups and senior citizens are among the organizations participating in the Renaissance Pleasure Faire with booths to benefit their charities.

The Senior Citizens of Marin County is offering a checking service near the entrance to the fair. Sixty senior citizens from throughout Marin County are working at the "Ye Keeper of the Goods" booth.

Girl Scout Troop 1482 of Novato is serving fair goers by taking care of children at the "Daffydowndillydell." The scouts built seesaws, swings, a sandbox and a small house that children can paint. While their parents stroll the fair the young children can also fill bean bags, draw with charcoal and play games.

A special favorite, according to troop president Doris Kirkwood is "Huckie Buckie down the Brae," a straw hill slide.

A carting service is run by Girl Scout Troop 427 of the Richardson Bay Association. Stationed around the fairgrounds with carts and wheelbarrows they will push or pull anything anywhere in the tradition of medieval carters.

The Methodist Youth Fellowship of Aldersgate Methodist Church in San Rafael is running a pitching game booth, "Thread the Needle" on the"Old Haggler's Way" in the Leather Market area of the fair. This is the group's third fair.

Members of Sunny Hills are selling grapes.

Members of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce are letting themselves be dunked in a huge barrel of water. Disguised as witches, monks and jesters they challenge fairgoers to throw baseballs at a target that will release them into the water.

League of Women Voters of Marin members are staffing the fair ticket office.

The fair, near Novato, is taking place weekends through Oct. 8.

The series subscriptions are available from the Marin Veterans Memorial Building box office.

MILL VALLEY ENTREPRENEURS — Three young businessmen embark upon a timeless enterprise in this scene which is one of fifty black-and-white photographs by Suki Hill, currently on view at Dominican College. Miss Hill's photos deal with lifestyles and terrain in Mill Valley and in Inisheer, Ireland.

ART REVIEW

Suki Hill Photos Show 2 Worlds

By ADA GARFINKEL

The photojournalism of Suki Hill, currently being shown at Dominican College, San Rafael, is a blend of beautiful photography and compassion for people and environment.

Fifty of the photos are on display in the college's San Marco Gallery, focused on two totally different worlds — that of Mill Valley, her home, and Inisheer, Ireland, where she visited.

The photographs of Mill Valley are of familiar places and faces. They depict varied life styles from straight to mellow, and there is a relaxed and pervasive ambiance of joy in the good life and lush, nature-endowed environment. The scenes are caught in close-ups as well as panoramic views, and in candid shots of neighbors, pets, mist, rising fog, and rain.

Inisheer, Ireland, is a small island off the coast of Galway. Miss Hill, a professional photographer only since 1965, notes that it comprises a small, homogeneous community (there are less than a hundred people) stopped in time. The inhabitants weave their own clothing, there is no electricity, the land is barren — not a single tree, no grass, no vegetation or hill appears in any scene. The people, too, are as withdrawn and somber as their land.

Houses are shown with thatched roofs and thick, solid walls in one close-up, and a patch of daffodils and an interior shot of a cup-laden cabinet are offered as well. So is the shot of a white, crowing rooster.

Low, snaking rock fences which go on and on, interesecting and criss-crossing, form interesting planes and patterns in two or three photos. They are not erected as property dividers, however, but purely for the purpose of clearing the land and there is no place to dispose of the rocks, according to Miss Hill.

Using a doorway of ruins at an ancient and abandoned church as her format, Miss Hill penetrates the site of a centuries-old graveyard to record gravestone markers in the forms of Celtic and Roman crosses, some with foliation.

Inisheer is three hours by ferry from Galway and can only be reached by going to Galway first. There, Miss Hill recorded the tall, double-decked buses which fill a narrow, paved street; an elaborately decorated pub; two elderly men drinking ale as they rested in a grocery store, their thoughts turned inwardly, and a universal scene of three small boys dressed in Sunday best and playing marbles on their knees.

The photographs are handsomely mounted and handsomely installed and quite appropriate to Miss Hill's thoughtful attention to meaningful moments in time.

The exhibit will continue through Oct. 12 and may be seen from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

Commodore John D. Scott raised the American flag at the Custom House in Monterey July 7, 1846, signaling the passing of California from Mexican rule.

Coast Guard Cutter Is Kept Busy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Coast Guard rescue crews were kept busy yesterday when a fishing vessel burned to the water line and a woman suffered a stroke in unrelated incidents.

Mrs. Marie Pitkin, Alameda, was listed in critical condition at Peninsula Hospital after she was flown there by helicopter from the 38-foot schooner Mars, 65 miles west of the Farallon Islands.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the woman apparently suffered a stroke and her husband, John Pitkin radioed from the schooner for assistance.

The Coast Guard cutter Point Chico assisted in the rescue just hours after racing to the aid of the 44-foot fishing vessel Poor Boy, which caught fire in the engine room and burned to the waterline, a spokesman said.

The Poor Boy's two-man crew was safely taken aboard the fishing vessel Wasp, then transferred to the Coast Guard cutter.

There were no injuries. The Coast Guard said the two fishermen would be returned "to the port of their choice" late today.

Investigationinto the incident was under way.

Construction Tools Stolen From Site

Thieves took $983 in construction equipment —including a 300-pound compressor and three saws — belonging to Mason and Mason Contractors of Saratoga from a construction site at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry, sheriff's deputies reported yesterday.

The theft took place Sept. 1 or 2, deputies said.

How One Tribe May Have Survived Aztec Conquest

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mexican ruins nearly 2,500 years old may hold the secret of the Tarascan Indians' successful defense of their territory against the powerful Aztecs, according to Columbia University anthropologist.

Shirley Gorenstein believes that study of the ruins in Guanajuato state, 90 miles northwest of Mexico City, will sustain her theory that the Tarascans defended their borders through a chain of outposts manned by people of other tribes.

The ruins, consisting principally of two pyramids, five other structures and more than 30 carved rock outcrops, were located this summer by Mrs. Gorenstein and a field party of six students. Study of old Spanish records and aerial photographs set the stage for the discovery.

Mrs. Gorenstein said Thursday that exploration of the ruins could explain how the Tarascans survived when nearly all other Mexican Indian tribes succumbed to Aztec conquest.

"We believe that our studies during the coming year will help confirm our initial hypothesis: that the Tarascans brilliantly chose strategic settlements of other Indians on their borders to defend against the Aztecs, pressing independent tribes into their service..." she said.

"There is no evidence that the Aztecs ever got into Tarascan territory. It appears that such outposts...held the line."

Burton For Marijuana Initiative

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Saying it is "time to face reality," a member of the legislature's Democratic leadership yesterday endorsed Prop. 19, which would legalize marijuana possession for private use in California.

"Proposition 19 simply provides that no person 18 years of age or older would be punished for possessing marijuana for personal use. In view of well substantiated evidence regarding its widespread social use, this seems only reasonable to me," Assemblyman John Burton said at a news conference.

Burton, a San Francisco Democrat, is chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee.

He made the endorsement "because the time has come to face reality regarding marijuana," Burton said.

Proposition 19 will be "doing well" if it collects 40 per cent of the vote Nov. 7, Burton said, but added, "I wouldn't be surprised if it passed."

Measures which would have eased marijuana possession penalties failed during this year's legislative session.

Marijuana possession is currently punishable as either a felony or misdemeanor upon first conviction, at the discretion of the judge.

Selling or possessing marijuana for purposes of sale would remain illegal if Proposition 19 is approved.

Nixon Names Trustees For Center

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon yesterday appointed six persons to the board of trustees of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts for terms expiring Sept. 1, 1982.

They are Abe Fortas of the District of Columbia, Catherine Dulin Folger of the District of Columbia, Alice S. Marriott of the District of Columbia, Gustave L. Levy of New York City, Benjamin A. Trustman of Brookline, Mass. and Bonita Granville Wrather of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Fortas, Mrs. Folger and Mrs. Marriott currently are serving on the board and are being reappointed.

Drakes Bay Ride Is Set At Point Reyes

The third annual Drakes Bay Endurance Ride covering 50 miles will be held next Saturday, 6 a.m., starting at Point Reyes National Seashore at 5 Brooks Stables.

This 100-horse event, supervised by veterinarians, is sanctioned by the American Endurance Ride Conference. Riders will be going through the coastal redwoods and on the Pacific Ocean beach.

New Prison Industry Plan Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A public interest law group yesterday proposed that California prisons go into competition with private industry by setting up manufacturing plants that employ inmates and pay the $1.75-an-hour minimum wage.

The project envisioned by the Public Interest Law Center would have manufacturing plants both inside and outside state prisons — and would put the profits from their operation into prison reform programs.

"All we're talking about," said Ray Bourhis, co-director of the non-profit center, "is giving inmates the skills to go out in the world after their terms are over and compete — so they don't have to go back to crime."

Bourhis said a six-month study by the center found that virtually all equipment used by prisoners is obsolete, that inmates are paid between 2 cents and 16 cents an hour for work, and that 85 per cent of their families are forced to go on welfare.

If inmates could work in a well-equipped plant and be paid the going minimum wage, he said, they could support their families while in prison and learn the skills for a job when they get out.

Bourhis told a news conference that he asked Assebmly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, to appoint a committee to study the proposal and do a feasibility study involving interested parties such as labor, industry and banks.

THE "OLD LADY"

who lived in a shoe had so many children she didn't know what to do until she saw our shoe in San Anselmo. The "Old Lady" remarked, "My, you have five or six or even seven bedrooms, and I can train all my children to be Olympic Champions in the huge heated & filtered swimming pool." — And after they're through, they won't catch cold because there are 2 fireplaces in this shoe. This is not an "Old Boot," by any means, and doesn't need a new heel or sole. If this shoe sounds good, then try it on.

It's beautiful, it's unique, it's one of a kind. It has a magnificent bay view and is also suitable for a family (has 3 bdrms., 3 baths), for a playboy (has an unbelievable large bar and den, looks like an English pub with view). A spiral staircase (a must see), 2 large redwood decks, one for each level. Everything is done in superb taste with extensive use of wood and cabinet work. The bath in master bdrm. is a work of art. HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Marijuana Smoker's Chances Of Lung Trouble Are Minimal

Several interesting letters on marijuana reached my desk. The following is from Illinois. "Will smoking marijuana have the same effect on the lungs as smoking tobacco? What about lung cancer?"

Prolonged marijuana use may cause bronchitis and emphysema in much the same way as does tobacco. To my knowledge, lung cancer has not been reported. The risk probably is minimal, but the possibility of developing bronchogenic carcinoma cannot be discounted among heavy users of marijuana.

Tests show that there is 40 per cent less tar in marijuana smoke than in tobacco smoke. But both tar residues cause cellular changes when applied to the skin of a mouse. Since the pot smoker gets less tar and usually smokes fewer cigarets, his chances of developing lung trouble are minimal.

A second letter hits a little below the belt. "When are doctors going to decide whether pot is harmful or harmless? What about hashish?"

WE MUST agree that far too little is known about the physical and mental effects of marijuana. This is understandable because the strength of the cannabis weed (marijuana) depends upon where it is grown, how much it is diluted or adulterated, how much is consumed, and for how long. It tends to lose some of its potency after standing. But despite this, serious side effects have been reported.

A NOVICE, FOR example, may become fearful and confused following his first experience with pot. Delusions are likely to occur only with high doses. Heavy or habitual use may also lead to apathy, loss of drive, and psychosis. But these side effects have been debated. The most consistent physical effects are red eyes and increase in the pulse rate.

THC (tetrahydrocannabinol) the active ingredient is found on the flowering tips of the upper leaves of the plant. Hashish is the brown resin that covers the upper leaves and flower clusters of the ripe plant. It is five to 10 times stronger than marijuana and contains the psychoactive substances.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

DILATING PUPILS FOR TEST

D. E. Writes: Why are the eyes dilated before being fitted with glasses?

REPLY

Because the eyes are able to overcome or compensate for visual deficiencies by adjusting the size of the pupils. When the pupils are dilated with eye drops, a more accurate test can be made. But these measures are not needed for ordinary refractions.

BLOOD WILL TELL

D. G. writes: How does infectious mononucleosis differ from leukemia?

REPLY

A few cases are indistinguishable during the early stages, but bone marrow and blood studies help establish the diagnosis. This is important, because leukemia is fatal whereas almost everyone survives mono.

TIC OF THE FACE

V.D. writes: Can a tic of the cheek be cured?

REPLY

Yes, provided the causative tensions can be decreased and it is possible to interrupt the habit pattern. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on habit tics.

HUSBAND IS SHRINKING

Mrs. M. K. writes: I'm three inches taller than my husband when he leaves for work at night. When he comes in the morning, he looks an inch or so shorter than when he left. I this sounds ridiculous, but is it possible?

REPLY

In other words, he leaves like a lion and comes home like a mouse. Your husband is tired after his stint at the plant and probably slumps a bit. How do you look to him?

Mexico To Guard Waters With Old Navy Vessels

By C. CONRAD MANLEY
The Christan Science Monitor
News Service

MEXICO CITY — Naval vessels that once defended American warships from enemy mines and air attacks will soon be employed to keep U.S. and other trawlers from fishing illegally in Mexican waters.

This country has just negotiated the purchase of 10 fleet minesweepers from the U.S. Navy for use as offshore patrol vessels on both the Gulf of Mexico and Pacific coasts of Mexico, with the possibility of purchasing 20 more at a later date. All of the craft will come from mothball fleets of the American Navy.

In addition, a second tank-landing ship delivered to Mexico in May is now being fitted out at the Acapulco naval base for service as an emergency relief vessel for use in the event of floods, hurricanes, and other disasters.

Another LST acquired earlier, the former USS Park County (renamed the Rio Panuco), was transferred to the Mexican Navy at San Diego last September and is now based at Veracruz.

The fleet minesweepers, 215-foot steel-hulled ships of the Auk class, were built for service during World War II and have been mothballed in the reserve fleet at San Diego. A Mexican Navy source said that nucleus crews of several hundred officers and men would be sent there soon for training with their ships pending delivery.

The recently acquired Mexican LST, formerly the USS Clearwater County, was accepted by Mexico's naval attache in Washington, Vice-Adm. Carlos Valenzuela Monroy, in a ceremony at the Seattle Navy Yard on May 30. The 335-foot tank-landing ship was turned over to the Mexican Navy by Rear Adm. Wesley L. McDonald, USN, commandant of the 13th Naval District.

Rechristened the Manzanillo and manned by 10 officers and 70 enlisted men, the second LST will join the Rio Panuco in providing security on both coasts for persons in areas threatened by high winds, floods, and other catastrophes. In a crisis, either ship can transport 2,000 to 3,000 refugees to places of safety.

During a Navy Day celebration at Veracruz in June, President Luis Echeverria witnessed a demonstration of an emergency rescue, including the use of two helicopters, of refugees "stranded" on an island off the coast in which the Rio Panuco and its crew simulated procedures to be followed in an actual emergency.

In June, 1971, two 2,100-ton World War II Fletcher-class destroyers, the Harrison and John Rodgers, were bought by the Mexican Navy and renamed Cuauhtemoc and Cuitlahuac after the last two Aztec leaders during the Spanish conquest of Mexico. Armed with 5-inch guns and 40 and 20-mm. cannons, they are the major vessels of the Mexican Navy.

The newly acquired 1,250-ton minesweepers, purchased for what was described as "a friendly price," will be used to control illegal fishing in Mexican waters within the 12-mile limit.

Authorities frequently denounce what they describe as "poaching" and "piracy" by U.S., Cuban, and Japanese trawlers and occasionally such vessels caught in Mexican waters have paid fines and forfeited their catches.

In the Gulf of Mexico, according to Jose Enrique Negroe, president of the National Chamber of the Fishing Industry, Mexico's losses to illegal fishing amount to more than $112 million a year.

Rehiring Of Angela Opposed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke yesterday said he opposes rehiring of Angela Davis to teach at UCLA because of "her use of the classroom to expound on her personal Communist ideologies."

In a statement issued by his office, Reinecke commented on a report that some members of the philosophy department at UCLA would like to offer Miss Davis her old job back.

The lieutenant governor is a member of the University of California Board of Regents which has decision-making power over whether to rehire her.

"I am still against rehiring Angela Davis for the same reasons I was earlier," Reinecke said. "Her use of the classroom to expound on her personal Communist ideologies was not compatible" with the duties of a teacher.

Man Held In Stomping Death

OAKLAND (UPI) — A man was in custody today as a suspect in the stomping death of a panhandler for 25 cents after police were told by his family that he robbed his own mother of $16, tied, gagged and beat her with a television antenna.

Charles McCoy, 27, was arrested on an assault with a deadly weapon charge involving his mother and in connection with the investigation of the murder of Samuel Edwards.

McCoy and Wayne Harris, 26, a transient, were arrested in a downtown hotel in connection with the murder of Edwards.

24 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1972 EDITORIAL PAGE

The Editor's Notebook

City's Downtown Important To County

IF SOMETHING drastic is not done soon, downtown San Rafael is in danger of becoming a depressed area.

One has only to look along Fourth Street to see some previously important and valuable store spaces standing vacant.

It has been 30 years since shopping centers emerged to challenge downtown business districts. Up to now, San Rafael has withstood the challenge. It has not done so without drastic action.

About two decades ago, the city prepared its first master plan for handling downtown traffic and parking. The plan seemed adequate on paper, but what has actually been accomplished falls short of the plan's ideal.

To appease certain property owners, the parking plan was juggled and gerrymandered. San Rafael's offstreet parking today is not arranged and located in the most efficient or ideal manner.

Establishment of one-way traffic was slow to come because of loud opposition from some businessmen. Even now, the long recommended addition of two more east-west one-way arteries is still snagged.

More than a decade ago, the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce pushed vigorously for a federally encouraged downtown redevelopment program. For awhile it appeared that might succeed. Unfortunately, it died.

Now the city government is trying to put together a downtown redevelopment program. Already, opposition is mounting; this time, from government agencies which fear their tax "take" may be limited in the deal.

WHAT HAPPENS if downtown San Rafael is not saved? What happens if it is lost?

It is easy to oversimplify and say that progressive merchants will one-by-one move to shopping centers and prosper. As their sales increase, so will sales tax income.

Presumably, most of the movement would be to Northgate and adjacent areas inside San Rafael city limits. The City of San Rafael's financial stability would not be threatened. The San Rafael city treasury could be no worse off, on the income side.

Some marginal businesses might disappear, but they contribute little to the economic health of the community, one might say simplistically.

It all seems so harmless that one wonders why we worry about redevelopment and San Rafael's future at all.

LET'S CONSIDER what happens to the downtown area after profitable business moves out.

Landlords need tenants. They must take whom they can get at whatever rent they can get. Rents go down. Landlords no longer can afford to maintain their properties properly. Decay sets in. The downward spiral gather momentum.

If you think this is all just theoretical, recall Salinas in the 1950s or take a look at the Haight-Ashbury which only a few years ago was a bright, clean area of rising property values.

As an area deteriorates, the cost of police and fire protection rises.

Health and welfare problems multiply and the major portion of the burden of solving these problems falls on county government.

What Marin County does NOT need is a transplant from Fillmore or the Haight-Ashbury to the main street of our county seat.

Trite and hackneyed it may be, but it is nonetheless true that if we do not move forward, we stand in danger of sliding backward.

RICHMOND, BERKELEY and Oakland are not exactly model cities. Each has its expanding depressed areas. But each has its downtown bright spots, thanks to redevelopment.

Without those bright spots to attract and hold profitable businesses — paying high rents to property owners, paying high taxes to city and county, and providing jobs for large numbers of residents — Richmond, Berkeley and Oakland would surely have drowned in a hopeless morass of economic and sociological problems.

Marin County does not need to increase its own health and welfare burden by allowing any part of itself to become a depressed area.

It is easy to find fault with San Rafael's presently pursued redevelopment program. It has its flaws. They are real. They are serious.

Compared to the alternative of lingering decline, the flaws in the projected redevelopment are minimal.

All of the county has a financial stake in the future of a threatened area. Downtown San Rafael cries for revitalization. Let's get on with it.

Hearing Deer

Deer don't say much. But in these dry grass and brittle twig times before Marin's fall rains, every animal that moves on the ground leaves a trail of noise. Even the usually quiet cat gives unintended warning to its prey as it crackles through the underbrush.

How, then, can one tell a deer from a cat, a raccoon, a skunk, an untagged dog or a brown towhee just by listening? The answer is that only the deer pauses now and then to snack at shrubs and trees, banging its teeth together with the loud pruning-sheers chomp of a browsing animal. When we hear that noise coming, we know we've got to run to save the roses and chrysanthemums.

Dog Pack Chases Deer In Sleepy Hollow

At seven o'clock this morning a mother and baby deer came tearing through my yard with six large dogs after them. This is in the hills of Sleepy Hollow. It is an upsetting sight to see six large dogs running in a pack. The police, sheriff and Humane Society don't seem to know what to do about it. I would never poison dogs but I would like to poison their owners.

San Rafael's Own Conservationists Campaign

We greatly appreciate your support in urging a "yes" vote on San Rafael's open space bond election next Tuesday. I do, however, feel there could be a misinterpretation of your editorial of Thursday (Conservation Groups Silent on Bond Issue).

While it is true that the major state and national conservation organizations have not participated in this campaign, it is definitely not true that there has been "little campaign in its behalf". Hundreds of San Rafael residents have worked long and hard in the short time since the city council set this election to organize and carry out a city-wide campaign aimed at passing the bond issue.

Homeowners associations in the city have taken the lead, and many other local organizations have lent support. Door to door canvassing, highly organized and supplied with educational materials, has been planned and carried out. The list of local groups and organizations who are supporting and contributing to the campaign is far too long to list in this letter. They represent, however, most of the "avowed spokesmen for preserving the environment" that you mention in your editorial.

This is the first time San Rafael residents have had a chance to do anything more than give lip service to our belief in open space. We think the response from the citizenry has been outstanding. We have every hope that it will result in a resounding "yes" vote next Tuesday.

Again, many thanks for your support. But please don't downgrade the campaign. A great many individuals and organizations have spent a lot of valuable time and effort to try to put across something we believe in. Maybe the "professional" conservation groups have not been too involved, but this is a San Rafael issue, and a great many San Rafael people are very involved.

JERRY RUSSOM
Co-chairman
San Rafael Open Space Comm.

(The editorial noted lack of campaigning by the established conservationist groups. We recognizethat the San Rafael Open Space Committee has been working hard for passage of the issue. — Editor.)

Too Many Quarterbacks Spoil The 'Living Color' Of Football

WASHINGTON — The football season has officially begun, and living rooms all over the nation friends are gathering to watch these exciting contests on TV.

There is a certain one-upmanship in football TV watching that has become part of the game.

If you are the host, it goes something like this?

BRADLEE COMES IN and sits down. "What's wrong with your color?"

"It looks fine to me," you say.

"You have too much green. The players all look sick." Bradlee goes over and adjusts the color knobs. "There," he says, "that's better."

Two minutes later Dalinsky arrives. "Why is the grass so red?" he asks.

"Because Bradlee said it was too green."

"How can grass be too green?" Dalinsky asks.

Bradlee replies, "The grass is too green when the players are too green."

"I'LL FIX IT," Dalinsky says. He gets up and twists a dial.

"It's fine now," you say, having missed the first seven plays.

Geyelin arrives and asks, "Do you still have that old TV?"

"It's not old," you protest. "I bought it two years ago."

"Where's your fine tuner?" Geyelin asks as he goes up to the set.

"It's the third button down."

GEYELIN TWISTS the fine tuner. The color comes in perfect, but he's lost the sound.

"Will you get the sound back?" Califano yells.

"If I get the sound back, everything will look yellow," Geyelin says.

"It wasn't yellow until you started fooling with it," you say. "Will you sit down so we can watch the game?"

Califano asks, "Do you have an aerial on the set?"

"Of course I've got an aerial on the set."

"Outdoors or indoors?"

"Outdoors, dammit. What kind of question is that?"

"You should be able to get Channel 7 better than that," Califano says. "Maybe there are leaves clogged in it."

"THERE ARE NO leaves clogged in it," you say angrily. "I had a perfect picture before you guys came in."

"Why don't we go to my house?" Dalinsky suggests. "I have no trouble getting Channel 7."

"I don't have any trouble either," you shout.

"Then why is Howard Cosell's face chartreuse?" Geyelin asks.

"His face is always chartreuse," you reply. "That's what makes him such a good sportscaster."

Bradlee gets up and starts fiddling with the dials. The picture goes to black and white.

Everyone starts yelling at once.

Geyelin gets up and pushes another dial. The vertical is now moving 60 frames a minute.

DALINSKY GETS UP, stops the verticle, but now the players are elongated and look 12 feet high.

"This sure is a crazy set," Caifano mutters as he tries to get the horizontal back.

"Everyone sit down," you scream. "The next person who touches the set leaves the house."

You get up and adjust the knobs exactly as they were before anyone arrived. It's a perfect picture. You sit back and suddenly you hear Frank Gifford's voice. "And that's the end of the exciting first half. Now stay tuned to a wonderful half-time show, right after this message."

Abortion Issue In Background Of Campaign For Presidency

NEW YORK — Beneath the churning surface of the presidential campaign is a sleeper unlikely to find a place in the campaign oratory of either party. Nevertheless, it is an issue that triggers strong emotions and intense partisanship.

The liberalization of laws permitting abortion at the option of the woman and the doctor is at stake. The focus of the dispute is here in New York state where a liberalized law has set a pattern for other states.

That law was repealed by the legislature after a lobbying spectacular at Albany which had seldom been seen even in that capital of high-powered lobbying. The attack was led by Roman Catholics and, to a lesser degree, by other religious groups. Legislators were threatened with certain defeat if they refused to vote for the repealer.

GOV. NELSON ROCKEFELLER promptly vetoed the repeal bill. In a forthright veto message he said: "I do not believe it right for one group to impose its vision of morality on an entire society. Neither is it just or practical to attempt to dictate the innermost personal beliefs and conduct of its citizens."

This drew a volley of criticism from the forces that had lobbied so intensively to put over the repealer. The prospect now is that the legislature, under the same pressures, will pass another repeal bill and the governor will once more exercise his veto. It puts his future in an interesting light.

Widespread reports have had Rockefeller coming to Washington in the second Nixon term as either secretary of state or defense. The governor insists these reports have no basis in fact. He would prefer to stay where he is — in the middle of his fourth term, believing his power base here gives him more leverage on national affairs than he would have in the scramble for place and position in Washington.

Moreover, the question of the state's abortion law is possibly a consideration. If Rockefeller were to resign as governor, he would be replaced by Lt. Gov. Malcolm Wilson. Wilson is a Catholic and a conservative, and he would almost surely sign a repeal bill.

IN THE BACKGROUND of the emotional issue of abortion is a monumental study that has particular relevance for Governor Rockefeller. At the request of President Nixon, John D. Rockefeller III, brother of the governor, headed a commission to survey "population and the American future." After a comprehensive study with a distinguished staff, a majority of the commission recommended the option of abortion between a woman and her physician as one means of population control. Present state laws restricting abortion should be liberalized "along the lines of the New York state statute," it said.

The Rockefeller Commission report faced squarely up to unrestricted population growth and its consequences, with stress on the quality of life rather than quantity. The average person will be markedly better off, the report stated, in terms of traditional economic values if population growth slows down than if it resumes the pace experienced in the recent past.

The report had scarcely been submitted last May when the President nullified the recommendation on abortion, saying "unrestricted abortion policies would demean human life." The following week, in tha course of wooing Catholic voters, he sent a letter to Cardinal Cooke in New York voicing support for efforts to repeal New York's liberalized law.

SINCE THIS HAPPENED, a Gallup poll has come out showing a marked change in public opinion. According to the poll 64 per cent, and even a majority of Roman Catholics, believe that the decision to have an abortion should be left solely to the woman and her doctor. Of the Catholics in the sample, 56 per cent responded in the affirmative on the right of choice by the woman and her physician. Shortly after the report was issued, the National Catholic Welfare Conference accused the commission of entering "an ideological valley of death."

Sen. George McGovern's critics on the right have accused him of taking a radical stand on abortion. His response is that he believes the issue should be left to the states, with no interference by the federal government. Submerged though it is in the heat of the campaign, the abortion issue is certain to be heard from again.

Kissinger May Have Role In Future Of Weapons Race

President Nixon's greatest political asset, Henry Kissinger, is traveling again. This time his mission is to Bonn and Moscow. (The last trip was to Paris, Saigon, and Tokyo). The fact of the trip keeps summitry in the air. Wherever Mr. Kissinger goes, top reporters are sure to follow —and write about Russians and Chinese instead of about taxes, the price of meat, and unemployment.

But the fact that Moscow is the main target does, usefully, call for a review of the state of American-Russian relations.

They could be better. They have been far worse at times in the past. Actually, they are about normal — for these times.

THERE ARE TWO important subjects pending for discussion and, if possible, reconciliation: the establishing of a new Russian relationship with Western Europe, and the second round of talks over nuclear weapons.

On the first point — Russia and Europe —the immediate question is whether Washington can keep the matter of mutual force reductions separate from a general conference on European security. The Russians want the general conference, and soon as possible, and are trying to avoid any separate or earlier discussion of mutual force withdrawals. Obviously, they hope that by avoiding the subject of forces, Washington will be pushed by domestic pressures to reduce its strength in Europe without Russia doing the same.

Washington argues that mutual force reduction is a long and complicated subject which should be put into a special conference of indefinite duration, rather like the SALT talks. The Americans want to avoid having it put into the general conference where they might find themselves outmaneuvered in a general rush to settle, at long last, Russia's relations with Western Europe.

ON THE SECOND point, SALT, the question now is how soon to get started on the second round. The place has been agreed. Instead of switching SALT II between Vienna and Helsinki, as in SALT I, it will all be done in Geneva.

But how soon?

The time can make quite a difference. Congress has under consideration now appropriations for beginning a whole series of new weapons of all varieties, including a "hard target" missile which, at least in theory, would make obsolete all existing land-based missiles and force the competition into air and sea — where the race costs even more money.

If SALT II could get under way at once, it is conceivable that the negotiators could get a lid on the race before the taxpayers of both Russia and the United States have to pay for still another, and very much more expensive, generaiton of new weapons. The cost just to get going on the new ones is around $10 billion a year. That kind of saving could help President Nixon get his budget back into balance.

But Mr. Nixon is inhibited here by political considerations. Any further limitation on weaponry is bound to be unpopular in the cities and states where the weapons would otherwise be built.

And any limitations are even more unpopular with the unions involved in the building. The best time for weapons limitation is always in the first year of a new term, never during an election campaign.

MR. KISSINGER CAN talk about such matters in Moscow, and presumably will. But these also are the routine subjects of routine diplomacy. Russia keeps its ablest ambassador in Washington, and Washington has a top professional diplomat in Moscow. Matters like this are best handled through regular channels rather than in the rush and glare of a Kissinger visitation.

Any Kissinger trip to anywhere always raises speculation about a possible early end to the Vietnam War. Undoubtedly the subject will come up in Moscow this time. But experts are in agreement that Hanoi shows not the slightest sign of interest right now in a negotiated settlement. It is Hanoi, not Moscow, which decides when the war will end. The war has been Vietnamized on the Hanoi side, if not yet on the Saigon side.

Neither Moscow nor Peking can influence Hanoi as much as Washington can influence Saigon — and that is limited.

A Look At Those Who Surround George McGovern

By GODFREY SPERLING JR.
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Frank Mankiewicz was not available. "He has his door shut and says he will shoot me if I bother him," his secretary told a reporter on the telephone. "He's up to his ears."

"Please pass a note under Frank's door," the reporter replied. "Ask him what relative of Buster Keaton used to play outfield for the St. Louis Cardinals."

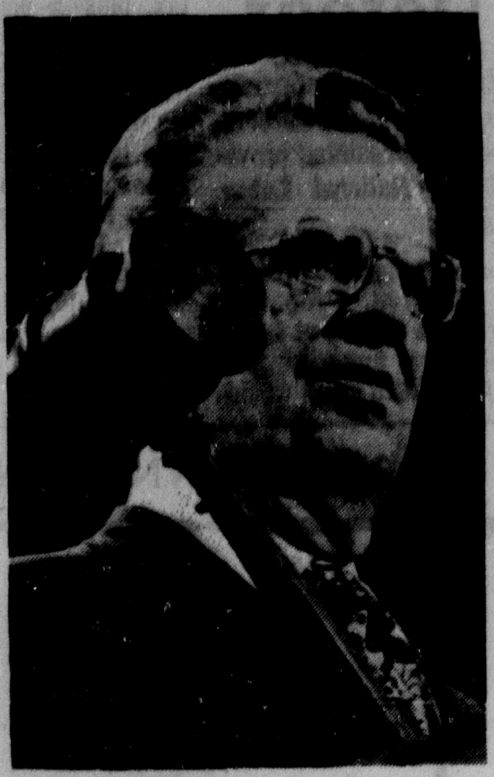
Within minutes Senator McGovern's national political director was calling back. Both he and Senator McGovern play this little game of "who played what on the St. Louis Cardinals." Usually Mr. Mankiewicz stumps the Senator; but this time, stumped himself, he was anxious to find out, as he did, that the answer was outfielder Ernie Orsatti. And then the reporter got the information he needed from Mr. Mankiewicz.

This kind of banter goes on continually in the McGovern camp with many other staff members as well. The lighter spirit is encouraged by Senator McGovern, who seems to believe that it is healthy to counter the adversity with a little laughter.

But adversity is thumping the Senator hard these days, not only in the polls — where his race appears to be doing quite poorly — but within this same outwardly fun-loving staff.

For beneath the facade is a staff in turmoil, one in which dissidents, including former Democratic National Committee Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, have criticized the McGovern organization openly.

The young man who doubtless has the ear of Senator McGovern more than many others is campaign manager Gary Hart.



LAWRENCE O'BRIEN
The Old Pro

Mr. Hart, in his early 30's, is often viewed — from those on the outside looking in — as a brilliant amateur who, more than anyone else, masterminded the highly successful McGovern primary campaign. Doubtless, Mr. Hart deserves much credit.

But another young man, Rick Stearns, put together the McGovern organizations in all the nonprimary states — and made them work. With Mr. Hart heading the state campaign efforts across the nation, there are those within the McGovern organization — as well as critics on the outside — who say Mr. Hart doesn't have the professional know-how or, for that matter, the authority, to "put it all together."

However, at this writing, Mr. Hart seems to have been given something of a vote of confidence by Senator McGovern.

In the wake of a threat by Mr. O'Brien that he would bolt the McGovern staff if the organization was not tightened up, Senator McGovern met with Mr. O'Brien and then announced that the two had worked out their differences.

He said that Mr. O'Brien, who had been acting principally as a liaison with Democratic leaders, would now have a "coordinating voice" in the McGovern campaign operation.

This, to observers, was a rather enigmatic explanation.

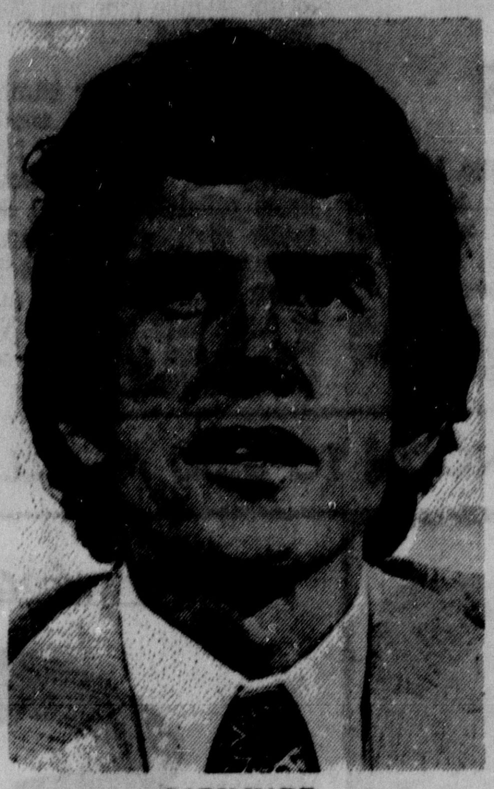
But Mr. Hart stays on with the nominal No. 1 title of "campaign manager." He continues to "handle the campaign operation," including fund raising, media expenditures, and voter registration.

What Mr. O'Brien does now is subject to what best can be termed a "shakedown trip." There is some appearance — although not confirmed by Mr. McGovern — that Mr. O'Brien has now become the overall adviser of the campaign.

This may mean that before long Mr. O'Brien as the "old pro" in the organization, will become, in fact, the staff leader under the candidate.

There are other "old pros" aboard but none whose experience would qualify them for the command position. One is Mr. Mankiewicz, best remembered for his impressive show of equanimity as he reported on TV the moment-by-moment condition of Robert Kennedy at the time of the assassination. From the press secretary job in 1968 Mr. Mankiewicz became a newspaper columnist and TV commentator. Then he moved in early as one of the first experienced political people to join with Senator McGovern. But this time, Mr. Mankiewicz is the chief campaign strategist with another ambiguous title, "National Political Director."

Mr. Mankiewicz really operates apart from the intrinsic campaign organization. He is Senator McGovern's "right-hand man," the one who talked to Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton and asked him about the "skeletons in the closet." Mr. Mankiewicz is always more privy to Senator McGovern's thinking on almost any subject than anyone else. He is a generalist. And more than that, like his famous father, film writer Herman Mankiewicz ("Citizen Kane" among many others), Mr. Mankiewicz is a wit and raconteur. He is a favorite among newsmen, with whom he always mingles on the campaign plane.



GARY HART
Campaign Manager

Another "old pro" is Ted Van Dyk, who runs Senator McGovern's issues and research division. Besides putting together position papers (about one a week these days), Mr. Van Dyk heads a staff of speech writers including Milt Gwirtzman, former Robert and Edward Kennedy speech writer (Gwirtzman wrote Sen. Kennedy's convention speech this year); John Bartlow Martin, author and ambassador to the Dominican Republic under President Kennedy; Sandy Berger, former speech writer for Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa; Robert Shrum, formerly a John Lindsay and Edmund Muskie speech writer; and Steven Schlesinger, a son of Arthur Schlesinger.

Mr. Van Dyk seeks to keep his hand on the "McGovern theme," trying to see to it that all those who speak for the candidate, including congressmen, say what the candidate himself is saying.

Another McGovern key aide with high professional standing is Richard Dougherty, former New York bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times. He, more than anyone else, must be given the credit for the lack of grumbling among newsmen.

Mr. Dougherty makes Senator McGovern accessible to the press, much more so than most candidates have been in past presidential years. Further, he sees to it that all staff, including himself, are available to talk to newsmen. And he does it all with grace and good humor.

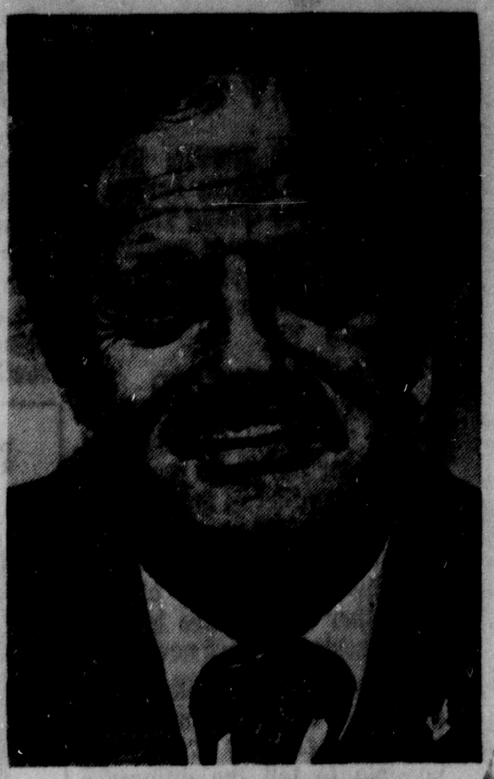
The man who feels Mr. McGovern's low ebb in the polls as much as anyone is Henry Kimelman, the Virgin Islands land developer and longtime friend of the Senator, who is in charge of collecting money for the campaign.

Under Mr. Kimelman is Morris Dees, who has performed magnificently in directing the direct-mail, fund-raising drive. The small bills flowing in as a result of the mail appeal provided the financial backbone for the preconvention campaign. And now a further direct-mail appeal (aided by Mr. McGovern's plea over TV) has brought in $2 million since the convention and during a period when the big contributors were holding back.

Miles Rubin is in charge of collecting the big amounts which means, at this stage, he has the difficult task of getting wealthy Democrats to invest heavily in what, as of now, looks like a losing cause.

Mrs. Jean Westwood, new Democratic National Committee chairman, is devoting most of her time to pulling the party together. Thus, as she seeks to bridge rifts and court defectors, Mrs. Westwood contributes importantly to the campaign effort. But she does not provide input into planning on any day-to-day basis.

John Holum, the Senator's legislative assistant, is the candidate's speech writer aboard the campaign plane. His expertise lies in the area of foreign policy and, particularly, military defense matters.



FRANK MANKIEWICZ
Wily And Tough

Former Robert Kennedy adviser Fred Dutton is another political strategist who sits close to Mr. McGovern these days. Mr. Dutton is also a "trouble-shooter," available to tackle any unexpected problem that crops up along the campaign trail.

Joe Duffey is executive director of Citizens for McGovern, a group which seeks to broaden the McGovern appeal among youths, blacks, minorities generally, and others. Pierre Salinger is co-director of this organization.

At campaign planning sessions, held at headquarters on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, representing the black and minority point of view is Ed Sylvester, himself a black.

New Choices And Possibilities Face Mediterranean Countries

By JOHN K. COOLEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

TRIPOLI, LIBYA — Early in 1805, an adventurous United States Army officer from Woodstock, Conn., named William Eaton, set out almost single-handed to change the balance of power on the southern shore of the Mediterranean.

For centuries the European seapowers had been battling the Barbary pirates based in North Africa who had been sinking ships, capturing cargoes, and enslaving their crews. For Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal this became one of the many pretexts to occupy and colonize parts of North Africa.

The Aemrican merchants of New England, too, had suffered at the hands of the Arab corsairs. After careful study of the situation as U.S. consul in Tunis, William Eaton persuaded U.S. President Jefferson to let him lead a motley expedition of 10 U.S. marines and a few Arab mercenaries, to seize power from the Tipoli pirates.

Mr. Eton's camel-borne force trekked westward from Alexandria, Egypt, through the torrid Libyan desert andcaptured Derna, Libya, in April, 1805, with support from the cannon of the U.S. Mediterranean Fleet.

Mr. Eaton never reached the shores of Tipoli because before he could the Pasha of Tripoli signed a treaty of eternal peace with the United States.

From then on, piracy declined and the European powers wrangled for colonial positions, with France winning the choicest ones in Algeria, Tunisia, and Morocco and the United States withdrawing from the scene.

Some 170 years after William Eaton's raid, and after two major wars and many minor ones fought over Mediterranean seaports, oil, travel routes, real estate, and power positions, new choices and new possibilities face the peoples on the Mediterranean's southern shore, the West and the newcomers to the region —the Soviets.

After the Arab defeat by Israel in 1967, the Soviet Union's growing new fleet and thousands of Soviet military men and technicians moved into the area, mainly Egypt, to aid the Arabs and to challenge the old supremacy of the West, which was expressed among other ways in the return of the United States Navy.

Under the watchful radar scanners of the 50-odd ships and hundreds of aircraft of the U.S. Sixth Fleet, and the navies of the other North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) powers, Russian missile cruisers, nuclear-powered submarines, and land-based naval aircraft became daily features of the Mediterranean scene.

But suddenly this summer, on Egyptian President Anwar al-Sadat's orders, nearly 20,000 Soviet military advisers, pilots, air-defense teams, and Soviet naval personnel quit Egypt. Their departure has opened new perspectives for Western planners, who want to inject more unity in the complex and sometimes contradictory Mediterranean strategies of the Western powers.

Many of the Mediterranean people themselves, however, see things in a different way. "For us," Mansour Rashid Kekhia, Foreign Minister of Col. Muammar al-Qaddafi's militantly nationalist Libyan regime in power since September, 1969, told me, "the situation is clear. Since 1969, we have been saying that the fleets of both superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, should sail home where they belong. The Mediterranean should be for Mediterranean people."

With certain nuances, the Libyan view is shared by Presidents Boumedienne of Algeria, Bourguiba of Tunisia, Tito of Yugoslavia, and Makarios of Cyprus. With the departure of the Soviets, and after agreeing to unite with Libya by September, 1973, Egypt may soon come round to this view too.

The Soviets' departure from Egyptian naval facilities, completed at the end of August, has led the Kremlin to make strong efforts to retain those it still has at Latakia and Tartus, Syria, and if possible to get more.

At the region's extreme western end, where King Hassan of Morocco has just escaped the second attempt within 13 months by mutinous officers to kill him, the King himself took a more cynical view of the Mediterranean's demilitarization.

He told the Beirut magazine Al-Hawadith, "This is only a dream and a waste of time." The U.S. and the Soviet Union are present "because they want to be here, and not because we allowed them to come in." Not even the combined forces of the Mediterranean states and Western Europe could get them out, he added.

What King Hassan omitted to say was that first, despite inter-NATO frictions, United States ships are in the Mediterranean and using shore facilities on its northern coasts and approaches, from Portugal eastward to Turkey, with Western Europe's consent. Second, King Hassan himself permits the U.S., whose naval air personnel train the Moroccan Air Force at Kenitra air base, to operate naval and other communications facilities quite important to the U.S. position in the Mediterranean.

Several other Western nations base their continuing positions of power in he western Mediterranean at least in part on the stability of the Moroccan monarchy, now seriously threatened. The former colonial powers, France and Spain, especially France, control major mining, banking, and manufacturing investments. Spain's southern desert colony of Spanish Sahara, claimed by Moroccan nationalists whom King Hassan has held back from militant action, has become a major world producer of phosphates, competing directly with Moroccan phosphates for markets.

Britain's continued possession of its beleaguered Gibraltar colony, claimed by Spain, depends to a large degree on stability in Morocco which furnished Gibraltar with labor and fresh food and water supplies. Together with Spain's Ceuta and Melilla on the Mediterranean coast and Rota near Cadiz, used by the U.S. Navy, Gibraltar still keeps a Western military watch on the Mediterranean's western entrance.

In April, 1961, a year before Algerians won their eight-year war for independence from Fance, a handful of French army generals and colonels tried unsuccessfully to overthrow French President Charles de Gaulle and block the Algerian independence he was slowly acquiescing in.

Their leader, Gen. Maurice Challe, tried at the moment of the putsch to play on NATO fears of being outflanked from the south.

"Do you," he asked ina broadcast beamed to France, 'swant Mers el-Kebir to become a Soviet base?" — implying this would certainly happen if Algeria won its freedom.

Today Mers el-Kebir, a kind of giant southern Gibraltar with anti-nuclear submarine pens and sheltered anchorage, is a purely Algerian base, out of Soviet reach. Though accepting major Russian military aid and training, President Boumedienne's government never permitted the kind of major Russian presence which President Sadat of Egypt put an end to in July, 1972.

Visits of Soviet warships and military aircraft to Algeria are rare. The Algiers government has been quietly but steadily reducing what Soviet military presence there has been.

Though it lacks formal diplomatic relations with Washington, broken during the 1967 Arab-Israel war, Algiers is expanding its trade, especially in sales of oil and natural gas, with the West. Ironically, its Soviet benefactor competes for its natural-gas markets: One of North Africa's big cutomers for gas, Italy, is increasing its imports from Russia at North Africa's expense.

Algiers also is exapnding its oil and natural-gas sales to the United States. Hundreds of American technicians now work in the Algerian oil and gas industries. If finally approved by the Federal Power Commission in Washington, a major deal between Algeria and El Paso Natural Gas Company will result in sale of huge quantities of liquefied Algerian gas to a power-hungry United States over the next 25 years.

Gun Control Pinned Down In Crossfire

By ROBERT P. HEY
The ChristianScience Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate-passed gun control bill is pinned down by potentially heavy crossfire in the House. As a result the proposal to ban the sale and manufacture of cheap new handguns may be doomed this year.

On one flank lie the traditional gun control opponents, largely conservative representatives from rural areas.

On the other flank is a surprising opponent — liberals who support tougher gun control. Quite a few of them privately think for a variety of reasons that the present proposal is so weak it would be better not to pass it, but to try to pass a stronger one next year. They admit, however, that their chances next year might be no better, and possibly worse, than this year.

It is not yet certain how many liberals who hold this private view finally will oppose the measure. But it is known that a number are considering such step. Such a public fracturing of the fragile gun control coalition would surely defeat the measure.

By themselves the conservatives in the past have been strong enough to defeat most gun control legislation, and they could be that strong again this time. They might be able to bury this year's proposal in the conservative-dominated House Rules Committee, which must formally send most bills to the floor of the House.

There are two ways of circumventing this committee but both are considered impractical in this case. One would require a majority of the members of the House to approve a discharge petition, but that would consume too much time. The second would require passage of the bill by a two-thirds majority in the House; it is not believed to have anywhere near that much support.

Behind The News

Natural Gas Supply Starting To Dwindle

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Owing to a growing natural-gas supply pinch, gas utilities in a number of Eastern and Midwestern states are reluctantly curtailing fuel service to new homes and apartments.

In Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, Ohio, and several other states, gas distributors supplying the heating needs of more than 5 million homes are refusing to take on additional residential customers.

In Ohio, for example, the Columbia Gas Company, which serves two-thirds of the state's 88 counties, will cease providing new gas hookups to builders and developers after Oct. 31. Some months ago New York's Public Service Commission ruled that gas suppliers could continue to connect lines to one-and-two family homes, but had to stop seeking new business from multifamily units, as well as industrial and commercial customers.

"There's a real crunch on," says William J. Miners, vice-president of New Jersey Natural Gas Company, one distributor that has already felt the supply pinch acutely. Since July, 1970, the utility hasn't taken on any new business from shopping centers, factories, or warehouses.

When pipeline operators forecast further cutbacks in gas deliveries from wells in Texas and Louisiana last year, the central Jersey utility stopped making new residential connections. Despite climbing demand for the clean-burning fuel, the company this summer asked its 250,000 customers not to install new gas appliances such as stoves or driers, unless it was to replace similar wornout units.

"A lot of people would like to convert to gas heat, but we have to turn them down," laments Mr. Miners.

These curtailments, which are expected to become more and more widespread in coming months, don't directly affect the nation's existing 37 million residential users. But the shortage of available supplies, utility spokesmen say, has forced the industry to take steps to protect its current customer base by not overloading distribution systems with new outlets.

In most parts of the nation, utilities have followed a policy of curtailing lower-priority commercial and industrial use when supplies are inadequate to serve all customers. The Federal Power Commission has also asserted its authority to allocate natural gas flowing through interstate lines in favor of homeowners during periods of shortage.

In the past few years, the emerging gas supply squeeze has mainly affected industrial and commercial users in the East and Midwest. Many hold "interruptible" service contracts, which provide for supply cutbacks when residential demand is heavy in winter months.

Unless this coming winter is a mild one, gas officials warn that many more factories face reduced allocations in an effort to conserve fuel for home heating and cooking purposes.

The threat of cutbacks in residential gas supplies has aroused the concern of the home-building industry. Since gas heating is often less costly than alternative fuels, builders are anxious to avert reductions of service to new construction.

In a number of cases, builders have had to abandon plans to use gas heating in new projects. Levitt & Sons, one of the nation's largest home builders, said it recently redesigned several hundred homes in Maryland and New Jersey for electric or oil heat after local gas distributors were unable to guarantee the availability of gas supplies.

Normally Levitt installs gas-fired water and space heating equipment into 95 per cent of its homes. Unless the supply situation improves, predicts Robert Hoppe, a Levitt engineer, "there will be a swing away from gas heating."

In a typical single-family home, a shift to oil or electric heating boosts initial equipment costs anywhere from $200 to $500, according to Mr. Hoppe. And in the case of electric heating, heavier insulation materials must be used, and monthly heating bills tend to be higher.

THIS WEEK In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The United States, using its veto right for the second time in U.N. history, blocked a Security Council resolution this week calling for an immediate halt to all military operations in the Mideast.

The council was called into session Sunday by Syria and Lebanon to discuss Israeli air raids.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said the resolution was vetoed because the resolution did not mention the Arab terrorism that led to the Israeli attacks.

West Germany announced it would pay about $1 million to relatives of the 11 Israeli athletes killed by Arabs at the Munich Olympics.

Around the World; Around the Clock

BRUSSELS—A clerk at the Israeli embassy was shot and wounded after going to a cafe where he was told he would be given information on plans for a terrorist attack.

WASHINGTON—The united States announced the sale of 20 million bushels of wheat to China—the first major farm sale to China by the United States since the Communist takeover in 1949.

MOSCOW—Henry A. Kissinger adviser to President Nixon, met with Soviet officials to discuss trade. The White House said it expected a new trade agreement with the Soviet Union to be signed in the near future.

TEL AVIV—Israel ruled that MeyerLansky, a reputed underworld figure in the United States, could not receive Israeli citizenship.

WASHINGTON—Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, who has been nominated to be Army chief of staff, was summoned by a Senate hearing looking into unauthorized bombing raids covered up by Lt. Gen. Paul D. Lavelle. Sen. John C. Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, reported a conflict between Abrams' testimony and Lavelle's. But Abrams' nomination was expected to be approved.

Flight Over Quang Tri—Graves, Craters, Ghosts

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Tracy Wood of the Saigon bureau of UPI flew over Quang Tri Province in a helicopter yesterday. This is her dispatch on that most wartorn province in South Vietnam.)

By TRACY WOOD

HAI LANG, Vietnam (UPI)—Quang Tri Province is the battlefield for the single most devastating conflict of the Vietnam War—a scene of destruction not equaled during the 1968 Tet offensive when much of Hue and other cities were leveled. Only ghosts live here now.

I flew over this hellish landscape in a helicopter Friday and from the air it was not possible to tell the difference between the thousands of round mounds of earth used for graves in the low-lying country and the thousands of circular craters blasted by the fighter-bombers.

Below, tanks, trucks and soldiers in camouflage fatigues churned through acres and acres of Quang Tri's rice paddies. Many acres simply were abandoned by the 250,000 refugees who fled south when North Vietnamese troops launched the spring offensive across the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

From a helicopter, eastern Quang Tri Province resembles a desolate swamp. The deserted, water-filled paddies are crisscrossed by dikes and red dirt roads, made nearly impassable by typhoon rains. The promising rice crop has gone to seed.

Highway 1, a ribbon of black asphalt about 12 miles inland from the South China sea, marks the front line in many places between the North and South Vietnamese armies.

Far to the west, the dark green hills are partially hidden by mist. The greens become more vivid moving east across the paddies which end abruptly in the white sand dunes along the coast.

Some North Vietnamese troops still are entrenched in bunkers in the dunes but the South Vietnamese control the lowlands from the coast to the highway and an area north to Quang Tri city, about 18 miles south of the DMZ.

East of the highway, the only signs of human life are the long truck convoys ferrying hundreds of South Vietnamese soldiers to the intense fighting in Quang Tri City, only a few miles below the DMZ.

Hai Lang where I am writing this dispatch is just off Highway 1 and about five miles south of Quang Tri City. It once was a prosperous village with many two-story stucco houses. All that remains of the town is its location on a map and piles of rubble.

A few soldiers sit in the shade cast by mounds of pastel blue and yellow stucco bricks. Another shaded area temporarily shelters the bodies of dead soldiers before they are removed to Hue, 27 miles to the south.

No civilians are supposed to stay in Quang Tri province but a few walk back from the refugee camps to try to salvage possessions from wrecked homes or visit the graves of relatives.

Occasionally, civilians — women, children and old men—still escape from the Communists north of Quang Tri City.

Barefoot, wearing only cotton pajamas and the conical white straw hats, they follow Highway 1 south to the safety of refugee camps.

Last week one column of about 20 civilians was trudging south when North Vietnamese soldiers west of the highway launched a heavy attack on government troops across the road. The civilians, caught in the middle, dived for cover.

"They'll be all right," an American adviser said. "They know how to survive."

Before the North Vietnamese captured Quang Tri May 1, more than 300,000 civilians lived on the farms and villages of the 40-mile-wide and 35-mile-long province.

The huge refugee camps at Da Nang, 85 miles south of Quang Tri, now shelter 250,000 Quang Tri civilians. Government officials estimate 60,000 more civilians still are in Quang Tri province behind North Vietnamese lines, another 2,000 were taken to North Vietnam and 2,000 more were killed in fighting.

Norwegian Price Freeze Imposed

OSLO (UPI)—Prime Minister Trygve Bratteli's Social Democratic government yesterday imposed a complete freeze on prices in Norway for an undetermined period.

The government said prices will be held at the level of Sept. 7. The government said it will also investigate the possibility of reducing the 20 per cent value added tax on certain food stuff.

The move came one week after the powerful Norwegian Trade Union Confederation urged Bratteli to halt galloping prices.

State CofC Urges Tax Measure Defeat

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Chamber of Commerce today urged voters to approve the controversial agricultural labor relations initiative on the Nov. 7 ballot and defeat the Watson property tax limitation measure.

In making its recommendations on all 22 ballot measures, the chamber said Prop. 22, the agricultural labor measure, would extend to farm workers the collective bargaining provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

The chamber said the property tax initiative, Prop. 14, would create a deficit of more than $1 billion annually and "the major shift in taxes would be from the large landowner to the small taxpayer."

"The average taxpayer would pay a 40 per cent higher sales tax, plus 25 per cent more on liquor and 100 per cent more on tobacco if the amendment is adopted," it said.

The chamber urged a "no" vote on Prop. 19, which would permit the private use of marijuana by persons 18 years and older. It said the effects of marijuana use are "unpredictable" and liberalization of laws governing marijuana "would be the green light for even more drug abuse ... "

The chamber urged approval of Prop. 17, the measure designed to restore the death penalty in California. It said the death penalty is "an effective deterrent to some would-be killers."

But it declared its opposition to Prop. 20, an initiative which would tighten controls on development along California's coastline. The chamber said the measure does not provide compensation to property owners for the "immediate decrease in property values" which would occur if Prop. 20 is passed.

Giants' Defense The Key

In the kind of football game that leaves fans with gray hairs and badly-bitten fingernails, Redwood High School held off a last-instant charge by host Antioch last night and came away with a 7-6 victory.

Frank Giorgi and Pete Massoletti led a defensive charge that stopped Antioch's Jim Woodward short of a two-point conversion with 30 seconds left in the game. Woodward attempted to sweep the left side of Redwood's defensive line.

Antioch scored with 30 seconds left to earn the right to try for two points, as Woodward ran three yards on fourth down.

Redwood's touchdown came on a 28-yard pass interception return by Mike Connor in the first quarter, and Don Nelson kicked what proved to be the winning conversion.

"We were really pleased with the work of John Troppmann at quarterback," said Giants' coach Phil Roark. Troppmann, a junior, completed nine of 16 passes for 186 yards and directed a ground game that rolled up an additional 193.

Redwood spent the entire evening threatening Antioch's goal, but fumbled twice in the end zone and had the ball stolen once at the four yard line.

Troppmann opened the game with a 63-yard completion to Matt Gondak, and at one point connected on six straight passes.

Katsumi Johnson led Redwood's receivers with four catches for 75 yards. Connor spearheaded the rushing attack with 58 yards in 13 carries.

Roark felt beforehand that the game was a critical one for his team. "They (Antioch) are very physical, and this is an important game for us, especially for an opener." Redwood expects to contend for the Marin County Athletic League championship this year.

Terra Linda Is Surprised By Concord

By TOM THOMPSON

Disappointment was the word last night for Terra Linda as the Concord High Minutemen upset the host Trojans 22-7, in the preseason opener for both teams at San Rafael High.

"Maybe we took Concord too lightly," explained Trojan Assistant coach Hank Yamagata. "I don't know whether it was the players' or the coaches' fault."

Perhaps Minutemen Rick Wolf and Gerral Reavis were the men the Trojans took too lightly. The quarterback and end, respectively, combined for two of the Concord scores and consistently ripped through the vaunted Trojan defense.

Wolf and Reavis put their winning combination together with about 5:15 left in the third quarter. After a series of fumbles, when possession of the ball changed four times, the

Mustang Air Game Is Sharp

San Marin High School began its campaign to forget last year with an unforgettable performance last night, revving up an aerial game and bombarding host Healdsburg High with it, 30-0.

Quarterback Hoza Wright threw for two touchdowns and ran for another, and his replacement, Mark Moore, rifled another scoring pass to laad the Mustangs' victory.

"I expected to win, but not by this big a margin," said Mustang head coach Bob Martin, whose team went 1-8 last year and won its lone game by four points. "It's been a long time since we've won one like this."

Wright scapered 37 yards for the first touchdown, and later in the first quarter tossed 23 yards to sophomore wingback Wayne Roach, "who made a circus catch," Martin said. "He made some fantastic catches during the game."

In the second quarter, Wright hit Kevin Keller, who bulled his way into the end zone on a 15-yard play.

Moore took over at quarterback at the start of the third period, and immediately directed the team the length of the field, hitting Greg Pater for 17 yards and the score. The final TD, also in the third quarter, came on a 43-yard pass interception return by Terry Kom.

"Roger Brewster (linebacker) and Steve Fowler (middle guard) were outstanding on defense," said Martin. "Dave Azevedo (running back) had some outstanding hits, and Pater made one circus catch deep in addition to his touchdown.

"Hoza was outstanding, and I was really pleased with Moore, who's a junior. He called his own plays and did quite well."

DeMont Case Gets Support

DENVER (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC) acted irresponsibly in stripping U.S. swimmer Rick DeMont of a gold medal because he took a drug for his asthmatic condition before competition, the head of the nation's largest asthma clinic said Friday.

"What the IOC has cone," said Dr. Dudley I. Solomon, "is to deny the hope of ultimate accomplishment to every handicapped person who strives to overcome his problem."

He said DeMont's medal should be returned to the swimmer.

Solomon, executive director of the Children's Asthma Research Institute and Hospital, said DeMont had made no secret he was taking the drug Ephedrine before competing in the 400-meter freestyle trials in Munich.

DeMont, 16, of Terra Linda, was stripped of his gold medal in the 400-meter freestyle and later ruled ineligible for the 1,500 meter freestyle, an event in which he held the world record.

The IOC gave as its reason the fact that traces of Ephedrine were found in DeMont's system after his win in the 400-meter competition. The drug had been outlawed for participants in Olympic competition.

Solomon said that DeMont had been taking the drug for an asthmatic condition for a year and made no attempt to conceal the fact from Olympic officials.

"Rick DeMont made a full disclosure of the medications he was taking," Solomon said. "The appropriate authorities of the the IOC should have recognized that Rick was taking an Ephedrine-containing drug. The IOC action strikes me as arbitrary and wholly indifferent."

Solomon said he believed the IOC "could re-establish some of its lost creditability by restoring Rick's gold medal and apologizing to him for its indifferent actions."

Federal Group Will Probe Future U.S. Olympic Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, noting the problems and tragedies of the Munich Olympic games, voted Friday to set up a presidential commission to study whether American athletes should participate in future Olympiads.

If established, the commission would be ordered to review not only the "objectives" of the Olympic movement, but also "the manner in which Olympic games are administered" and report its preliminary findings prior to the February, 1973 meeting of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The commission proposal was attached to a bill pledging $15.5 million in federal aid to the 1976 Winter Olympics in Denver.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., sponsor of the amendment, said it was in response to the "petty bickering, partisan judging, outrageous blunders and, finally, unparalleled barbarism" of the 1972 Summer Games in Munich.

His amendment was adopted by voice vote shortly before the bill was passed, 59-3. It now goes to the House.

The Tunney amendment calls for creation of a seven-member commission to be appointed by the President. It would review not only the future participation of American athletes in the quadrennial games, but also the role of the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) in international sports "and the manner in which United States participation in the Olympic games has been organized and administered by the committee."

The USOC was created by Congress and holds a federal charter.

Earlier, the Senate killed by a 64-7 vote a move by Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., to shunt the bill back to committee for further study.

"The taxpayers ought not to be asked to pay for these rich men's games," Harris said.

The bill would only authorize, not actually appropriate, the $15.5 million sum. But it would be null and void if Colorado voters adopt a proposed state constitutional amendment at the Nov. 7 election that would bar spending any state funds on the 1976 Olympics —thus ending the Denver games before they begin for lack of money.

The state has budgeted $6.2 million toward the games, but polls have shown that a majority of Colorado residents are against having them. Harris said the Senate should wait until after the election and follow Colorado's lead.

Unhappy Beman Leads St. Louis Golf Tournament By 2 Strokes

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Dean Beman, unhappy with a "shabby round of golf" Friday, goes into the third round of the $150,000 St. Louis Golf Classic today with a nine-under-par total of 131.

Beman carded a 67 Friday, again playing in a light drizzle on the soggy, 6,550-yard course at Norwood Hills Country Club. He had four birdies, including a 40-footer, but complained, "generally speaking, I played lousy. My irons were less than sharp. It was a shabby round of golf."

Lee Trevino finished with a 36-hole total of 133, two strokes behind the 34-year-old native of Bethesda, Md. Don Bies used four birdies to move into third place at 134 and Bob Goalby, who played with Beman both days, was fourth at 135.

Trevino, treating his large following to relaxed chatter and tense putting, finished with three birdies for a 68.

On the 16th hole, he needed to sink a 50-footer for a birdie. He shouted, "it's got a chance," but the ball stopped three inches from the cup. On the 17th, he put in a 25-footer and pranced to the hole amidst an ovation from "Lee's Fleas."

On the 18th, Trevino lined up a 50-footer after admonishing a photographer who positioned himself behind the hole. "I try to look pretty for that damn camera and three putt every time," he said. His ball then curved and stopped inches from the hole.

Bies, holing five birdies, said, "it didn't seem like I was playing sensational golf, but I didn't make any mistakes."

Four players were tied at 136. They were Orville Moody, John Schroeder, David Glenz and Harry Toscano.

Steve Melnyk shot a 65 Friday, the round's lowest score. He had a two-day total of 138. Napa's Ron Cerrudo took a 141.

TWIN BILL: THE GIANTS VS. BRAVES

ATLANTA (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants, trying all season to overtake Atlanta for fourth place in the National League West, could tie the Braves by sweeping a twi-night twin bill here tonight.

It will be Jim Willoughby and Juan Marichal for San Francisco and Ron Reed and Phil Niekro for the Braves.

Marichal won his last outing in impressive style, getting the 8-2 win over Cincinnati. But he is only 6-15 for the season. Willoughby beat the Reds in a 2-1 thriller his last time out.

The Giants will be returning to action after a two-day break in the schedule.

Darley Whips Zwieg In Tennis Tourney

Chuck Darley of Palo Alto, rapidly making himself unwelcome in Marin County, yesterday defeated Greenbrae's John Zwieg, 6-2, 6-3, in the finals of the Marshall Ward tennis tournament at Golden Gateway courts in San Francisco.

Darley, who earlier had beaten Barry MacKay of Ross in the semi-finals, earned $500 for his victory.

Water Ski Champions In Berkeley Tourney

BERKELEY (UPI) — Current world all-events champions Christy Lynn Weir of Texas and Canada's George Athans plus Petaluma's Mike Suyderhoud headed an all-star field of 22 men and eight women who competed at Berkeley Aquatic Park today in water skiing's first professional tournament.

The top 10 men and six survivers of today's round in the $15,000 California International Cup Championships battle it out in slalom, jump and tricks finals Sunday.

Mac Arthur's Wins, Forces Third Game

Mac Arthur's pushed across a run on two hits and an error in the eight inning last night to defeat Dick West bail bonds, 5-4, and force a third and deciding game in their series for the championship of the San Rafael Recreation Department "C" softball league.

Tonight's game, like last night's, will be at 7 o'clock at Albert Park.

Alou Is Finley's Insurance Policy; A's Spank Rangers

OAKLAND (UPI) — Matty Alou has to be the best insurance Charley Finley ever bought.

Picked up less than a month ago from the St. Louis Cardinals, Alou has proved the steadying influence the A's needed both in the outfield and at bat.

Friday night the veteran Alou drove in four runs for the second time since becoming an Oakland player as the A's rolled over the hapless Texas Rangers 12-3.

Matty's first inning sacrifice fly and a bases-loaded double in the fifth accounted for the four runs batted in as the A's piled up 13 hits off four Texas pitchers.

Mike Epstein, with his club-leading 24th homer, added three RBI's and Reggie Jackson and Tim Cullen had two RBI's each.

The victory, combined with a

SIGNING 'NEXT WEEK'

Thurmond Approves Terms For $300,000-Per-Year Contract

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nate Thurmond will sign a contract with the Golden State Warriors "sometime early next week" that will make him one of the three top paid centers in the National Baseball Association.

Thurmond said Friday he had approved terms of the contract, which reportedly calls for $300,000 per year on a multi-year contract covering three of four seasons.

"I'm paying him as one of the three top centers in the NBA," said warriors president Franklin Mieuli.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar reportedly has signed a new contract in the $350,000-$400,000 range while Chamberlain's salary has enabled him to build a unique $1.5 million home in the Los Angeles Hills.

Thurmond reportedly had a contract offer worth $1 million or more from the Carolina Cougars of the rival American Basketball Association.

But Thurmond said the thing that convinced him to stay in the Bay Area was his plan to open a new restaurant in San Francisco.

Thurmond's signing gave the Warriors only five players under contract with training camp already in session at San Jose. The others signed are Rick Barry, whom the Warriors say will report on Oct. 2, Clyde Lee, Bob Portman and Jeff Mullins. The latter reportedly signed for $105,000 on Wednesday night.

Barry, though, has announced he will not play for the Warriors and is trying to break the contract in court.

WILDCATS FALL

Rancho Cotate Takes 1st Game

By PAUL DWORIN

Don't be surprised if you find Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park head coach Claude Brock reading Henry David Thoreau next week, because Brock just might be looking for clues to win football games.

Last night, with starting quarterback Bob Haas out for the season with a finger injury, sophomore Eric Mogel took over a "simplified" Rancho Cotate offense and led the Cougars to a 20-6 victory over non-league foe Marin Catholic at Durst Field in Petaluma.

Before the game Brock explained that "we've cut out about two-thirds of our offense, so we could simplify things for Eric. Not that he doesn't know how to run the team, but we decided to keep things as simple as we could. We'll be operating a bare-bones offense, but it will still be wide open."

The Cougars threw occasionally, but struck mostly with their ground game to dominate the undermanned and ailing Wildcats, who had an eight-game winning streak broken.

Most of Rancho Cotate's running was done by fullback Kent Holman, a 6-foot-2, 197-pound junior who carried the ball 20 times around the tackles and through the middle for 57 yards, and junior Ray Jones, who ran for 125 yards and two touchdowns.

In the third quarter, Jones, who almost died of spinal meningitis seven months ago, broke three tackles on a left power sweep and galloped 51 yards for a touchdown that put the Cougars ahead 12-6. Three minutes later, he ran the same play again, only this time he ran away from all would-be tacklers for a 53-yard scoring sprint.

Mogel, although leaving most of the offense to Holman, Jones and Wayne Hill, threw 13 passes and completed five. His first completion as a varsity quarterback was a 33-yard scoring strike to Dan Dettling.

The Wildcats only score came in the first quarter when Rich Cervisi fielded a Cougars' kick on his own 24 and slithered around the right side for a 76-yard touchdown.

After the game a disconsolate Wildcat coach Bruno Banducci commented, "We lost key personnel. As thin as we were (Marin Catholic has a 22-man squad), we couldn't afford any injuries." Five Wildcats were injured, with halfback Layne Cozza in the hospital for X-rays.

Unfamiliar Faces For 49ers, Raiders

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

There will be some different names in the lineups of the San Francisco 49ers and Oakland Raiders as they prepare to open the 1972 National Football League season tomorrow.

A schedule of 12 games is on tap in the NFL, with a 13th clash, between Minnesota and Washington, slated for Monday night telecast.

The 49ers will face the San Diego Chargers at Candlestick Park at 1 p.m. The defending National Football Conference West champions, beset with injuries during their 3-3 exhibition season, will start Larry Schreiber at fullback and perhaps Jimmy Thomas at halfback.

Stalwarts Ken Willard and Vic Washington were injured, although both are expected to see action, and Washington may start. Injured worse, and not expected to play, are free safety Mike Simpson (shoulder) and running back Doug Cunningham. Veteran Johnny Fuller will start in Simpson's place.

After a long quest left-handed Raider quarterback Ken Stabler has, at least temporarily, unseated Daryle Lamonica as No. 1 and will start against the Steelers in Pittsburgh. The game begins at 10 a.m., PDT, and will be telecast on Channels 3 and 4.

Jim Otto, who's played center for Oakland since the Middle Ages, and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff will not start due to injuries sustained in the Raiders 4-2 pre-season campaign. Replacements will be rookies Dave Dalby (UCLA) and Cliff Branch (Colorado), respectively.

The 49ers are favored by six over the Chargers, despite a 17-16 exhibition loss to them. The Raiders are picked by three, despite Pittsburgh's impressive 4-1-1 pre-season mark.

In other NFL games, defending Super Bowl champion Dallas is a 14-point favorite over Philadelphia, Kansas City is five over Miami, New York is seven over Buffalo, Baltimore is six over St. Louis, Detroit is 9½ over the New York Giants, Los Angeles is nine over New Orleans, Cincinnati is 1½ over New England, Denver is three over Houston, Cleveland is three over Green Bay and Atlanta is three over Chicago. Minnesota is four over Washington in the nationally televised game.

More is at stake in Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium than the score of the game.

The time has come for the Bills, owners of two of the last three No. 1 draft choices in the NFL, to fulfill their promise to return to the contending ranks and the time has come for the New York Jets, led by a healthy quarterback Joe Namath, to prove their 1969 Super Bowl season was no fluke.

Potent Bat Swung By Orioles' Powell

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Paul Blair's hot bat has kept the Baltimore Orioles in contention in the American League East—only it's Boog Powell that's using it.

Powell, using his teammate's bat, stroked a three-run first inning homer to help Jim Palmer to his third successive 20-win season Friday night as the Orioles downed the New York Yankees, 3-1, in the torrid American League East pennant chase.

Powell, borrowing the bat from Blair in an attempt to improve his anemic batting average, slammed his 20th homer of the season 420 feet into the right-centerfield bleachers with one out in the first after Don Baylor and Rich Coggins had drawn walks.

Boston continued to set the pace in the AL East with a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Detroit remained a game behind the division leaders with a come-from-behind 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In other American League games Oakland ripped Texas 12-3, Minnesota edged Kansas City 4-3, and California blanked Chicago, 1-0.

Norm Cash singled home Dick McAuliffe with two out in the ninth inning to lead Detroit over Milwaukee.

Reggie Smith smashed a two-out double in the bottom of the ninth inning to score Carl Yastrzemski from first base to keep Boston in the lead.

Smith earlier hit his 20th home run with Yastrzemski on first in the sixth inning as the Red Sox battled back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score.

Bob Veale, acquired as pitching insurance during the late season pennant drive, picked up his second victory with one inning of relief.

George Mitterwald tripled and socked his first home run of the season to lead Minnesota over Kansas City.

Leo Cardenas' two out single in the 11th inning scored pinch runner Curt Motton from second base with the only run of the game as California blanked Tom Bradley and the Chicago White Sox 1-0.

Norman Fans 15 To Beat Cincinnati

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Fred Norman didn't believe it and neither did Cincinnati.

Norman pitched a seven-hitter and caught 15 Reds' batters looking at strikes Friday night as the San Diego Padres punched out a 1-0 victory over the Reds.

Norman was in disbelief after being told his strikeout total had set a new club record.

"Did I really strike out that many? Gee, I thought it was only eight or nine," said the lefty hurler.

Clarence Gaston's bat supplied Norman with all the support he needed with a fourth inning homer.

The victory squared Norman's record at 9-9 and was the sixth shutout of the season for the lefthander.

Over in the Eastern Division, Pittsburgh shared a similar losing fate as St. Louis romped to a 10-4 victory, keeping the Pirates' "magic number" at three.

In other National League games, Chicago topped New York, 9-3, Los Angeles edged Houston, 4-2, and Philadelphia downed Montreal, 5-3.

Willie Crawford and Wes Parker hit run-scoring singles and Claude Osteen pitched a four-hitter for his 17th win to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to victory over the Houston Astros.

Jim Hickman hit a grand slam home run and Jose Cardenal and Billy Williams chipped in with round-trippers as Chicago downed New York and Milt Pappas won his eighth straight game.

Ted Simmons, Bernie Carbo and Ken Reitz hit consecutive run-scoring doubles in the first inning of St. Louis's victory over Pittsburgh to back up the five-hit pitching of Rick Wise, now 15-15.

Steve Carlton notched his 24th victory for last place Philadelphia with the help of three RBI's by Willie Montanez and a tie-breaking home run by Greg Luzinski as the Phillies defeated Montreal.

San Rafael Gridders Eye Title Despite Big Graduation Losses

By LEW CODDINGTON
(Fourth in a series on Marin County Athletic League football prospects.)

Perhaps you haven't heard of anybody on San Rafael High School's football roster, but just be patient. By season's end, the names will be quite familiar.

"We're going out there to defend (our co-championship)," said coach Bob Muster. "We don't look at it as a building year."

San Rafael has just 14 lettermen and four starters back from last year's team, which went 5-1 in the Marin County Athletic League and shared the title with Novato.

But 22 of the 39 players on the roster are seniors, familiar with San Rafael's system and ready to step into the spots vacated by such lustrous names as Scott Duncan, Mark Farrar, Bill Lechner, Dirk Correnti, Mark St. Gaudens, and Duke Bessee, each an all-leaguer.

Last year's starters were defensive tackle Bob Sinclair, defensive end Chris Valentino, linebacker Mike Cook and defensive back Craig Bacharach. Three of them will go both ways this time around — Sinclair at tight end, Valentino at halfback and Cook at offensive tackle.

There has been a duel at quarterback throughout practice between senior Lance Loughlin and sophomore Dave Steele, and Muster is in no hurry to make up his mind, although he doesn't intend to institute a two-quarterback system.

Impressive in practice, according to Muster, has been junior fullback Steve D'Ambra. Senior halfback Jim Grigg has been hampered by a leg injury sustained during track season, but hopes to regain the form which last year enabled him to finish 10th in the MCAL in rushing even though he wasn't a starter. Meanwhile, 160-pound junior Craig Saunders has been blocking impressively from the halfback spot.

San Rafael will operate out of a full house backfield. Last year theulldogs had an awesome ground game, but Muster is not Woody Hayes, and he'll pass "if they (opponents) give it to us."

The offensive line is "just getting there," Muster says, although tackles Gary Jordan and Bob Seymour have been hitting well, as has Cook.

The defensive unit looks solid, with the two-way players. Tackle Dan Dell'era and linebacker Graham Wright have caught Muster's eye.

Only Bacharach has varsity experience in the secondary, but Steele and junior Mike Farris combined with him to intercept five passes in a scrimmage against Pacific of San Leandro Saturday. Should Steele win the quarterback job, Nelson Moore or John Sims will take over for him on defense.

San Rafael opens its season tonight at 8 o'clock, hosting Lincoln of San Francisco. The Bulldogs open the MCAL season Sept. 29 against Tamalpais.

TROJANS

two men combined for a 20 yard touchdown pass, wiping out the Trojans' 7-6 halftime lead.

And they did it again in the fourth quarter. With a little over four minutes left in the game, it was a 28-yard Wolf to Reavis pass that closed the scoring at 22-7.

Scoring opened early late in the first quarter, as Concord culminated the game's first sustained drive with a four-yard rush through the Trojan line by fullback Carlos Brown.

Terra Linda came back early in the second quarter as the Blue and Gold put together their best series of the evening behind the fine rushing of Sean Casey and Pete Corbett. The Trojans capped a nine-play, 80-yard march with Casey scampering in from four yards out. Corbett's kick gave the blue and gold a 7-6 halftime lead.

Friday at 8 p.m. the Trojans will attempt to find the winning formula when hosting highly regarded Alameda High on the San Rafael high field. But, as Yamagata warned: "if we're not ready for them, we better not come onto the field."

Meanwhile, the Trojan junior varsity blanked their Minuteman counterparts, 26-0, last night at San Rafael High.

ATHLETICS

1-0 triumph by the California Angels over Chicago, increased the A's lead overthe White Sox in the American League West to four games and reduced their pennant clinching magic number to 12.

Ken Holtzman had the Rangers shut out on three hits until they reached him for four hits and a sacrifice fly in the ninth for their three runs.

The victory was Holtzman's 17th of the year compared to 11 losses and equalled his major league high achieved twice before with the Chicago Cubs.

Holtzman struck out four and walked two batters. Four of the seven hits he gave up were singles and there were two triples and a double off him as the Rangers dropped their straight decision. Don Stanhouse, chased in the second inning, was the loser and now is 2-6.

The two clubs meet in single games today and Sunday and then the White Sox come to town for single games Tuesday and Wednesday. Those two games could be decisive ones for both clubs.

Carmona Stops Foe For Crown

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — Chango Carmona brought the World Boxing Council lightweight championship to Mexico on its Independence Day by inflicting so severe a beating to Mando Ramos that Ramos had to be hospitalized.

After being knocked down four times by the 10-7 underdog Carmona at the Los Angeles Coliseum Friday night, Ramos was taken to a hospital for observation of a possible concussion and internal injuries.

Referee Rudy Jordan halted the bout at 1:48 of the eighth round to the delight of a predominantly Mexican audience in the outdoor arena after Ramos had gone down for the fourth time.

CASHED HEARTS

South won the first trick with the ace of diamonds, cashed three top hearts to discard a diamond from dummy and then led a fourth heart, discarding another diamond from dummy.

West found himself on lead, knowing that South intended to ruff diamonds in the dummy. The obvious countermove was to lead trumps, but West was agraid to lead from his queen of trumps. Fear caused West to lead the jack of diamonds.

Declarer ruffed in dummy and returned a low club. East won with the nine of clubs and returned a trump, but it was too late. Dummy won with the king of spades (capturing West's queen, which didn't survive the trump return), got to his hand by ruffing a club and ruffed his last diamond with dummy's last trump.

CLAIMS CONTRACT

South then ruffed another club, drew another round of trumps with the ace and claimed his contract. He lost only a heart, a trump and a club.

Now go back to West when he won the fourth round of hearts. If he returns the low trump, dummy steps up with the king. Declarer must lead a club from dummy, and East wins with the nine of clubs and leads a second trump.

ONLY ONE TRUMP

South wins with the ace of trumps, but now has only one trump in dummy. He can ruff one diamond with dummy's remaining trump, but must eventually give up a diamond trick. Down one.

The hand is not quite worth a jump to 2-NT. Bid your suit, such as it is, and await developments. You will probably bid 2-NT at your next turn, suggesting 11 or 12 points in high cards.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Dear Mr. Greb:

Your "Happy Birthday" salutes to people who reach 80 are wonderful! But why not congratulate other ages, too? Bobby Fischer became a chess champion at 14 and Satchel Paige a baseball star at 50. Let's read about some interesting younger people from time to time. Signed: Jimmy Dee

Dear Dee: Good point. So let's make some points by singling out star football player George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders for special attention. Tomorrow (Sept. 17) he will be 45 years old!

As sports fans know, this graying giant can still kick, pass, and run with a football at an age when his contemporaries are home watching it on TV. He had 10 years playing with the Chicago Bears and thought he had retired when he took off his uniform 13 years ago. But Houston hired him to play with the Oilers, where he helped win three divisional titles and two league championships. Then the coach and fans thought Balnda was washed up and booed him out of town. Next he began place-kicking for Oakland. And when desperate measures put him in the game at the last-minute, Blanda passed and kicked the Raiders into victory after victory.

No wonder George Blanda is still a happy warrior. For people like him, life begins at 40.

'Bible Policeman' In Santa Rosa Talk

Inspector Paul Dilena of the New York City police will be guest speaker at a criminal justice appreciation banquet Monday at 6:30 p.m. at El Rancho Tropicana Convention Center, Santa Rosa.

The banquet is being given in honor of all who serve in the fields of law enforcement and criminal justice.

Dilena has served the department for 23 years in an area of police work that is often referred to as one of the toughest beats in the world — New York's subway system.

Dilena has been called a policeman whose bible is more powerful than his revolver. He is a charter member of Teen Challenge, founded by Rev. David Wilkerson.

Teen Challenge is a program designed to reach, convert and rehabilitate drug addicts. The story of the program is told in the book, "The Cross and the Switchblade."

The banquet at Santa Rosa is one of seven to be held in Northern California and Nevada during the week.

Rev. George E. Elrod, director of men's ministries for the Assemblies of God of Northern California-Nevada, said, "We invite all police, members of the sheriff's department, highway patrolmen, judges, attorneys and anyone who serves in other areas of law enforcement and criminal justice to be our guests at this banquet."

Anyone who has not received an invitation may call Assembly of God Church in San Rafael for reservations.

'Peace Day' Observed By Baha'i

"World Peace — The First Priority" is the theme of this year's World Peace Day, being observed today and tomorrow by the Baha'i Faith in Marin and some 4,800 U.S. cities.

The purpose of World Peace Day is to spread the recognition of America's spiritual destiny to raise the standard of peace in the world. Inaugurated in 1959, the day is sponsored annually by the National Baha'i Assembly.

As part of the observance in Marin, a public meeting will be sponsored by the Marin County Baha'i Community at the Manzanita Recreation Center, Marin City, today at 7:30 p.m.

The program will consist of a brief introduction to the Baha'i teachings by Jim Yates of Fremont, followed by movies, featuring Dizzy Gillespie, Seals and Croft and others, and music sung by the Children of Light, a marin County Baha'i group. The public is invited.

Dorothy Cockcroft, Marin Baha'i chairman, said that because of its fruitful experience in federation and it's great spiritual capacities and blessings," the U.S. can be "a prime leader in bringing about world peace and world order."

Church's Ski Club Opens Membership

"Great Life Ski Club," a fellowship of recreational skiing sponsored by Lucas Valley Community Church, has opened its membership to other church youth.

Begun last year as an experiment, the club this year already has applications from local Catholic and Protestant churches. But there is a limited membership, warns Rev. Dale Nystrom.

The club will feature skiing at five of California's major resorts. A weekend retreat will be held at Joyfjellet Lodge at Donner Summit, of a cost of $15.

Each Thursday night, January through March, a "skiers only" service is conducted at the church. The 8 p.m. service will feature 20 minutes of folk singing and a ski devotional, followed by hot spiced cider and a ski film.

The club grew out of the desire of Nystrom, church pastor, to offer recreational skiing combined with Christian fellowship. The basic structure was derived from his years working with the Blizzard and Huski ski clubs.

"My years with Huski," Nystrom said, "were most rewarding. For instructional skiing the Huski package can't be beaten. But our concept offers a kind of Saturday skiing that has found great appeal."

Application to the non-profit club is $10. Information may be secured by contacting the church. Les Kuhns and Art Butterfield serve with Nystrom on the steering committee.

OF GOD AND MAN

Why Does He Let Us Suffer?

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P.International

Suffering can be "the raw material of happiness".

That is the personal testimony of a great British scholar, Dr. H.A. Williams, former Dean of Chapel at Trinity College, Cambridge University.

In a profound new book entitled "True Resurrection" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston), Williams abandons the age-old attempt by Christian theologians to find a single, overall answer to the question: "Why does a loving God permit so much suffering in the world?"

That question can never be answered satisfactorily, Williams says, because we cannot see things as God sees them. We have no right even to try to explain the sufferings of others. We can speak intelligently only of the suffering we personally have experienced.

Out of his own life, Williams has learned —and I am quoting him here because I have had precisely the same experience —that suffering can result in a new outlook on, and a more joyous participation in, the human adventure.

Williams is no masochist. He believes we should avoid suffering whenever and wherever we possibly can. But when it comes upon us anyway, he says, it is a great mistake to try to escape from it by seeking distractions and diversions. The trick is to "accept it and receive it, to take it on as part of what we are".

"In doing this, we discover new and hitherto unimagined areas of our being. We discover that the self we took as our total self was in fact only a small fraction of what we are, and that we have reserves of strength, and insight and courage and heroism and love and compassion of which we so far have been totally unaware.

"That is how suffering can by acceptance create us —by activating and making accessible to us powers within us which hitherto were dormant and only potential so that we had no inkling of their existence."

Williams warns —and again I say amen —that people who accept suffering should not expect immediate irradiation by "a glorious certainty" that they are growing toward fulfillmem and joy.

"All we shall feel is much pain with spasmodic and very faint glimmers of hope," he said. "The faint glimmer of hope will be obscure and undefined. It will be a glimmer of hope for we know not what. Yet for all its being feeble, intermittent and without content, the hope is the call to us of our own future, indicating we are not only at an end but also at a beginning. For the hope, weak and unidentified though it is, is a sign tht a transformation has begun."

The Catholics Who Marry After Divorce

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A Youngstown, Ohio, man writes: "I'd do most anything to be given the opportunity to once again be a 'complete' Catholic. I thought I had that chance after reading your column, but my pastor gave me a polite, but firm, 'No'."

The fact is that the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, through its president, has called a halt to a procedure initiated in some dioceses allowing divorced and remarried Catholics in "good conscience" cases to return to receiving Communion.

John Cardinal Krol, president of the bishops, said the Vatican is studying the question, but has made clear that dioceses "are not to introduce procedures that are contrary to present discipline."

Until this admonition was issued late last month, several dioceses had quietly initiated steps to restore the sacraments to divorced and remarried Catholics, who affirm a "good conscience" about it and believe their previous marriages invalid, even though unable for technical reasons to get them officially annulled.

After Cardinal Krol's warning, however, the special procedures apparently were being suspended.

Under existing Church canons, Catholics who remarry after divorces without Church annulment of previous marriages are automatically excommunicated — barred from the sacraments. There have been estimates that about five million American Catholics are in such a status.

"The Church is not insensitive to the anxiety and anguish of the individuals involved," Cardinal Krol said. But he added that "grave doctrinal implications, including the indissolubility of marriage and fidelity to the Gospel of Christ are involved."

He said the Church must offer its "ministry of compassion, mercy and reconciliation," but also must provide its "ministry of correction. The Church must be faithful to her children by recalling them to fidelity to Christ and the Gospel."

Although the problem is being studied, Church authorities "do not venture any ready solutions," he said, and "it would be rash to conclude that a study must necessarily lead to change of principles or procedure."

Church In Outing To Angel Island

Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur will begin its fall schedule tomorrow with a celebration, picnic, games and fellowship on Angel Island.

Sponsored by church fellowship groups, the celebration is for church members and their friends. Arrangements have been made for a ferry to the island to leave at 9 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. in addition to regular runs.

An informal worship service at 10:30 a.m. will be led by Rev. William N. Johnson, assisted by ruling elders Dr. Burt Richardson and Daniel White, with music by Yohann Anderson, director of Young Life in Marin.

A regular worship service for those who cannot go to the island will be held at the church at 10 a.m. with Rev. Dr. C. James Miller as guest preacher.

MUSIC REVIEW

Joan Sutherland's Excellent 'Norma'

By WILLIAM CLARK

The flawless voice of Joan Sutherland rose in triumph even through the dazzle and splendor of opening the San Francisco Opera's Golden Jubilee season last night in a new production of Bellini's "Norma."

An enormously complicated and finely balanced structure seemed to be suspended from a single "bel canto" thread flowing effortlessly from the throat of the "prima donna assoluta."

This style of opera is for lovers of that most basic element of opera, fine singing. The skimpy plot, static sets, fire-drill chorus movements, formal predictability and scarcity of dramatic moments never get in the way of the melodic line, and the opera stands or falls on the execution of the title role.

The bell-like clarity and fine consistency of Miss Sutherland's voice never wavered through seemingly endless beautiful phrases, from the most delicate pianissimi of "Casta Diva" to the robust final chorus.

With incredible ease she made the elaborate vocal ornaments sound like a natural amplification of the feeling of the moment, and created a believable character with artistic simplicity and directness.

By comparison, the fine voice of Huguette Tourangeau as Adalgisa sounded at times almost uneven, but she acts well and sounded exceptionally beautiful in the soft duet at the end of the second act.

John Alexander sang a very strong tenor as Pollione, the third member of the love triangle. Clifford Grant, Erik Townsend and Gwendolyn Jones turned in fine supporting performances.

A special note is due the sensitive and understanding conducting of Richard Bonynge for the successful launching of the company's 50th season.

The San Francisco Opera has come a long way in 50 years — from a virtual repertory company offering 10 performances in a two-week season to one of the world's truly important and vital musical institutions.

Much excitement is promised for this landmark season by way of new productvns, singing debuts, unusual fare and an American premiere, "The Visit of the Old Lady," based on the Durrematt play.

Food Stamp Sales Are Under Way

Post offices in six Marin communities yesterday began selling food stamps under a contract with the county public social services department and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Previously, stamps were available only at local branches of Bank of America, Crocker-National and Wells Fargo banks and at the Cooperative Credit Union in Corte Madera.

(The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council handled stamps until this summer, when its contract was revoked by the county for mishandling federal funds.)

Post offices offering the service are located in Novato, Corte Madera, Tiburon, Point Reyes Station, Mill Valley and the San Rafael Mission branch.

The credit union and banks will continue to sell food stamps, though some may phase out sales later, welfare officials said.

In 45 to 90 days, the post office is expected to expand food stamp sales to its branches in Sausalito, San Anselmo and Fairfax.

Sale hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays at the post office branches. Checks will not be accepted.

Suspended Sentence In Burglary Try

A 25-year-old San Francisco man was given a suspended state prison sentence yesterday by a Marin Superior Court judge and ordered to spend a year in jail for the attempted burglary of a Sausalito home.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also placed Vernon James Robinson on probation for five years, including two years under direct supervision.

Codefendant Walter James Brock, 32, also of San Francisco, received an identical sentence in June after the pair admitted the crime on the first day of their trial.

Robinson, an admitted heroin user, had a previous burglary conviction and also was previously jailed for possessing narcotics. He told his probation officer the pair had come to Marin to buy heroin, but decided on a burglary when they missed their connection.

Sausalito police arrested then April 4 at the home of Helme W. Schweikert of 5 Cloudview Trail after responding to a burglar alarm.

2. Southbound, near the Sir Francis Drake Boulevard off-ramp, outside lane will be closed from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for slide removal.
3. Southbound, between Golden Gate Bridge and south end of Richardson Bay Bridge, two inside lanes will be closed from 2 to 6 p.m. for operation of special bus lane.

In San Francisco's Orbit

What San Francisco represents among cities, Marin County—just to the north over the Golden Gate—represents among suburbs. Still fairly light on people (206,038 in 1970), its geography is varied and a pleasure to the eye—a place where mountains, ocean, and bay meet, known for its canyons, loamy farmland, lagoons, and streams. Primarily, Marin is a commuter county for San Francisco's well-heeled, a place that has changed suddenly from rural backwardness like most of the North Coast to a sophisticated and urbane community. San Rafael (population 38,977) is the closest thing to a city in Marin County and also has a newspaper—the Independent-Journal, superior to any San Francisco paper.

Park-Rec Commission Supports Bond Issue

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission has unanimously endorsed the city's $2.25 million bond issue for open space which will be placed before voters at a special election Tuesday.

The bond issue is aimed at selecting parcels of open space within the city for outright purchase.

The commission, meeting Thursday, also heard Pierre W. Joske, county parks director, report that tentative plans for North Bay Regional Park northeast of Northgate Industrial Park include picnic areas, playfields, about 20 tennis courts, a 50-meter pool and the possibility of a small-craft harbor, sailing lagoon and golf course.

Development of the 320-acre park will begin next September, according to city parks director Andrew J. Snyder.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission also:

CONFERENCE — Heard Snyder report he would attend the Naional Parks and Recreation Congress conference in Anaheim on Oct. 1.

VALLECITO SCHOOL — Announced turfing of Vallecito School would begin next week at a cost of $5,000.

PARKS — Said lighting would be installed at Freitas, Santa Margarita Valley and Victor Jones parks, and that telephones would be installed at six city parks.

BOYD HOUSE — Announced that the Marin Historical Society had allotted $1,000 and the city council $2,500 for restoration of Boyd House.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Oct. 12.

The merry-go-round developed from a horsemanship training device used by knights in the Middle Ages.

Fee Hike Plea To Be Studied

The San Rafael City Council will consider a request from the parks and recreation commission that construction fees for new dwelling units be increased when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

The commission has recommended increasing fees from $30 to $75 per bedroom on newly constructed dwellings and from $60 to $75 per mobile home pad, saying more money is needed to meet demands for services.

An appeal of planning commission approval of a townhouse and apartment complex on San Pablo Avenue proposed by McCarthy Co. of Northern California as well as a zoning change requested by the firm, has been postponed, according to Marion A. Grady, city clerk.

Mental Health Series At College Slated

An eight-week series on mental health entitled "S.O.S. — Stress in Our Society" and cosponsored by College of Marin and the Marin Mental Health Association, will begin Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Olney Hall at the college.

Speakers at the opening lecture, "Family," will be Dr. Martin Kirschenbaum and Shirley Lathum, codirectors of the Family Therapy Institute of Marin. Their talk will center on family systems, communication patterns, value conflicts and changing life-styles.

The lecture series is designed to help members of the community gain a clearer understanding of the rapid changes in our society and their effects on the mental health of the community, according to Earlene Jones, college publicist.

Other lectures in the weekly series — all on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. at Olney Hall — are:

"Marriage and its Alternatives" with Rev. Charles Gompertz, Sept. 26; "I'm OK—You're OK." with Dr. Thomas A. Harris, author of the book by the same name, Oct. 3; "Children" with psychiatrist and pediatrician Dr. Eugene Shatkin, Oct. 10; "Adolescence" with Dr. Philip Hicks, Oct. 17.

The Nelsons Collect Artifacts From Costa Rica's Past

Marin Couple Owns Store Of Treasures

By DON KEOWN

William A. Nelson of 499 Via Casitas, Greenbrae, has good reason to be grateful to the small Central American country of Costa Rica.

It has given him his attractive wife, Maria, born and reared in the fine old city of Cartago and a resident and citizen of democratic Costa Rica until her marriage four and a half years ago.

It has also given him an absorbing hobby shared by his wife — the collection of pre-Columbian artifacts from Costa Rica's Indian past.

The Nelson apartment today holds some 35 pieces of Indian work hundreds of years old.

NELSON, A salesman for Gardner-Denver Co. of South San Francisco, makers of pneumatic tools and equipment, says he is indebted to his wife's uncle, Manuel Hidalgo, for interesting him in the artifacts of Central America.

In fact, many of the Nelson-owned pieces are gifts from Hidalgo, now a Washington, D.C. businessman maintaining homes both in that city and his native Costa Rica.

Hidalgo's own collection, divided between his two places of residence, is regarded as one of the finest of its kind in the world.

HIDALGO'S collection had its beginnings 20 years ago when he was assisting another of Maria Nelson's uncles on hisCosta Rican farm in the digging of a grave for a dead cow. The diggers uncovered a store of jade, gold, stone and pottery artifacts. And Manuel Hidalgo was off on his collection.

Bill Nelson has visited Costa Rica but once — four years ago when he and his wife traveled south to visit her family.

It was there he became intrigued by Hidalgo and his collection and began to be interested in pre-Columbian artifacts himself. It was there, too, that he acquired a strong affection for his wife's beautiful native land and for its people.

NELSON POINTS to Costa Rica's strong democratic tradition and the absence there of the civil strife that has plagued other Central American states.

He describes the people as "happy and gay, always, it seems, going to parties where dancing is the main entertainment. They love entertainment. And they are an extremely well-dressed people, even to a rather formal degree that contrasts with their free spirits. The men go nowhere without neckties."

Costa Rica also places a strong emphasis upon the education of all its people, Nelson says.

HIS WIFE interjects: "Yes, and that has been the source of some trouble for our people. The Costa Ricans have become so well educated, that there is no one to do the manual labor. Everyone feels himself too well schooled to waste himself on that kind of work."

Costa Ricans in their own land seem to take no great interest in the artifacts from the Indians who inhabited the region centuries ago, Nelson observes.

It is only after they have left their country, as Manuel Hidalgo did 25 years ago, that they seem to acquire an appreciation of the treasures from Costa Rica's past.

NOT ONLY HAS Bill Nelson become a collector of Costa Rican artifacts, but he has become an avid reader and student of the history of that country and of Central America generally.

Maria Nelson smiles: "He knows more about Costa Rica than I do. When there are questions, it is up to him to answer."

Growing up in Costa Rica, she was aware of the Indian artifacts being uncovered in her country only because of her uncle's prominence in the field. And it was only after she became Mrs. Nelson that she acquired an interest in collecting — from her "Yankee" husband.

IN THEIR Greenbrae apartment home, William A. Nelson and his Costa Rican-born wife Maria enjoy some of the pre-Columbian pieces that make up their growing collection of artifacts from her native land. Nelson holds a flint sacrificial knife, and before them are some of the 35 pieces of stoneware and pottery that they now own. Most of their acquisitions are the gifts of Maria's uncle, Manuel Hidalgo, a leading collector. But in January the Nelsons will be visiting Central America to accompany Hidalgo into the field and personnally add new finds to their collection. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE LATEST ADDITION to the pre-Columbian artifact collection of Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson of Greenbrae, and their most prized possession, is this metate, a gift from Manuel Hidalgo. Handcarved from stone, the metate is estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000 years old. It was used centuries before Columbus by the Indians of Costa Rica for the grinding of the corn that was their staple food, and was uncovered in an ancient Costa Rican gravesite.

Costa Rica: Small Land, Rich Heritage

summary of Costa Rica's early history:

"In pre-Columbian, ancient times, it was divided into three sections, dominated by three individual native Indian groups, the Chortega, located in the Nicoya or northwest region; the Huetar in the highlands or central region; and the Borucas, inhabiting the Diguis or southeastern section.

"Each group had a similar, yet individualistic, form of art. The Chorotega, being to the north, displayed a trace of Mayan influence and had a definite cultural advantage.

"THE HUETARS were undisturbed by alien influence and maintained the most distinctive, individualistic arts.

"And the Borucas, being to the south, showed signs of a relationship with the Incas of Peru."

"Thus, we can see," continues Bill Nelson, "that Costa Rica was a meeting place for the influences from the north and south. And yet this small section of land managed to retain characteristics in its art that remained its own, not seen in the whole of Mexico to the north or in South America to the south."

"COSTA RICA," says Nelson, "was the only place in the New World where jade was found in abundance. And some jade carvings found in Costa Rica show Olmec traits.

"So we can speculate that since many of the Costa Rican jade pieces are carved from reworked celts, the Olmecs must have traded as far south as Costa Rica for the raw material, made the celts, and then bartered them back to the natives there for more raw materials. And from this interchange came an impact upon these natives' own carvings."

And the Olmec civilization dates back from about 1200 B.C. to 500 B.C.

THE HUETAR Indians were first discovered by the European world in September, 1502, by Christopher Columbus, admiral and viceroy of Spain, on his fourth and last voyage. It was not until 17 years later, however, that Capt. Gasper de Espinoza ventured into Costa Rica and claimed discovery of the Chorotega people.

While the population of Costa Rica shows a strong Indian as well as Spanish influence, tribal identities and cultures have long since intermingled and disappeared, unlike in some other Central American states.

The latest addition, and the prized piece, in the Bill Nelsons' collection of artifacts is a metate, its age estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000 years, beautifully handcarved from stone.

LIKE MOST of the pieces the Nelsons own, it was given to them by Manuel Hidalgo (Maria's father has also presented them with some artifacts as gifts) after its uncovering in an ancient Costa Rican gravesite.

The metate was used, Nelson explains, by the Indians for the grinding of the corn that was their principal food.

The carving on the Nelson-owned metate has been found only in Costa Rica and parts of Panama. And the only other known metate resembling it is housed in the Costa Rica Museum in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital.

"IT IS DIFFICULT to pinpoint the exact Indian tribe responsible for the manufacture of this metate," Nelson says. "However, it is most likely that it is the work of the Huetars, as indicated by the style."

Protrusions from the metate's face were probably meant as human or animal heads, most likely the former, since human sacrifice was a recognized ritual, Nelson believes.

The Nelson collection also includes a flint ceremonial sacrificial knife, stone tools, various pieces of pottery and two figures of Indians, one a chief, the other a medicine man, in a squatting position.

"All are pre-Columbian pieces, all over 800 years old," Nelson says.

A SHOP IN San Francisco's Marina District, where the Nelsons lived before moving to Marin earlier this year, has two similar figures priced at $480 and $500. The shop also owns a third figure, made from the same lava material, of a man carrying by rope slung over his head what is apparently the head of a sacrificial victim. The price for this rare piece is $10,000.

The Nelsons, with limited space in their apartment, admit that their collection is reaching the point "where we are going to have to do some trading, rather than just acquiring."

Nelson will retain some favorite pieces, but will offer the rest as "trade bait" and is looking forward to the interchange with other collectors.

THE NELSONS also have something else to look forward to.

In January they will be heading for Costa Rica where they are to meet Manuel Hidalgo and go with him to some of that country's digging sites. Then the Nelsons expect the added pleasure that comes from finding for themselves pieces for their collection by working with pick and shovel.

Enroute to Costa Rica they also expect to visit archaeological centers in Mexico and other Central American states.

In Costa Rica their destinations will be places accessible only on horseback.

"THE NATIVES adorn themselves with pieces of gold, placing them about the neck and around their arms and legs, and with the dead are buried all the pieces they had, so that they make use of them in the next life, for all these people profess a belief in the immortality of the soul," wrote Fr. Augustin de Zevallos, provincial of the Order of St. Francis and a resident for 20 years of Costa Rica and Nicaragua in a letter in 1610 to Spanish King Philip III.

But buried under Costa Rican soil, by man or time, is much more than golden ornaments and jewelry. There are the tools, the religious vessels, the weapons that help to tell the fascinating stories of cultures that were in existence in the so-called New World long before Christopher Columbus set out on his voyages of discovery.

Bill and Maria hope to find some of these in January, to be added to their collection and to increase their understanding of the way of life of Costa Rica's earlier peoples.

Then, back home, Bill Nelson will be ready to begin the trading with other collectors that will upgrade and diversify their treasures.

"Our knowledge of people and culture of Middle America before the Spanish Conquest stems from many different sources. Archaeologists unearth artifacts and monuments which they date and compare with others to deduce early patterns of trade and influence. Art historians define the main currents of prehistoric style and taste. Ethnologists study living peoples whose cultures often furnish valuable clues . . . Linguists infer prehistoric tribal movements by comparing modern Indian languages and their distribution with known earlier patterns. Eyewitness accounts of 16th Century Mexico and Guatemala . . . provide vivid firsthand glimpses of the New World in its last moments of cultural purity . . . As anthropological research continues, knowledge of the Middle American past is constantly modified and refined. So far it has revealed more than 12,000 years of complex human interrelationships and events that culminated in the panorama of splendor that so awed the soldiers of Cortes." From National Geographic's "Archaeological Map of Middle America: Land of the Feathered Serpent."

THE FIGURES that the William Nelsons have acquired through the years as gifts for their collection of pre-Columbian pieces from Costa Rica offer fascinating insights into a culture that otherwise has largely vanished. But sometimes the tools and vessels are the more revealing of the ancient Indian way-of-life.

BILL NELSON POINTS OUT to wife Maria a feature of one of the stone figures included in their collection of artifacts from her native Costa Rica. Now, admits Maria, her Yankee husband knows far more about Costa Rican culture and history than she does.

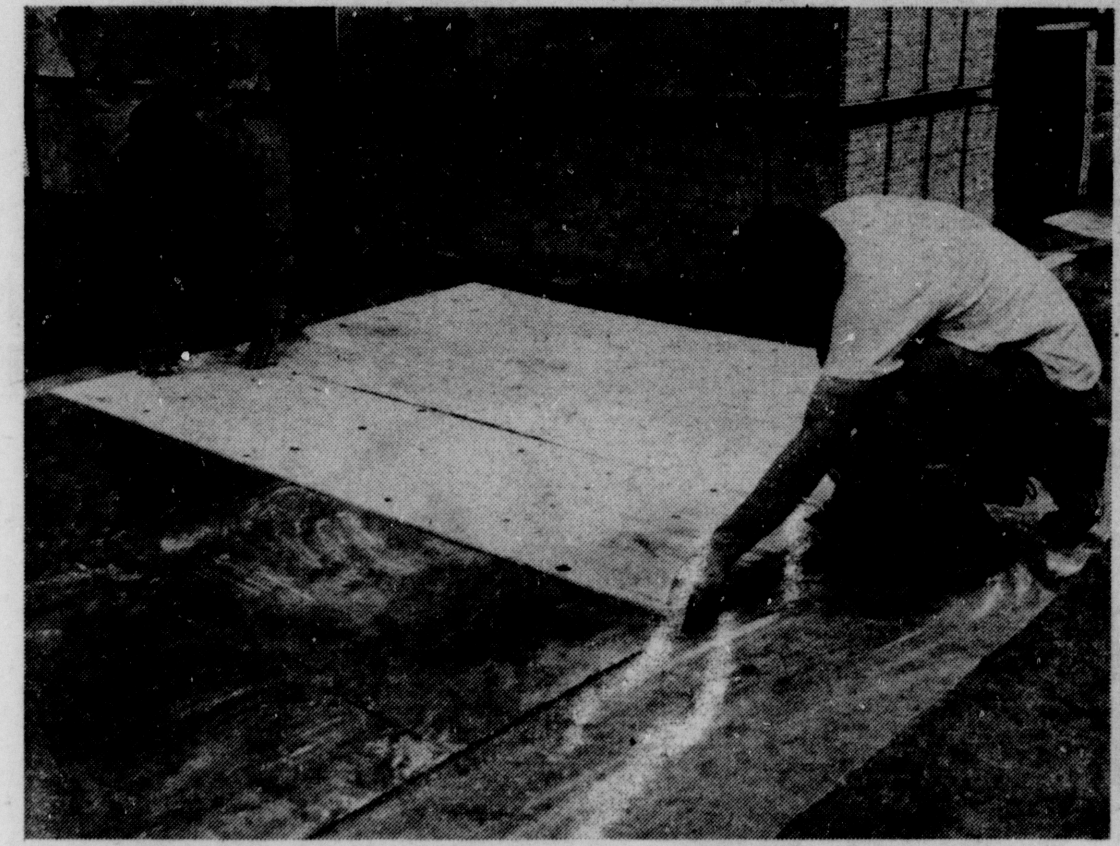
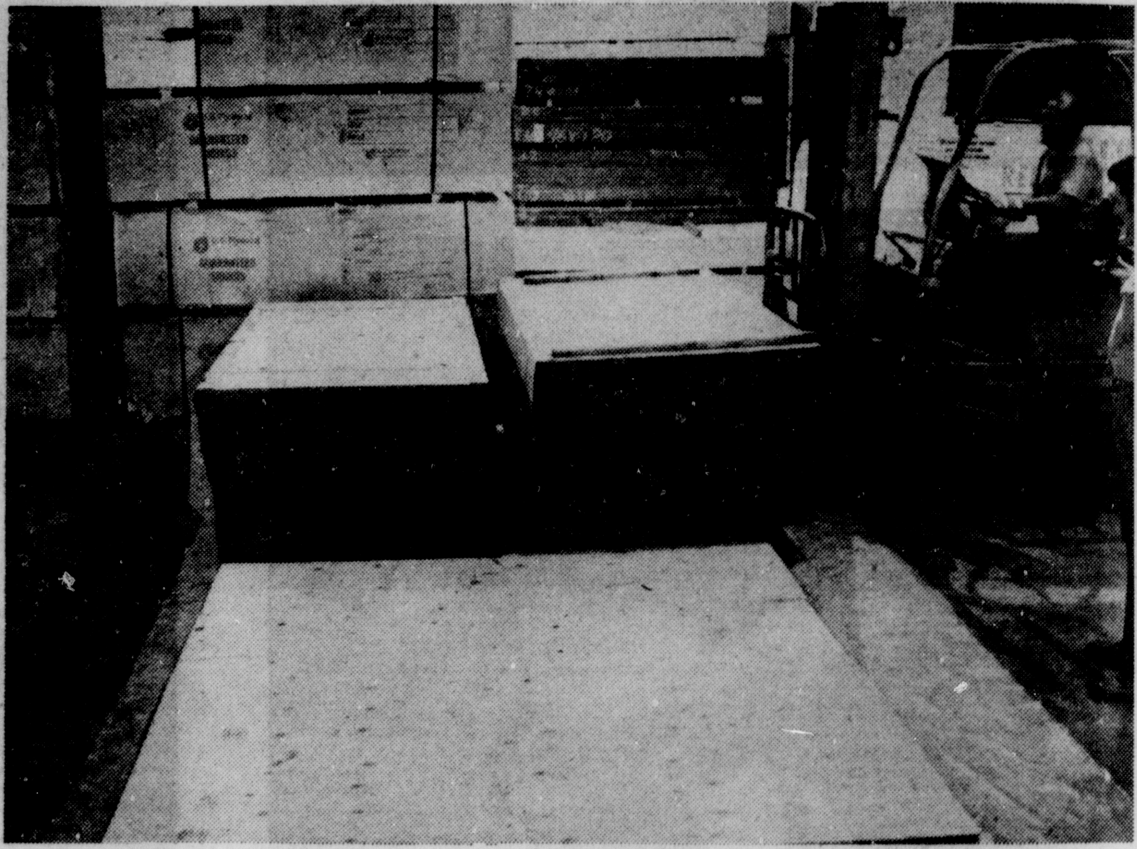
JOE WEISS, giving his older brother Dan a hand with the execution of his giant-sized painting for the exterior wall of a Mill Valley business building at 85 East Blithedale, joins four eight-by-four-foot panels of plywood together at left to form the 16-by-eight foot flats with which the artist will work. Then, at right, Joe prepares the surface of the plywood for lamination by spreading the adhesive over it. The plywood is Dan Weiss' unusual medium for his painting.





AT LEFT, Hal Weiss and son Joe put into place the second layer of plywood for the lamination. To be joined are sheets of three-eighth-inch plywood and three-quarter-inch plywood. And at right, Hal Weiss, an architect and builder, moves into place the heavy stacks of plywood that provided the necessary weight and compression to achieve the lamination. All this before young Dan Weiss could begin the actual execution of his art design.

NOW DAN WEISS begins with a skill saw to cut from the huge plywood flats the shapes that he will need to execute his design upon the building wall. After being sawed to form, the plywood pieces will be colored, and then affixed to the building wall. The completed painting measures 94 feet in length, 11 feet high, and the young artist believes it is the second largest in the West.

He Paints With Plywood And A Saw

Dan Weiss Has Developed His Own Distinctive Technique For Art

By DON KEOWN

Any one man show of the art of 21-year-old Dan Weiss — and there have been a number of them — requires, first and foremost, a lot of wall space.

Consider the dimensions of young Weiss' latest painting.

It measures 11 feet tall and 94 feet long, and embellishes an exterior wall of a Mill Valley business building at Sunnyside and East Blithedale in Mill Valley.

Says its creator: "Except for a painting done by an artist in a parking lot in the state of Washington, it is probably the largest painting in the western states."

SIZE ISN'T the only distinguishing aspect of Weiss' work. He has developed an original technique that he calls "my environmental paintings."

His materials depend upon whether his work is for an interior or an exterior.

If the painting is to go inside a home or building, then he works with canvas, using scissors to cut it into generous-sized pieces in a myriad of geometric shapes, painting it (often all one brilliant color) and then affixing it to the wall in the desired pattern.

If the painting is for an exterior wall, then he works with plywood, using a skill saw to cut it into the geometric forms for painting and affixing.

HIS PIECES of canvas or plywood may vary from a couple of square feet to 30 square feet of surface, and a thickness of about two inches is preferred.

It's a technique that has already brought Weiss a considerable measure of recognition in Chicago where he is still a student at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and where, in six months, he will receive a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree.

In Chicago, he has had three one-man shows, participated in two group shows, has completed five commissioned paintings, and has shared two large commissions with another artist.

HE WAS APPOINTED to the Illinois Arts Council Advisory Board at 19 as its youngest member by Leonard Pas, the council's executive director who had previously commissioned a Weiss painting for his home.

Other commissions have come for the walls of offices or homes of professional men — doctors, lawyers, etc.

The shared commission was with Othello Anderson for the Western Asbestos Co. industrial building on Chicago's West Side in the heart of the city.

The two transformed a barren and drab exterior wall, exposed to heavy motor and foot traffic, into a strikingly colorful "canvas."

THE CHICAGO Tribune took highly favorable critical notice of their work.

Weiss and Anderson also shared a commission for what they call "the molehill project" —a series of 22 paintings, each artist to do 11, to brighten the subway system's foot passenger tunnels connecting Chicago's Civic Center with State Street.

The two worked with David Stahl, then deputy to Mayor William Daley and ngw the city comptroller, in developing the project.

THE WORK, however, has not come off because of a lack of money. But Weiss is hopeful that the delay is only temporary, and that eventually the necessary funds will be allocated so that the project can proceed.

Exactly five years ago today, on Sept. 16, 1967, Dan Weiss was the subject of a feature story in the San Rafael Independent-Journal.

He was then a San Rafael High School junior and football star, enjoying the thrill of his first one-man art show —at the University of California Student Center in Berkeley.

His interest in art, he told reporter Jim Brewer, had been sparked by his art instructor Mrs. Pat Larrick in his freshman year at San Rafael High.

"SHE INSPIRED me," he said, "and I began noticing the styles used by other artists and worked a lot on my own from there."

But, recalls Weiss, his environmental painting technique had not yet then developed, "and actually I was painting pretty much by the traditional methods at that time, although expressing my own ideas and philosophies."

At that time, too, his art, football and his studies shared Dan Wiss' interest with music, and he was considering a career as a jazz pianist and composer.

IN THE YEARS that have passed, music has become sec-

WITH BRUSH in hand and using a rubber-based finish, Dan Weiss touches up the colors that fit his preconceived design to the plywood shapes upon the wall of the Mill Valley business building. Here the "painting" is virtually complete, covering the entire wall of the structure on its Sunnyside exposure. The young artist has attracted widespread recognition with similar work in the Chicago area where he is studying and creating. For similar indoor paintings, he uses canvas instead of plywood, but his approach is similar. And he calls the technique "environmental paintings."

The Environmental Art Of Dan Weiss

ondary to his painting, "although it remains a strong interest and a source of personal enjoyment."

He and fellow painter Othello Anderson, "a very fine sax player," have given five performances in Chicago — for the Goodman School of Drama, for the Art Institute of Chicago, and for churches.

"My roots remain in jazz," says pianist Weiss, "but we did mostly contemporary and original music."

WEISS IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Weiss of San Rafael. His father is an architect and builder.

Says Dan: "I was exposed to the architectural influence all my life — the concept of making use of space, and not letting it use you, and of transforming the unused and the drab into the functional or the aesthetic."

His individualistic environmental painting technique, which he has been practicing now for four years, is, he feels, a natural outgrowth of that influence.

HE HAS BEEN spending the summer in Marin on vacation, but is returning to Chicago now to resume his studies and his work.

The commission for the Mill Valley job came from 20th Century Homes, the owner of the building that houses three businesses and professional offices.

Weiss was especially pleased with the reception given his plans and designs for the painting by the Mill Valley Architectural Commission.

"THERE WASN'T an objection," he says, noting he had approached the commission with some trepidation, after sitting through a long agenda "in which they really seemed to be tearing into things."

The Mill Valley painting consists of 24 pieces affixed to the stucco wall.

To begin the execution of his design, Weiss, working with the help of his father and his brother Joe, joined together four eight-by-four-foot panels of plywood to form 16-by-eight-foot flats with which to work.

A LAMINATION of three-eighth-inch plywood with a layer of three-quarter-inch plywood was achieved with the help of heavy stacks of plywood whose weight provided the necessary compression.

A skill saw was used to cut the plywood panels into the desired shapes and pieces. Neoprene, a rubber derivative, was first applied to the plywood as a cover, then a rubber-based finish applied as the color coat. The colors are a rust or tile red and a soft green that young Weiss had selected as harmonizing with the building and with the Mill Valley mood and setting. The plywood pieces are then put into place and "touched up."

The color of the wall,interior or exterior, upon which he will be working is often a determining factor for Weiss in working out his design and selecting its hues.

HE DOESN'T repaint the wall, but accepts it as it is, and works from there. "I see that as part of the challenge," he says.

Back in 1967, Dan Weiss told I-J reporter Jim Brewer: "Painting has made me sensitive to others. Through it, I have learned to respect people's thoughts and understand why they laugh and cry,"

Such statements are typical of the thoughtful, articulate young Marinite, who has found his artistic and social horizons expanding as he has broadened the scope of his canvases to wall-length dimensions. And who has achieved a major reputation in Midwestern art circles even before he has completed his schooling.

Now, returning to Chicago, center of that reputation and site of that schooling, he has left his home county of Marin a striking example of its own of the kind of creative work that has won him the applause of Chicago critics, the confidence of Chicago officialdom, and the patronage of Chicago connoisseurs.

Improvement Club: 70 Years For A Better San Rafael

Civic Group Has Worked Effectively

By DOROTHY GARDINER

The pesky, irritating and frequent disease-carrying mosquito spurred a group of prominent Marin men and women to form one of this county's oldest clubs — and one of the first improvement clubs in the state.

At the turn of the century Marin was infested by swarms of mosquitoes, including the malaria-bearing anopheles species, that made living here akin to residing in the tropics.

Residents and visitors venturing out of doors swathed themselves in layers of mosquito netting, and smoking smudge pots lined thoroughfares throughout the county.

IN THE SPRING of 1902 there was a meeting of "far-sighted San Rafael women who saw a need for a village Improvement Society in the growing community," wrote the late Winifred MacIntosh Menzies.

These women, aided by their husbands, organized the San Rafael Improvement Club and declared war on the pesky insect.

Mrs. Menzies, who wrote her history of the club in 1936, joined the group in 1905, a year after she and her bridegroom, Robert Menzies, arrived in San Rafael from England.

(Their home, next to the Robert Dollar estate on today's Mission Avenue, was razed in 1971.)

THE SAN RAFAEL Improvement Club held its first meetings at the old Gordon Opera House on Fourth Street, the Lodge (today's Marin County Historical Society Museum and headquarters) at Boyd Park, and the old San Rafael City Hall.

MRS. ART AVIRON, the current president, presides over a luncheon meeting of the San Rafael Improvement Club in the clubhouse at Fifth Avenue and H Street, San Rafael. The club, formed in 1902, now has a membership of 118, but next week begins a membership drive which, it is hoped, will increase that figure substantially. Eight years ago, the club had 150 members.

By-laws were drawn up by attorney Vincent Neale and his English-born wife was elected the club's first president, a post she held until 1916.

Among the founding members were wealthy San Francisco banking and tugboat tycoon William Babcock and his wife, Julia, who became the club's first treasurer.

YEARS LATER Mrs. Babcock became known as the "matriarch of Marin" after willing her multi-million dollar estate for the formation of the Babcock Memorial Foundation. She died in 1954 at the age of 93.

The Babcock estate, Edgehill, is today part of the Dominican College campus.

Mrs. George Pinckard became the club's first secretary and other founding members included Mrs. Thomas Wintringham of San Rafael; Mrs. Edward G. Stetson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Cushing, the first settlers of today's Mill Valley, and Mrs. Arthur W. Foster, wife of the president of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad Co.

FAIRHILLS, THE former Foster estate, is the site of the residential area that bears that name.

Mrs. Menzies, who came down with "a beautiful case of old-fashioned malaria, chills and fever" after her arrival in Marin, credited four men with "helping the club achieve our present enviable position."

They were Vincent Neale for his "counsel" and "legal knowledge;" Babcock for "aid in every crisis, interest in activities and financial support;" George Page for "community spirit" by assuming duties of "town trustee in order to start proper mosquito control," and

FIRST PRESIDENT of the San Rafael Improvement Club was Mrs. Vincent Neale. She held the post from 1902 to 1916. And it was her attorney-husband who drew up the by-laws for the organization.

Charles Jensen for "practical advise and assistance."

ALTHOUGH THE club's "main object was to control or eliminate the mosquito," members also "planted shade trees along the hot, dusty roads. This work cost several thousand dollars a year which came from member's dues and proceeds of entertainments," Mrs. Menzies stated.

(By 1907 club members were busy planting some 10,000 trees along San Rafael streets. Many of those lining Fifth Avenue today are survivors of the project.)

The fund-raising entertainment events "were done in a big way," according to Mrs. Menzies, with "affairs in the afternoon followed by some dramatic performance in the evening."

(SOME OF THE plays presented were authored by founding president Neale.)

"Everybody helped, everybody came and to take in $1,000 was an every-day affair," Mrs. Menzies reported, "with some takes over $1,500."

In those days San Rafael was still called the "village." Streets and roads were unpaved and the population so small everybody knew everyone else by name.

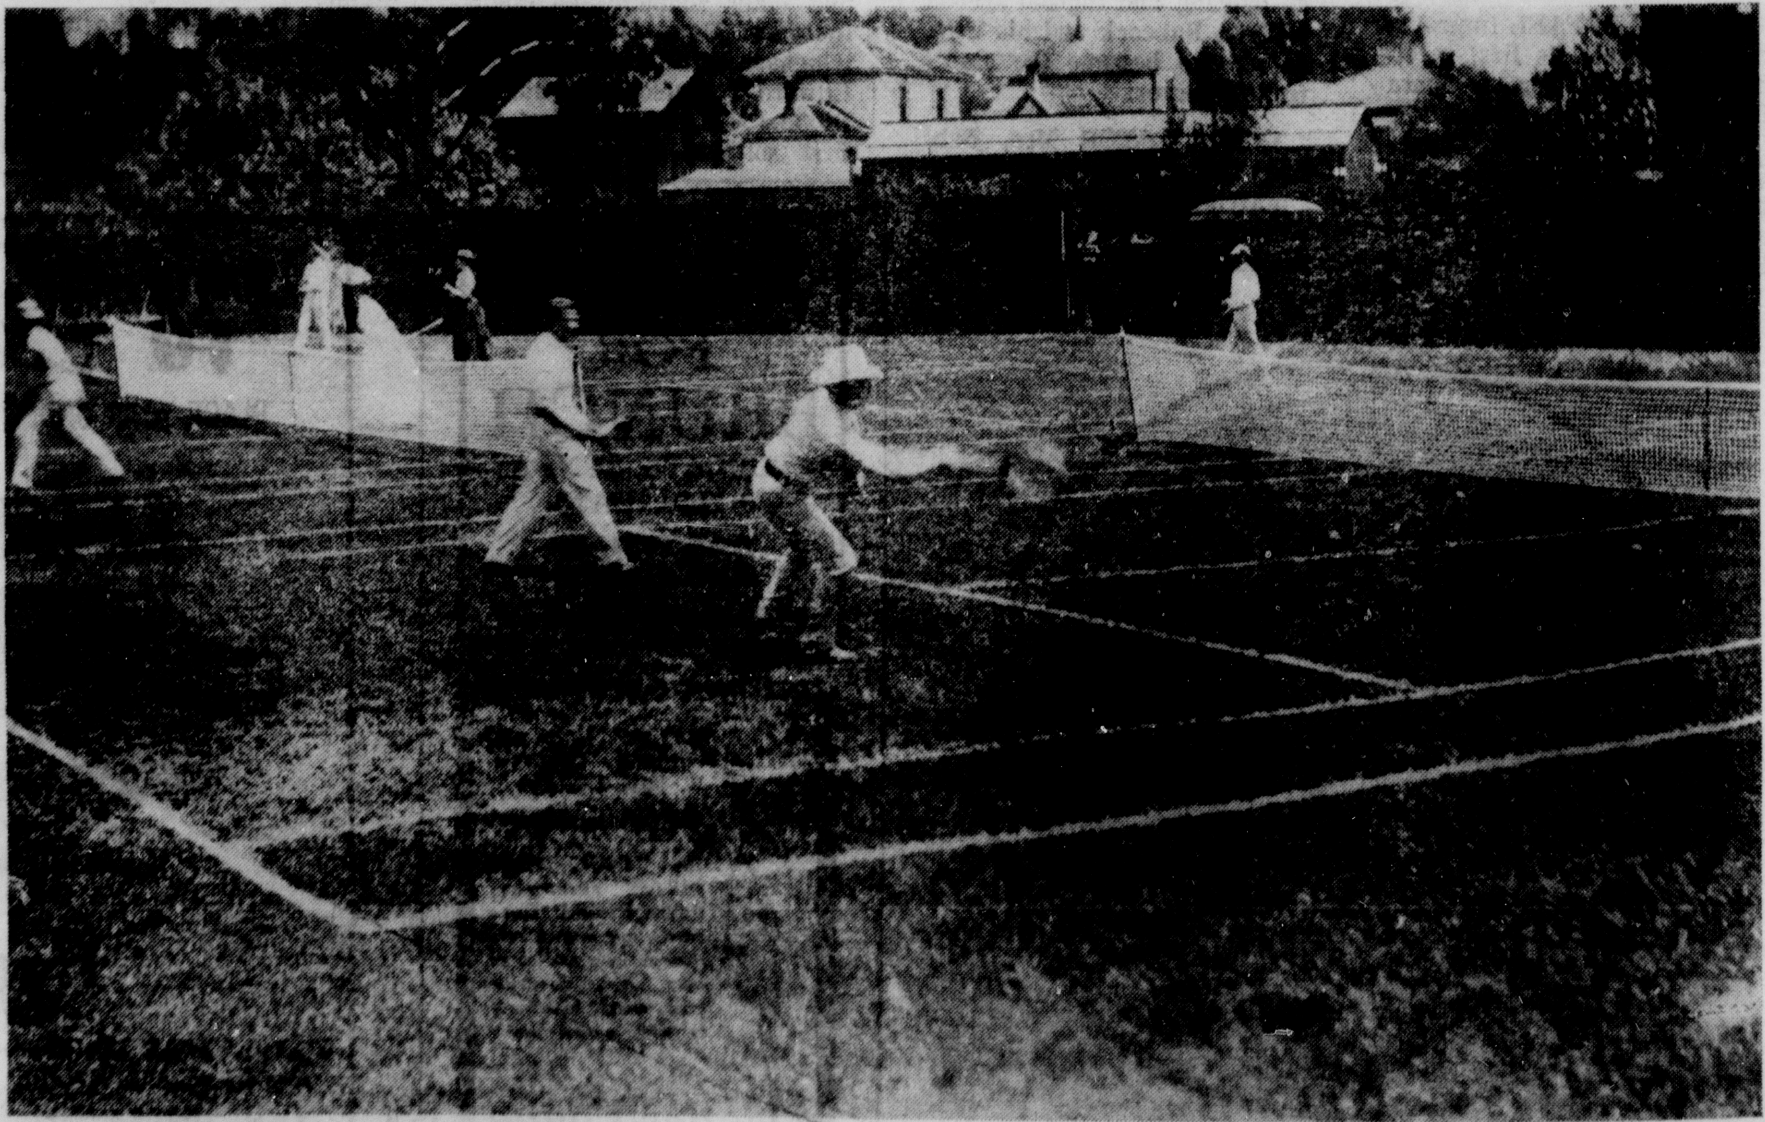
THE CLUBHOUSE of the San Rafael Improvement Club was the Victor Building at San Francisco's 1915 Panama Pacific International Exposition. It was purchased by the club after the fair and brought across San Francisco Bay by barge, then remodeled for the Fifth and H Street site.



BEFORE THE property at Fifth Avenue and H Street in San Rafael became the location for the clubhouse of the San Rafael Improvement Club, it was part of the huge Arthur W. Foster estate, and the scene of spirited lawn tennis games such as the ones under way here.

days when the gentlemen helped as well as the ladies," Mrs. Menzies remembered, with the men often handing over "beautiful, shining five-dollar gold pieces . . . and refusing change."

The entertainments were well advertised with slogans such as: "If you like the mosquito, its hum and its bite, don't come to our show on Saturday night."

According to San Rafael Improvement Club records one such "entertainment," called a Floral Carnival, staged at Boyd Park on May 20, 1911, featured "the high school orchestra, a

SOME OF MARIN'S most prominent women in civic and social affairs have played major roles in the activities of the San Rafael Improvement Club. Mrs. Robert Menzies, left, joined the club in 1905, and in 1936 wrote a history of the organization that is the source of much valuable information on the club's early years and accomplishments. Georgia Wintringham, center, served as chairman of the club's San Rafael Tree Committee for 30 years. Her mother was one of the founders of the club. And Mrs. William (Julia) Babcock, matriarch of Marin society, was one of the founders and the club's first treasurer.

maypole, dancing, kinder-symphony, Punch and Judy, booths, grabs, peanuts, guards of honor, scouts and knights."

MRS. MICHAEL H. DeYoung, wife of founding co-publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle, performed.

(The DeYoung's former San Rafael country home, Meadowlands, is also preserved today as part of the Dominican College campus.)

The show also featured vaudeville, sideshows, confetti and a supper served on the grounds.

If the club collected the sums Mrs. Menzies reported, the turn-out must have been tremendous with 25 cents admission charged for adults and a dime for youngsters.

THE CLUB USED the funds to hire Paul H. Eckelman, a pioneer in mosquito abatement, who made a study categorizing the variety of mosquitoes plaguing the county.

On June 1, 1907, property owners were sent a notice reading:

"If you are troubled by mosquitoes, they are probably bred locally, possibly on your own premises."

Those needing "help" were to send for Eckelman "who will assist you in your search."

GALLONS OF crude oil were dumped into ditches and low-lying marshlands, favorite breeding grounds of the insect.

Improvement Club members also watched street conditions and at a Feb. 6, 1908, meeting Flora Gow reported:

"Some of the streets are in very bad condition . . . especially Second Street. If gravel were put in the streets it would make them both look better and would be more convenient for traffic."

THE CLUB'S pioneer interest in trees and town beautification eventually led to involvement in conservation, decades before ecology became popular.

According to club records in 1919 the organization was responsible for the appointment of a warden to look after San Rafael's trees.

The following year the city charter was amended, establishing a San Rafael Tree Committee.

am's daughter, Georgia, who as a teen-ager began attending Improvement Club meetings along with her mother, served as chairman of this committee for 30 years.

(After Miss Wintringham's death at age 83 in 1968 the members of the club planted a tree intheir clubhouse garden in her memory.)

For years the club's Tree Planting and Preservation Committee, under the leadership of Miss Wintringham's mother, supervised the spraying and trimming of trees throughout the city.

IN 1915 THE club was "influential" in forming the Marin County Mosquito Abatement District.

By this time, according to club records, the malaria-carrying anopheles species had been exterminated in the county.

According to an undated article in the club archives published in the San Rafael Daily Independent under the column, Marin County 20 Years Ago (that presumably ran in 1935):

"The San Rafael Improvement Club relinquished its mosquito abatement work and turned over its equipment to the Mosquito Abatement District No. 1.

"IT RECOMMENDED that Paul Eckelman who had been employed by the club for 11 years to carry on abatement work be retained ..."

Relieved of time consuming mosquito abatement duties, the club now turned its attention to finding a permanent clubhouse.

In 1915 the members leased about an acre of land at Fifth Avenue and H Street from Arthur W. Foster. The site, part of Foster's mammoth estate, was occupied by tennis courts.

FOSTER WAS to be paid $100 annual rent and the club held an option to purchase the property for $2,300 in "United States gold coin."

The next year, when buildings erected for the 1915 Panama Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco were put up for sale, the members decided to purchase the Victor Building.

In the meantime, the building was given to Leon Douglass, chairman of the Victor Co., who

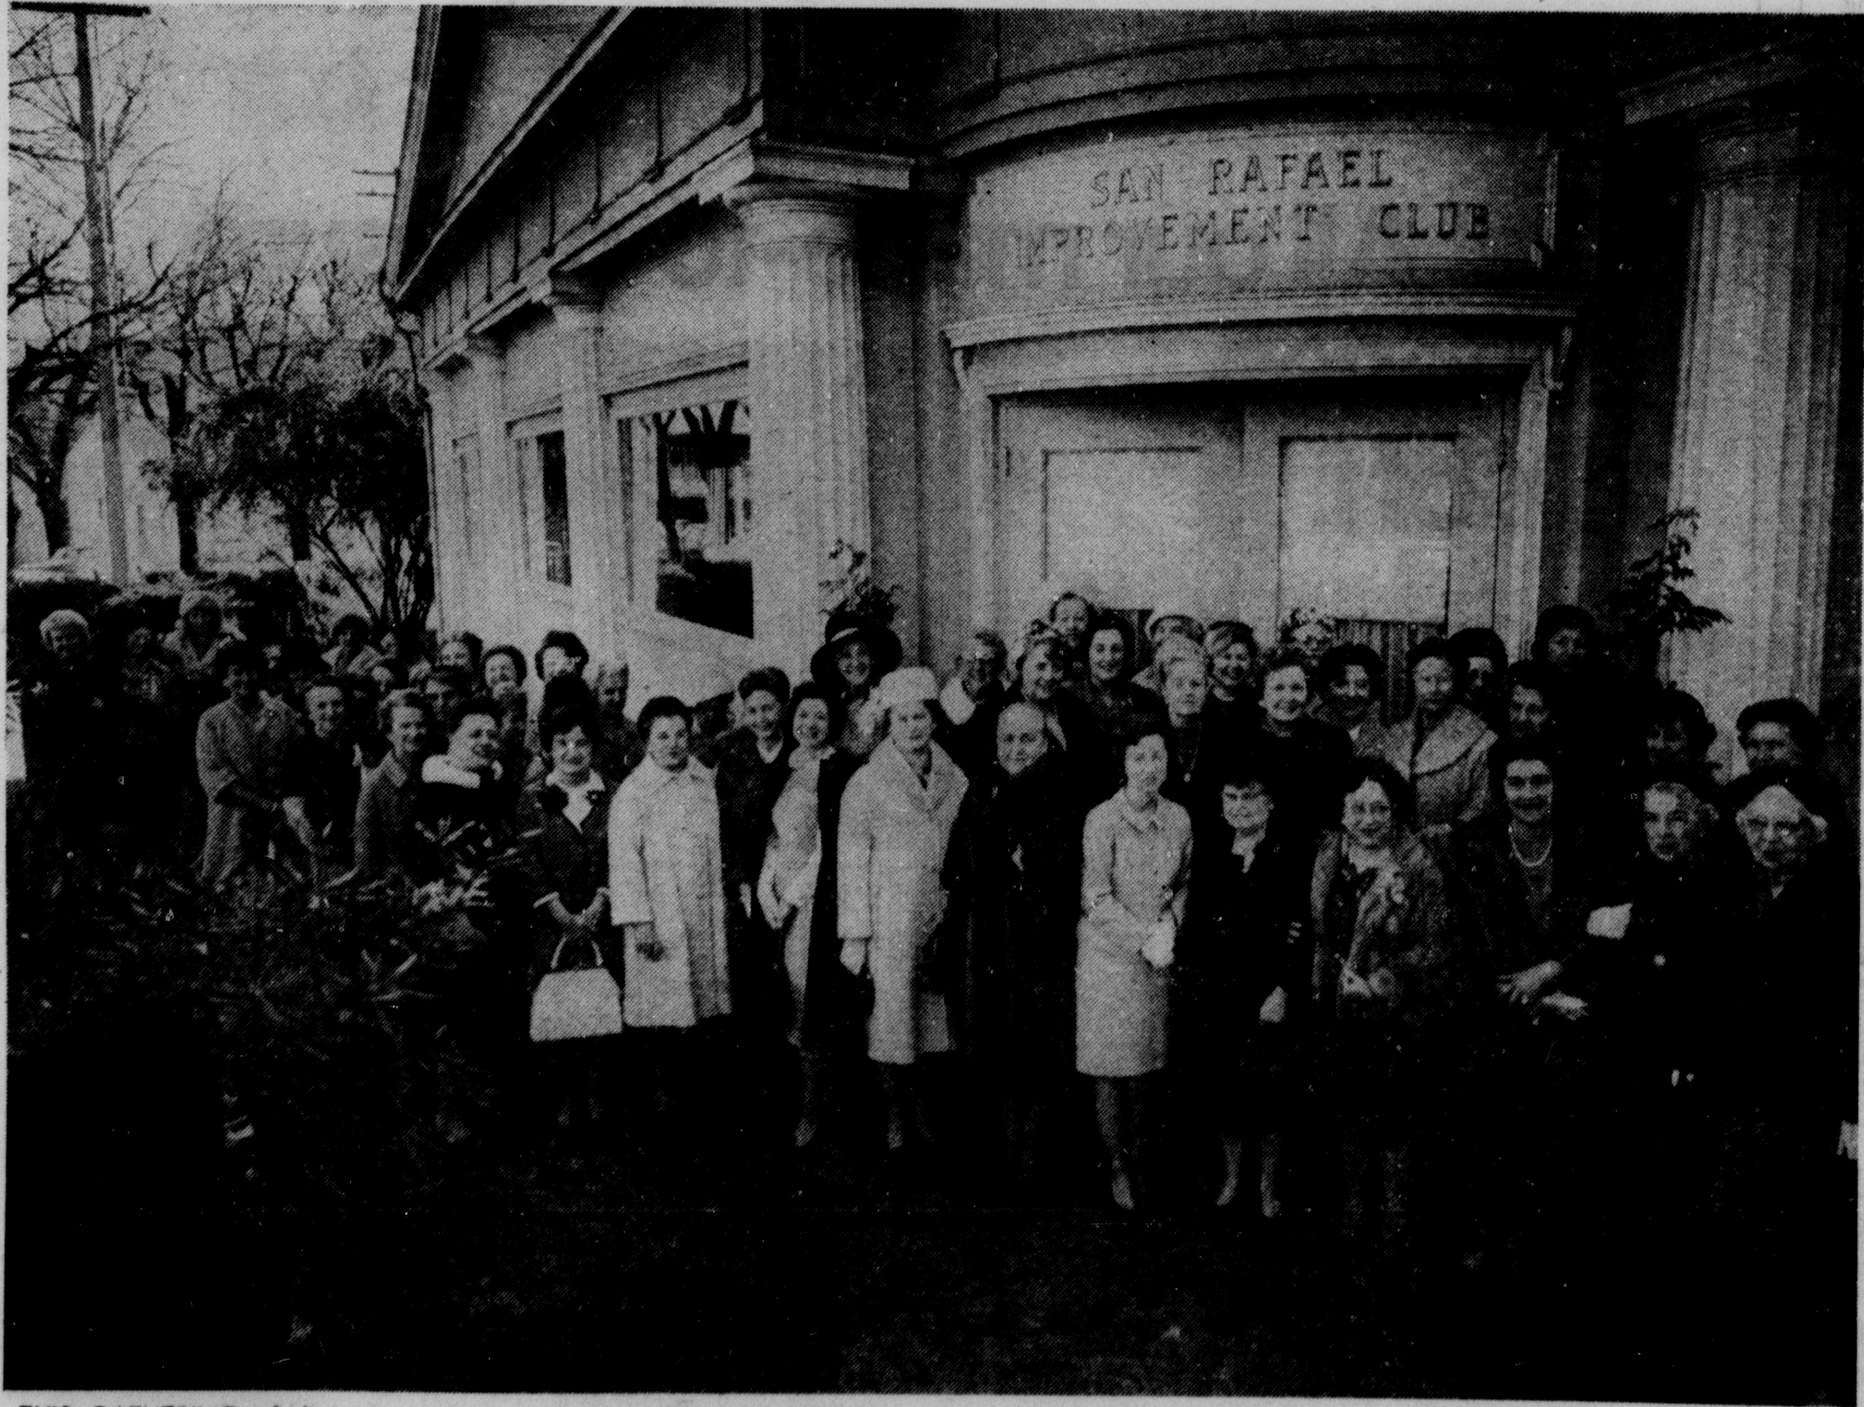
THE YEAR WAS 1924 and the women of the San Rafael Improvement Club, in the costumes of many lands, were enjoying an All-Nations Luncheon at their clubhouse. It was just one of many special events conducted by the fast-growing and very-active club. Mrs. Fred E. Sawyer was then president.



THIS GATHERING of the women making up the membership of the San Rafael Improvement Club was photographed at the same site as the picture at the top of the page, but 43 years later — in 1967. The club was celebrating more than 50 years at the Fifth and H location.

resided in a palatial home on Lincoln Avenue. (This home later became the Paloma Inn.)

DOUGLASS, NOT wanting the structure, sold it to a man called Sonnenchien "for a trifle," according to Mrs. Menzies' history.

The club eventually purchased it from him for $500.

According to an article by the late Florence Donnelly, Independent-Journal historian and an honorary member of the club, published Sept. 1, 1962:

The "building was brought across the bay in sections by barges from San Francisco and up the San Rafael Canal to be assembled" on the land leased from Foster.

THE BUILDING had neither "a ceiling or roof," according to Mrs. Donnelly, and had to be remodeled with the pillars that today face the street, "added for support."

Work finished in 1916, the clubhouse opened with a performance of Anatole France's "Dumb Wife."

With the outbreak of World War I, the members became involved with war work and "interest lagged and dues fell off. We could hardly keep our club going," Mrs. Menzies recalled.

THE CLUBHOUSE was turned over to the Red Cross as a temporary headquarters and one member suggested the "sale of the property and division of the proceeds among the five or six of us who are left," she added.

The club was saved due to the efforts of founding member Marion Stetson, who was then president, Mrs. Menzies recalled.

In 1921 the club founded the first Parent-Teacher Assn. in San Rafael and a year later the Improvement Club was reorganized joining the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

(TODAY THE San Rafael Improvement Club is a member of the Federation's Golden Gate District. Last April the district presented two awards to the club for projects on California Heritage and Scholarship and Public Education.)

In 1923, at Mrs. Babcock's urging, the members picked up their option and purchased the clubhouse site.

During the next four decades membership grew into the hundreds. There were performances, luncheons and meetings, including many where members dressed in costume such as an All-Nations Luncheon in 1924.

THE CLUB members worked for roadside improvements, with one of their main projects the paving of the road leading to Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

They had a hand in naming the Ross Valley's Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and launched one of the first campaigns against billboards in the county.

In 1925 a spruce on the clubhouse property became the first

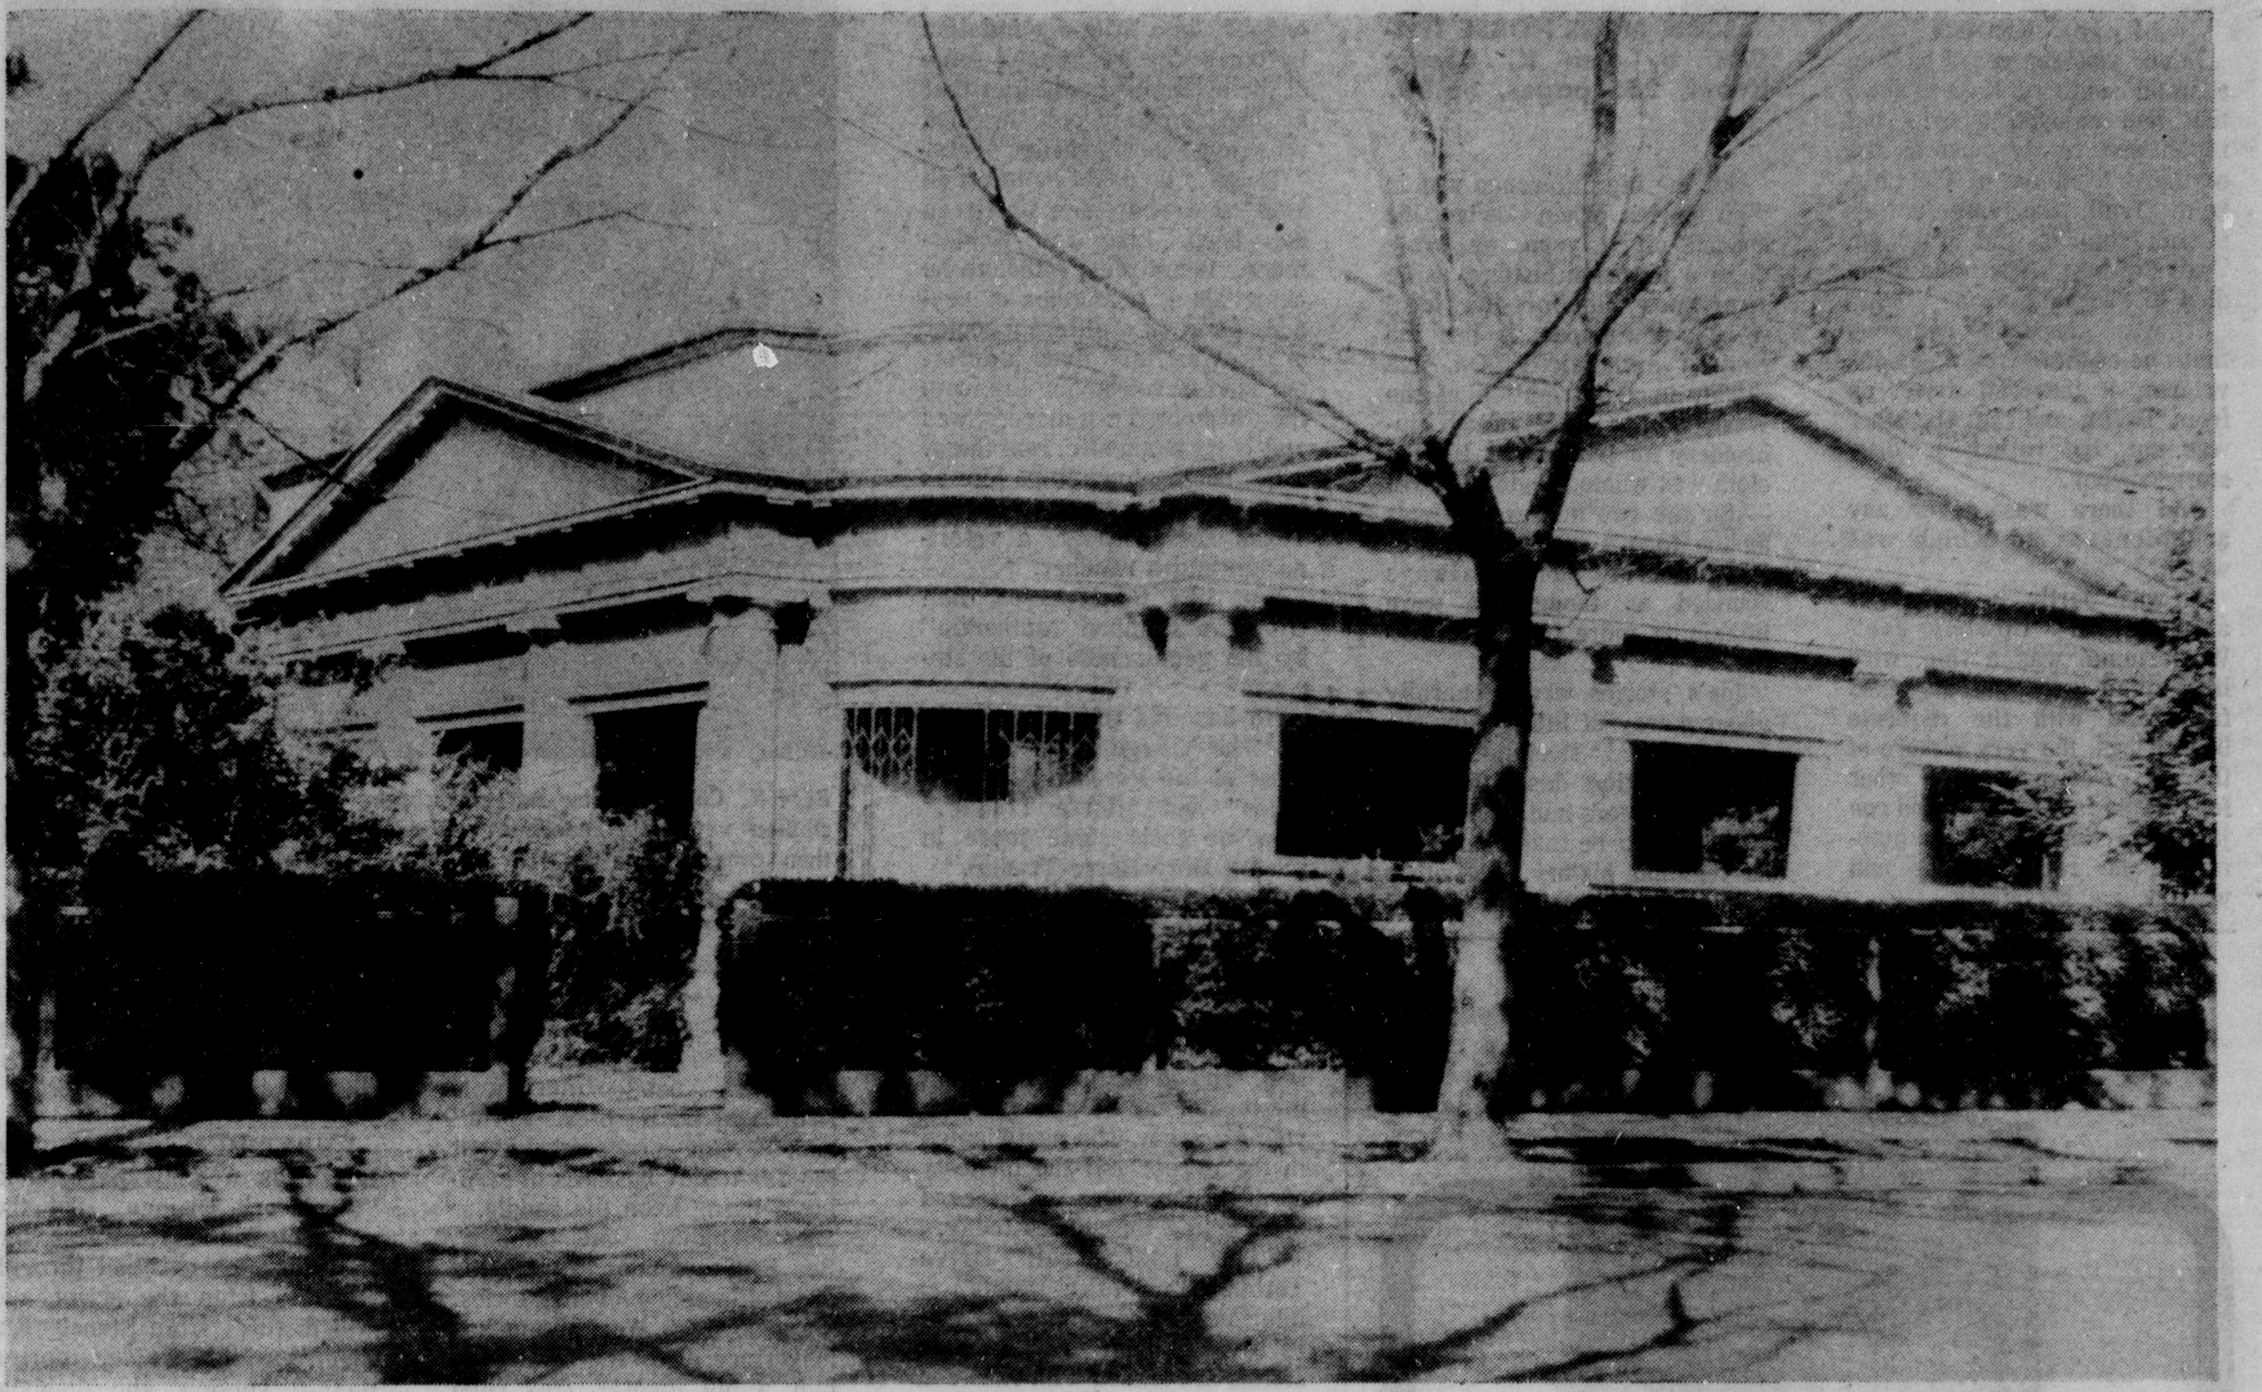
In 70 Years The Women Have Done Everything From Fighting Mosquitoes To Planting Trees



AN ESTABLISHED LANDMARK in the city of San Rafael is the San Rafael Improvement Club's clubhouse, reflecting the architectural taste of a bygone era, but still very much an impressive structure. Many Marinites, too, can recall the hedge surrounding the clubhouse from their earliest years in San Rafael.

outdoor tree to be lighted in the city at Christmas.

LATER THE women raised funds to pave H Street in front of the clubhouse, and in 1931 they formed the first Junior Women's Auxiliary in Marin.

Retaining their early interest in conservation they supported the founding of the Tamalpais State Park and later became a founding member of the Marin Conservation League.

During the dark days of the depression members raised funds to help the unemployed. In 1942 they brought the first Mobile Blood Band to Marin, loaning the clubhouse as the first blood bank headquarters.

DURING WORLD War II scrap metal drives were held, first aid classes given and thousands of cookies baked for service men overseas.

From the earliest years the club has also supported such organizations as the Marin Symphony, the Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scouts and has contributed generously to scholarship funds across the county.

Today the San Rafael Improvement Club continues to raise funds to support such projects as the planting of trees in the "fire-scarred acre in the Donner Burn of the Tahoe National Forest," reported Mrs. Art Aviron of San Rafael who is beginning her second term as club president.

TIME AND money are also given to such organizations as the Marin Music Chest, Marin Art and Garden Center, Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc. and rest homes.

The club for many years also has awarded a yearly $250 scholarship to a woman student at the College of Marin.

Funds today are raised from luncheons, fashion shows, art exhibits, bridge parties and the sale of Christmas decorations made by members of the club's garden section.

FUNDS ARE also obtained from the rental of the clubhouse for weddings and to such groups as the Weight Watchers. Use of the clubhouse is also donated to the Goldenaires, a group of senior citizens, and to the Marin County Historical Society.

Last year the club raised "about $600," Mrs. Aviron reported, adding that "it wasn't enough" and that the members hope to increase the amount this year.

Restoration and upkeep of the clubhouse property is a continual drain on the club's resources. This year concrete must be reinforced and flooring repaired, she added.)

ANOTHER PROBLEM facing the club is a falling off of membership, with 118 now belonging to the organization, Mrs. Aviron said.

When she joined the club eight years ago membership stood at 150.

In the old days "women wanted to get dressed up and out of the house," noted Mrs. Louis L. Walsh of San Rafael, club historian who served as president in 1941 and 1942.

Today, with so many clubs and organizations across the county, "they want to stay home and rest," she added.

MRS. AVIRON, who believes "a project is necessary to keep people interested," hopes the club will begin taking a more active role in civic affairs this coming year.

County and city officials will be welcome to speak at monthly meetings, usually held on first Tuesdays at the Improvement Club, she said.

(The club holds monthly meetings from September through June with the club's garden and book review sections also holding independent meetings at the clubhouse.

A MEMBERSHIP drive will be launched on Tuesday when the members begin their 71st year, according to Mrs. Aviron.

Mrs. Ragnar Thaning of San Rafael, newly elected membership chairman, will hold a series of orientation teas at her Culloden Park home.

Mrs. Thaning, chairman of the club's Lucas Valley Hospital Auxiliary at the County Farm 10 years ago, hopes to interest new members in volunteer work, possibly at Sonoma State Hospital where members now send handmade pieces of clothing and other articles to mentally-retarded youngsters.

A SECTION on the American home will also be inaugurated this year, Mrs. Aviron announced. Special meetings on interior decoration and gourmet cooking will be held throughout the year. Mrs. C. J. Fitzharris of San Rafael is chairman of the new section.

The San Rafael Improvement Club also has a representative on the Marin Motion Picture and Television Council and it sponsors a "Dial-A-Review" service at a local library where a list is available of television programs suitable for children.

The traditional interest in conservation has been maintained with an Improvement Club member serving as a representative on the Marin Conservation League. Other members volunteer time to staff the league office on Mondays.

IN RECENT years the club has also collected Betty Crocker coupons that, when redeemed by the firm, made possible the purchase of two kidney machines to be used in the Bay Area.

Last year members donated 13,000 hours of volunteer work on such projects as visiting the elderly in both convalescent and private homes.

This month, as today's San Rafael Improvement Club members begin their 71st year, they are following in footsteps of a group of women described by Winifred Menzies as:

". . . not thinking of themselves but of how they can make San Rafael a better place to live in . . ."

> "Of course, when he mentioned automobiles, it was just kind of a passing word. They hadn't cut too deep into the horse business; no such thing as a tractor existed to my knowledge; and nobody was too much worried about the future of the horse. We just assumed that we'd always have to have thousands of them and that they would be with us forever."

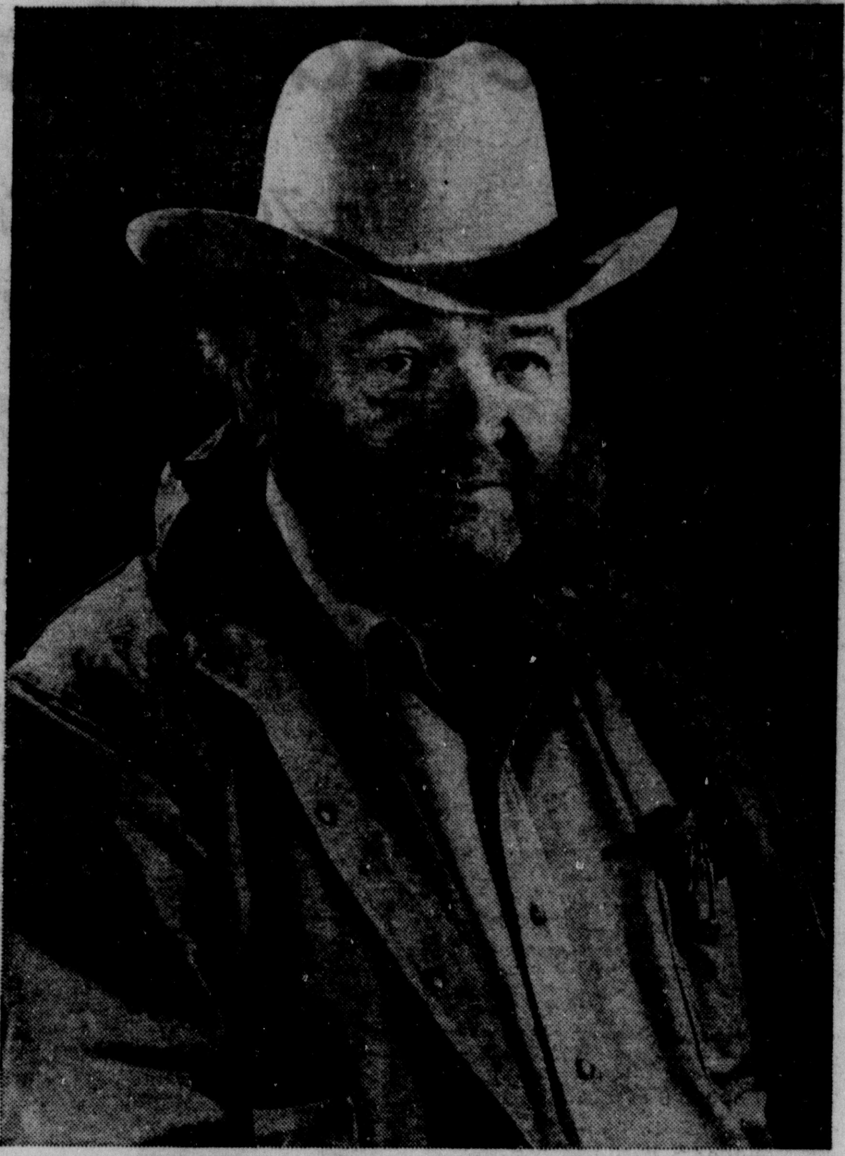
The Genuine Cowboy



BEN K. GREEN, after an early career as horse trader and cowboy, studied veterinary medicine in the United States and abroad, and then practiced in the Far Southwest in one of the last big horse countries in North America. Now back in his hometown of Cumby, Tex., he is a rancher and the author of four books recounting cowboy life in the Old West.

By DON KEOWN

SOME MORE HORSE TRADIN' by Ben K. Green; Knopf, 255 pages, $6.95.

In our younger years back in a small southern Kansas town that had enjoyed a brief but rough and rowdy past as the northern terminus of the Chisholm Trail, the community's membership in the Chisholm Trail Cowboys' Assn. had dwindled to two old-timers.

It was generally conceded that one of these was a genuine veteran of the trail drives up from Texas, and that the other was not, but rather a "drug store cowboy."

And there was never any argument as to which was which.

It was partly a matter of appearance. "Cowboy Joe" Weidermann was a thin, wiry little man with sun-darkened face, and with the requisite bowed legs, the very picture of the old ex-cowpoke. The other fellow was fat and fair, and one just knew that before the automobile he rode buggies and wagons, not horseback.

But the big difference was in their stories. When Cowboy Joe spieled off a yarn, or wrote down a piece on history, as he sometimes did for the local weekly newspaper, it has the ring of authenticity. Oh, Joe might, in the tradition of the West, add a little fancy embroidery for trimmings. But the cloth was whole. When his rival — for the two men were rivals as the town's official relics of its colorful past —always sounded as though he were imagining more than recollecting.

Joe's stories were generally about a way of life — how the cowboy lived, sleeping on the ground, eating dust, prodding reluctant steers and dogies. His stories could be taken seriously as regional history. The other man's could not. He was simply engaged in a little ego inflation by borrowing for himself some of the events and activities that he had probably only brushed up against in his earlier years.

There is no doubt as to which kind of cowboy Ben K. Green has been. Like Joe Weidermann, Ben Green, although he came along a number of decades later, in a different sector of the West, and lived a different kind of cowboying life from the Chisholm Trail drivers, was and is the authentic, real thing.

His biography stamps him as such. He has been a young Texas horse trader, a veterinarian and a rancher.

But, like Cowboy Joe, Ben Green is stamped "authentic" by the genuineness of his stories.

He has told them previously in "The Village Horse Doctor: West of the Pecos," Wild Cow Tales" and "Horse Tradin'." Now he teels some more in "Some More Horse Tradin'."

One might suspect that Green's stock of tales would be running thin. Not so. His newest collection is still filled with the flavor and the feeling of the Old West, told with wit and perception, and with just the right mixture of the brashness of the young cowboy who participated in the events and the modesty of the older, more experienced man telling the stories today.

"The Last Trail Drive Through Downtown Dallas" is hilarious. "The Shield Mares" is a spellbinder. And shorter stories are loaded with chuckles —and with insight into a way of life whose practitioners are becoming fewer and fewer upon his earth.

Ben Green's basic honesty is reflected in the fact that he doesn't always emerge the victor in the give-and-take of the trades that he recounts. It was a business back in the early 1900s in which "to cheat" the other man wasn't necessarily to have played unfair. In fact, that was the point of the whole transaction.

Some may blink at this kind of business ethics —although it was not confined to horse trading, and is hardly unknown today. More will flinch at the cowboys' attitude toward horses and other stock, as candidly recalled by Green. The sentimentality of the cowboy for his horse, or for horses in general, depicted in the movies and celebrated in western ballads, is largely missing from Green's stories. The cowboy regarded his mount as transportation, pure and simple, and treated him according to his performance.

And the cowboy could at times be guilty of appalling cruelty to a horse with a spirit and mind of its own, who balked at bending to man's will. There are more than a few incidents of this in Green's tales.

But it is an honest portrayal of the attitudes of what Green describes as "a rough young cowboy .. . not too much worried about the ills of the world" and very much concerned about the day-to-day business of earning a living from the saddle.

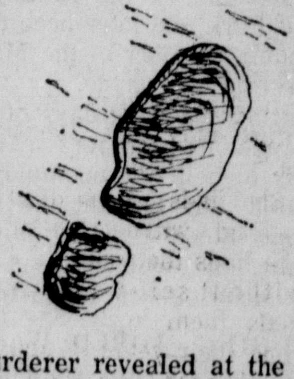
In including that thinking, Ben K. Green adds to the value and believability of his stories.

Cowboy Joe Weidemann has long since died. The town gave him a big funeral. (His rival received only the customary rites when he passed on to that great cattle trail —or drug store — in the skies). Thankfully, we still have a few Ben Greens around who can tell it like it was in the Old West.

PUBLISHED by Ballantine Books as a $3.95 paperback, "Clockwork Orange," not the novel by Anthony Burgess, but the story told instead through excerpts from the script and still pictures from Stanely Kubrick's much-praised motion picture version, the dialogue matched to the illustrations. An attempt, claims Kubrick, at a new and meaningful way of presenting a book about a film.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE PLAYERS AND THE GAME by Julian Symons; Harper & Row, 217 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.



In the suburbs of Rawley, a country-club atmosphere that will be familiar to all Marin readers even though it's in England, someone who who likes to call himself Dracula is killing for pleasure.

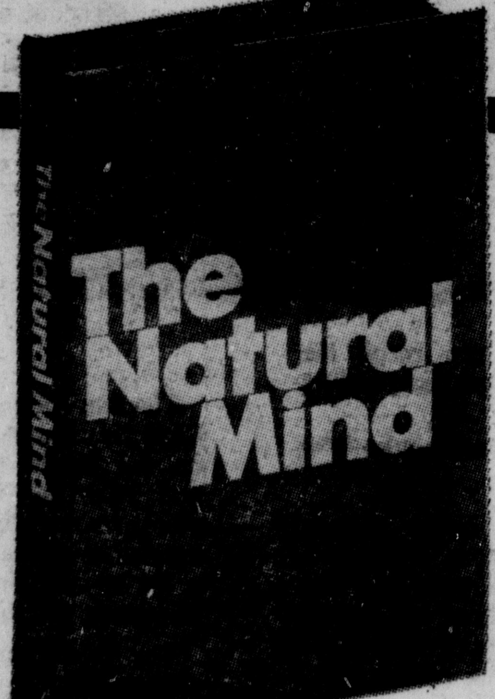
With his accomplice Bonnie he abducts young girls and tortues them to death with bizarre impersonality reminiscent of the Moors Murders and the Lonely Heart Murders.

All the while we follow the fortunes and misfortunes of a typical set of Rawley residents (with all their typical vices), we are aware that this maniac must be one of them. If you read very, very carefully there is one, just one, word clue to his identity.

So in this sense it is a traditional detective novel with the murderer revealed at the end. And a jolly good one too.

But Julian Symons, a truly adult author, has also written a brilliant novel on many layers. It's a deeply probing psychological analysis; it's touching and tragic, particularly in the central character who is subjected to the terrible pressures of success in the business world; and it's gripping in the extreme.

While highly recommended, this crime novel is not for the squeamish, since in its entirely convincing characterization some details of the horrific crimes are given.



THE NATURAL MIND offers a new way of looking at an old problem and a new hope of transcending it: the problem of the drugs that have become a part of life in America today.

The danger lies not in the drugs themselves but in an individual's misunderstanding of the relationship between the drugs and the states of consciousness it triggers.

Visitor Looks At U.S. Schools

SPEARPOINT by Sylvia Ashton-Warner; Knopf, 224 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Sylvia Ashton-Warner (Henderson), New Zealand teacher and open classroom advocate noted for her earlier book, "Teacher," came to the United States to help start an experimental school in the Colorado Rockies. What she found, and her impressions of American children and American education, are related in "Spearpoint."

Miss Ashton-Warner writes with exciting imagery and great imagination. Her philosophy of education is imaginative, too; and it is direct, clear, free from the fuzzy uncertainty that has produced its own meaningless language in American education circles.

As Mrs. Henderson, teacher, she has a formula: "Release the native imagery of our child and use it for working material." She has her own devices for doing this, and she tries them at the Colorado experimental school.

But permissiveness as it reigns in this "modern, progressive" school appals the modern, progressive teacher from New Zealand. There is no order, no discipline; since everyone is equal, the teachers are servants (or baby-sitters) of the children.

Reason is replaced by "I wanna" or "I do wanna." Mrs. Henderson, teacher, concludes that America's religion of the future may by "Wannadowanna."

She finds the children bright — and without enthusiasms. She finds them beautiful — and without self-discipline. She finds them knowledgeable beyond their years — and unable to think for themselves, instead becoming mirror-images of what they have seen on television.

"Spearpoint" is not a coldly critical book; in fact, it is a warm one. The writer loves the children. She makes allowances for the befuddled American teachers. But her keen perception leaves her troubled over the future of a people who have so lost their way in the education of their offspring.

The book is like the children: delightful, and deeply troubling.

'Women Of The Seventies'

WHAT'S A NICE GIRL LIKE YOU DOING IN A PLACE LIKE THIS? by Joyce Teitz; Coward McCann and Geoghegan, 285 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

The author describes her book as a look at female liberation in practice, but most Feminists will tell you that no woman can truly be "a liberated woman" until inequities in the law, social custom and insoitutions have been ended.

Yet Joyce Teitz attempts here to get beyond the argument and rhetoric to look at what she terms "women of the Seventies." She presents the life styles of 11 very different women in America who are outstanding because of their own accomplishments. You have probably heard of very few of them.

Though she has done something of a superficial job perhaps because she attempts to characterize so many individuals, Miss Teitz makes her point. She finds common denominators among the 11 women that may characterize "the woman of the Seventies": social and economic security and independence.

"They don't have to marry. If they marry and their husbands die, they will not find themselves in quite the void of the widow who derived income and status entirely through her husband."

They do not live in "a kind of feudal protectorate" as do many other women. They have a sense of doing something worthwhile, of having a purpose. They are livelier than most other women; they have wider social options, says author Teitz. And they have professional competence, carefully acquired. They have developed decisiveness and confidence, which most women, because of their continual conditioning, often lack.

Miss Teitz finishes with a plea to women to take control of their own lives. She herself is a 28-year-old Harvard lawyer. And, it is quite evident, in control of her own destiny.

Life Of A Librarian And Children's Friend

ANNE CARROLL MOORE, A Biography, by Frances Clarke Sayers; Atheneum, 284 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Jean Day.

Anne Carroll Moore is the story of a life, and, because she was so important a part of it, of a great movement. She lived from July 12, 1871, until the day of John Kennedy's inauguration, Jan. 20, 1961, nearly 90 years. During these years the concept of a special part of a library with libarians trained to introduce children to the world of reading was born and came to universal acceptance.

Mrs. Sayers tells of the New England childhood as the youngest, and only daughter of the eight children of Luther and Sarah Moore of Limerick, Me.

Luther Moore was a lawyer and a farmer, who recognized the special gifts of his daughter very early and encouraged her interest in books and study. After his death in 1892, Anne became involved in the rearing of two motherless nieces, so she was 24 when she entered Pratt Institute Library School in Boston.

Upon graduation, she became head of the Library for Children at Pratt, a venture only two months old at the time she took over. She stayed there 10 years, until September of 1906, when she came to New York Public Library to head the work with children — a post she held until her retirement in 1941. In 1942 she taught at the graduate school of librarianship at University of California Berkeley. During her career she filled many assignments lecturing and teaching at the university level throughout the country.

She was also an authoritative critic of children's books.

Upon this barebones outline of a rich, varied life, Mrs. Sayers fills in all the fascinating details of friendships with authors, such as Walter de la Mare and Beatrix Potter. She delineates the many battles fought in the course of opening up the world of books to all children without the old emphasis being placed on clean hands.

The story of ACM's involvement with the case of Leo Frank, accused of murder in an anti-Semitic community in Georgia and convicted, despite the sustained efforts of the lady who had put books in his young hands, is a spellbinder. The text of many letters written by ACM and by others to her are a treat, because of the revealed personalities of all the writers — from the sparse New England phrases of her father to the beautiful prose of Walter de la Mare.

Clear, concise expression marks Mrs. Sayer's style, and the book flows with ease from high point to high point with no untidy wandering.

I have been told that in the 1930s Mrs. Sayers alternated Saturdays with Marion Hayes Cain of local children's theater fame in telling children's stories in the Sausalito library. A Sausalito lady, familiar with that period, avows that the cat in the title roll of "Mr. Tidy Paws," Mrs. Sayers well known children's book, also lived in Sausalito.

In any case Frances Clarke Sayers succeeded ACM as superintendent of children's work in the New York Public Labrary and held this post until 1952. Now the widow of Alfred Henry Paul Sayers, she lives in Ojai, Calif.

Problems Of The Woman

SPEAK TO ME OF LOVE by Dorothy Eden; Coward McCann and Geoghegan, 384 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

This readable novel is about Bea Bonnington, Victorian heiress, who marries for love but is married for her money.

Her life-long devotion to a charming wastrel husband has various effects on her children and her career.

For Bea, an early-day fem-lib type in spite of herself, inherits and successfully manages a great London department store.

The situations and conflicts with which Bea is confronted are those which fascinate most women readers.

Can a woman give equal affection to her husband and to her children? Will the demands of her career damage her children? Is forgiveness — of children, of an erring husband — always the "right" thing?

Dorothy Eden, widely read author of family and Gothic romances, shows Bea Bonnington coping with these questions, coming to terms with the facts of the female condition.

Mrs. Eden writes believable dialogue, colorful descriptions — especially of Victorian costumes and interiors — and her plot moves swiftly.

It's The Walker Who Sees Rome The Best

By KIMMIS HENDRICK

The Travel Pages

ROME, Italy — Let's reverse the old saying and make it that all roads lead "from" Rome.

This is really the way most travelers think of this great city. Afterward, anyway. They think of the world's debt to Rome's 2,500 years of history for influences on law, literature, religion, business enterprise and art.

It's the walker who sees Rome best, learns most, has most to remember.

THERE ARE other ways to see it, as by American Express or CIT tour trips. But first-timers will be glad they took the advice of old-time Rome lovers and parked their car in some garage. Rome traffic has to be seen to be believed, and it's more fun to see it than to get snarled up in it.

What's on the list for a first visit?

The Roman Forum, of course, and the nearby Coliseum. The Piazza Navona and the Pantheon. St. Peter's — and preferably for a second day — the Vatican Museum, especially the Sistine Chapel. The hills of Rome, particularly the Palatine and the Capitoline. And inevitably the fountains.

AND ALL MIXED in with these treasures, dynamic and fascinating, the modern city. There's no "old" Rome set apart from a "new" Rome; they're of a piece.

Anybody, man or woman, who walks down the handsome Via Condotti for the first time may get so distracted by the shops that a whole Rome visit will become a shopping spree. Silk ties and custom-made shirts for men, knitwear and leather goods and jewelry for women, children's clothing — at least they'll keep window gazers excited for hours.

Rome's restaurants offer further temptation.

THE FIRST TIME my wife and I went to Rome, a movie-making friend said, "Be sure to have lunch or dinner at Tre Scalini in Piazza Novona — and don't miss the dessert!" He meant the restaurant's ice cream specialty, for which we have returned innumerable times — chocolate tartufo.

Rome's the place you see everybody. It's Italian, yes, but thoroughly cosmopolitan. It's keyed to travelers. It's not necessarily expensive. Our last lovely lunch at Tre Scalini cost less than $4 each.

Ranieri's near the Spanish Steps is another fine restaurant famous for a kind of quiet elegance. Many people think Il Passetto near the Piazza Novona serves the best food in Rome.

THE POSSIBILITIES seem beyond numbering; consult the guidebooks of Frommer and Fielding, or that invaluable guide published in limited edition by the Holland-American Line called "Hand-Me-Down."

Anyone longing for scrambled eggs or a chicken salad will enjoy Babbington's Tea Room, also near the Spanish Steps. And if you want a budget-keyed cafeteria where the food is tasty and the chances of meeting other travelers are excellent, try Falcioni's near the main railway station — downstairs.

Rome's main station, by the way, is beautiful. It's where you'll arrive if you come from Milan, for instance, via Italy's crack train known as the Settebello or where you'll leave for many places.

THE AIRPORT bus will also let you off here.

Hotels? Rome's luxury hotels hardly need mentioning, such as Hassler, Excelsior, Cavalieri Hilton. Good service is the Rome tradition and many less expensive hotels provide great comfort. In fact, here's a city where rates beginning at around $7 for a double room but ranging much higher all seem to have one thing in common — hospitality.

For budget travelers, nothing is more homelike or better managed than the Venezia, near the station. Among pensions, the Dinesen is one of the most famous, but the list fills pages.

It's important to get reservations ahead for Rome; it's a busy city.

ONE HELPFUL, thorough guide to Rome is Fodor's paperback written by Georgina Masson and entitled simply "Rome."

Some people spend days seeing nothing but the churches, those rare repositories of history and art. Santa Maria Maggiore (and back of it, Rome's quite new Upim, the Italian equivalent of Woolworth's) is one of our favorites for splendor. And we love St. Paul's within the Walls on the Via Nazionale for its staunch Protestantism.

On our first Roman holiday my wife and I took the CIT tour to Hadrian's Villa, that proof as Marguerite Yourcenar, author of "Memoirs of Hadrian," once commented, that "one can contract at will the distance between the centuries." Next trip we fixed a picnic lunch, took the local bus for Tivoli, and spent a grand day wandering around Hadrian's great palace on our own.

WE'VE ALSO gone picnicking, via subway, to Ostia Antica, that nearby ruin as memorable in its way as Pompeii. But we've taken the highly recommendable CIT tour to the Etruscan country, with its thousands of tombs decorated in startlingly fresh recollection of that ancient civilization's life style. It's hard to explore it by yourself.

A highlight of the maiden voyage of the Royal Viking Line's new cruise ship, the Royal Viking Star, departing San Francisco Nov. 12 for Mexico, Central America, South America and the Caribbean, and with a planned itinerary to facilitate fly-cruise programs at mid-point at San Juan, Puerto Rico, will be a traditional Thanksgiving Day dinner with all the trimmings . . . California Coastline Beckons To Fisherman

Early fall is the time to fish the redwood coast of Northern California.

It's a change-of-pace area, sparsely populated and still subsisting in measure on the bounty of the sea. It's great for sightseeing among the magnificent redwood groves, lakes and rivers, with a 400-mile coastline that looks much as it did to the Manila galleons.

Along this savage coast, tiny fishing ports appear suddenly when visitors happen on one of the "dog-hole" coves that used to shelter lumber schooners. Now these little towns cater to artists and to the casual fisherman who wants to spend a day trying his luck out in the placid Pacific.

"PARTY BOATS" schedule regular departures to the fishing grounds nearby, prices include tackle for the casual angler, and kids are welcome.

Catches include the fighting king and silver salmon, in weights to 30 and 40 pounds if conditions are right. Also rock cod, snapper, halibut and succulent bottom fish.

As the morning fog lifts, one bonus is the sight of cliffs and forests that greeted Cabrillo and Heceta, the early explorers.

Starting in the south, on Highway 1, the first sportfishing port is Bodega Bay. Then in succession come Point Arena and Noyo, the latter in a rivermouth south of Fort Bragg.

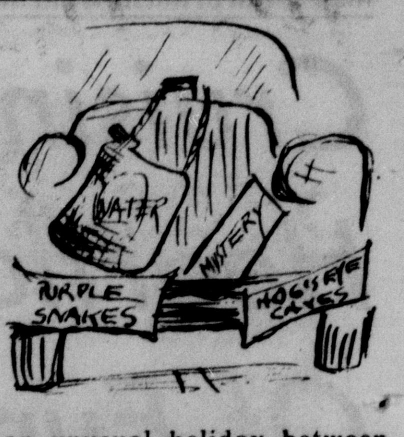
MOST POPULAR party-boat center in the north is Eureka, on capacious Humboldt Bay. Most boats leave from Fields Landing, south of town, and within 20 minutes occupants can be trolling for salmon at comparatively shallow depths just outside the harbor entrance.

Good fishing is available at Trinidad, with its sheltering headland where the Spanish landed in 1775 to claim this land for King Carlos III. Finally there are boat-spaces almost every day at Crescent City, a man-made haven amid offshore rocks.

Two rivermouth salmon spots occur where the mighty Klamath meets the sea south of Crescent City and on the equally productive Smith River, near the Oregon border.

AT ALL THESE ports, convenient canning and smoking facilities make it possible for the visitor to carry off his catch for use another day.

Altogether, a fishing break in the Redwood Empire makes for an unusual holiday between looks at the timeless groves, the wine tastings and other pleasures.



For full information and maps of the Redwood coastal area, send 25 cents for postage and handling to Redwood Empire Assn., 476 Post St., San Francisco, 94102.

Cruising The Heartland Of Europe

By JOHN F. LOCKE

The Rhine River has been an important source of commerce, history and legends for centuries. It flows through the industrial heartland of Europe.

On a four-day cruise from Basle, Switzerland to Rotterdam, Holland vis France and Germany, this writer saw at least 1,200 barges, numerous day excursion boats, 52 trains both passenger and freight and both northbound and southbound, a large number of ferries, and innumerable pleasure boats.

BETWEEN BASLE and Strasbourg the river drops 400 feet. To ease the passage of barges and boats, there are 12 double locks, each pair having one basin for downstream traffic and the other for upstream. Each basin can accommodate a large excursion boat (300 feet long, 30 feet in beam and 30 feet above the water line) and at least two barges (these are 200 feet long, 15 feet wide and ride 2 or 3 feet above the water when fully loaded.)

The approach is guarded by red and green traffic signals much like those on a highway. Each boat blows its whistle and waits for the signal to change from red to green. The gatelifts up, the boat moves as far forward as possible, ties itself with a cable to a huge hook in the concrete wall of the basin, the other boats move in, and the gate is lowered behind you.

The effect is much like going into an oversize bathtub. The plug is pulled and the water level is lowered in about 15 minutes. The forward gate rises slowly and your cruise boat sails out with muddy water dripping onto its decks.

THE MOST beautiful part of the river is that north of Rudesheim, Germany, where the river flows between high wooded hills past mile upon mile of green terraces. The latter shelter the vineyards whichq produce Rhine Wine.

The hills are dotted with castles in all conditions, crumbling, deserted or restored and lived in. From time to time your boat passes old churches with their tall spires standing out against the sky and hills. All along the river are stone houses centuries old.

In this area also are the high jagged cliffs from which the Lorelei have enticed mariners to come ashore. Somehow these wily maidens failed to stop us in spite of some hotblooded young Swiss soccer players on board.

ON AN ISLAND in the river is an old crumbling tower, formerly a toll station, the Mouse Tower made famous by a poem of Longfellow.

An even more fascinating bit of history is to be found in Heidelberg, whose castle was started in the 14th Century. A certain Louis XIV burned it in one of his many wars, and it has never been restored. What makes this fortress so attractive are the dukes who ruled the city for centuries. They collected their taxes in the white wine produced in the Neekar Valley, storing these liquid taxes in the world's largest wooden keg, a 58,000 gallon affair. When the keg was full, they threw a real bang up party for their friends. Once the barrel was empty, they started collecting all over again.

What a pity that this keg is no longer usable!

IN THE SUMMER there are five excursion boats which sail up and down the river, boats with names like Britannia, Europa and Helvetia. The downstream cruise takes four days, the upstream one five.

Each boat has a large lounge with picture windows, where morning bouillon, afternoon tea and various goodies from the bar are served.

The lounge is toward the bow, the restaurant toward the stern. The restaurant is staffed by very efficient and pleasant waiters who make these river runs in the summer and serves on cruise ships like the Hapag Lloyd's Europa in the Caribbean during the winter.

The food is plentiful and of good quality but it doesn't give you that stuffed feeling formerly typical of Transatantic liners. The cabins are small but well appointed and comfortable with air conditioning. A feature of the cuisine of these excursion boats is their excellent selection of Rhine and Mossell wines, those world famous white wines.

THE COST OF such a cruise is 'under $200 depending upon the current exchange rate, with no reduction for the shorter downstream sail but half fare for children under 12. Although the cruise goes through four different countries, the currency used on board is that of Germany, the deutschemarke.

The cruise tickets do not include the shore excursions, which are optional.

PASSENGERS ON the excursion boats that sail the River Rhine can laze upon the deck, their stomachs filled with good food, and watch the castle-lined shore slip past their boat.

IN THE MOTHER LODE, off Highway 49, midway between Placerville and Auburn, on the edge of a grassy meadow shaded by Ponderosa pines and giant oaks, at left, Sandy and Steve Luckman have created their Camp Coloma, a new California campground-resort on the American River and an ideal stopover point for the recreation vehicle traffic. Ninety areas have been cleared and equipped with water, electricity and sewage services. Other facilities include air-conditioned cabins, a general store, shower and laundry facilities, barbecue areas, toilets and playgrounds. The camp's river frontage, center, brims with trout for fishermen. And an added treat for the youngsters is a farm with barn, right where they can watch and touch small animals. Camp Coloma is only a short walk from Sutter's Mill where James W. Marshall discovered gold. And finally there are hayrides, raft rides, biking, hiking and other family activities. "A natural oasis" is the way the Luckmans describe their camp.

A Lovely Region Of Lakes And Poets

England's Lake District is traditionally associated with poets, but you don't have to be proficient in rhyming to enjoy its mountains and lakes. Better qualifications would be a yen for hiking, an appetite for unadulterated natural beauty and lake-fresh fish.

American naturalist Edwin Way Teale has described the region as being "without doubt one of the loveliest parts of the world."

Lakeland, as the area is also known, lies in the counties of Cumberland, Westmoreland and Lancashire, some 260 miles northwest of London, and contains some 3,000 square miles of surprises and contrasts.

THERE ARE whale-backed fells (mountains), soft-green dales and daffodil-carpeted meadows, spikey crags and wooded lake shores. There are hundreds of tarns (a form of pond) and lakes, including England's largest, ten-mile-long Windermere. England's highest mountain — 3,210-foot Scafell Pike — is one among a couple of hundred.

Lakeland is an alpine region in miniature, alive with rivers, streams and waterfalls, and abounding in birds and game.

It's no wonder that the area beguiled William Wordsworth, Robert Southey, San Coleridge and many other 19th Century poets, making Lakeland a kind of Big Sur of its day. John Ruskin wrote that it was "a place almost too beautiful to live in."

YOU CAN visit Dove Cottage in Grasmere, where Wordsworth lived, walk the streets of Cockermouth, where he was born.

For a different literary pilgrimage, you can visit the seventeenth-century farmhouse near Windermere where Beatrix Potter lived. Now a museum, the house contains memorabilia associated with Miss Potter's children's classic, "The Tale of Peter Rabbit."

Good centers for exploring Lakeland are Keswick, Bowness, Penrith, Windermere, Grasmere, Ambleside and Coniston. The towns boast interesting old inns and hotels, like the Langdale Chase and Old England hotels in Windermere, the Kirkstone Foot in Ambleside, or Michael's Nook Country House in Grasmere.

THE RESTAURANT at the Sharrow Bay Country House Hotel, near Penrith, is worth a trek. In 1971 it was rated one of only nine three-star restaurants in Britain.

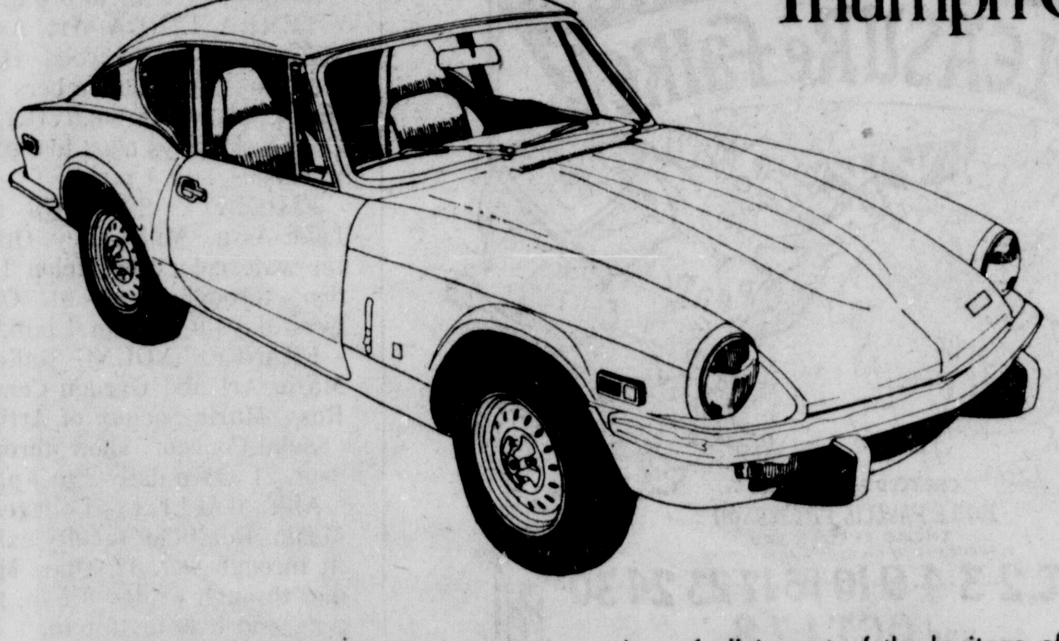
Distances are small in Lakeland. Using Windermere as a base, for example, you can easily explore the region by car or bus. Lake steamers are available, too. It's a hiker's paradise, and a natural for the rock climber, fisherman or bird watcher. Pony-trekking, sailing and golf are other popular pastimes.

For those who prefer to watch, there is the Grasmere Sports, an event that includes a primitive form of wrestling, fell-running (races to the top of the nearest mountain and back again), and hound trailing.

THIS IS hound-and-fox country and it produced one of the most famous hunters of all time, the man immortalized in ballad: "D'ye ken John Peel . . . with his hounds and his horn?" Like other men of Lakeland, all of whom are said to have a streak of wild Viking blood in their veins, Peel followed his hounds on foot, often for 30 miles in a day.

Lakeland is sheep country, too, so agricultural shows and sheepdog trials are not hard to find.

The area is one of the best places in England for buying quality handicrafts — woodwork, wrought iron, metalware, jewelry, pottery, embroidery and etchings. Two permanent exhibitions of locally made crafts can be found in Grange-in-Borrowdale, near Keswick, and at The Cartmel Forge, near Grange-over-Sands.



Triumph GT-6

The motor race that is the most demanding of all is part of the heritage of every Triumph sports car: The 24-Hours of Le Mans. Some years ago the class-winning Triumphs in this great French endurance contest carried experimental fastback body shells that enhanced both driver comfort and the speed of the car down the infamous Mulsanne Straight. Today the owner of the GT 6 Triumph enjoys the same aerodynamic stability and cozy encapsulation in the professional cockpit of a genuine Grand Touring coupe that looks far more costly than it is.

SAUSALITO - SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Where people sit on flower boxes, eating ice cream cones;
Where natives for a day drape concrete steps along Bridgeway.

Listen to gentle voices gathered around
  free kittens and puppies.

While riders of roaring cycles
  make a break through town.

SAUSALITO DORIS M. RUTH

NATURE'S ORCHESTRA

Moonbeams dart wistfully
Through cotton - white clouds,
Like klieg lights hailing
The opening of a play;
A drum roll of thunder
Resounds through the forest,
Nature's orchestra - accompanied
By a subtle, warm wind,
Through branches and twigs
Creating whirl winds of fallen leaves.
A squirrel sits on bended haunches
Sniffing pine tree aromas - and Night blooming jasmine,
As lazy streams flow silently
A pure country setting,
Is still to be found.

A lifetime at the most,
And one thing is certain:
When the time comes - -
Down comes the curtain.

Garden In A Bottle

Certain plants root in water, you probably knew. But did you know that some plants will grow in a bottle of water the year-around.

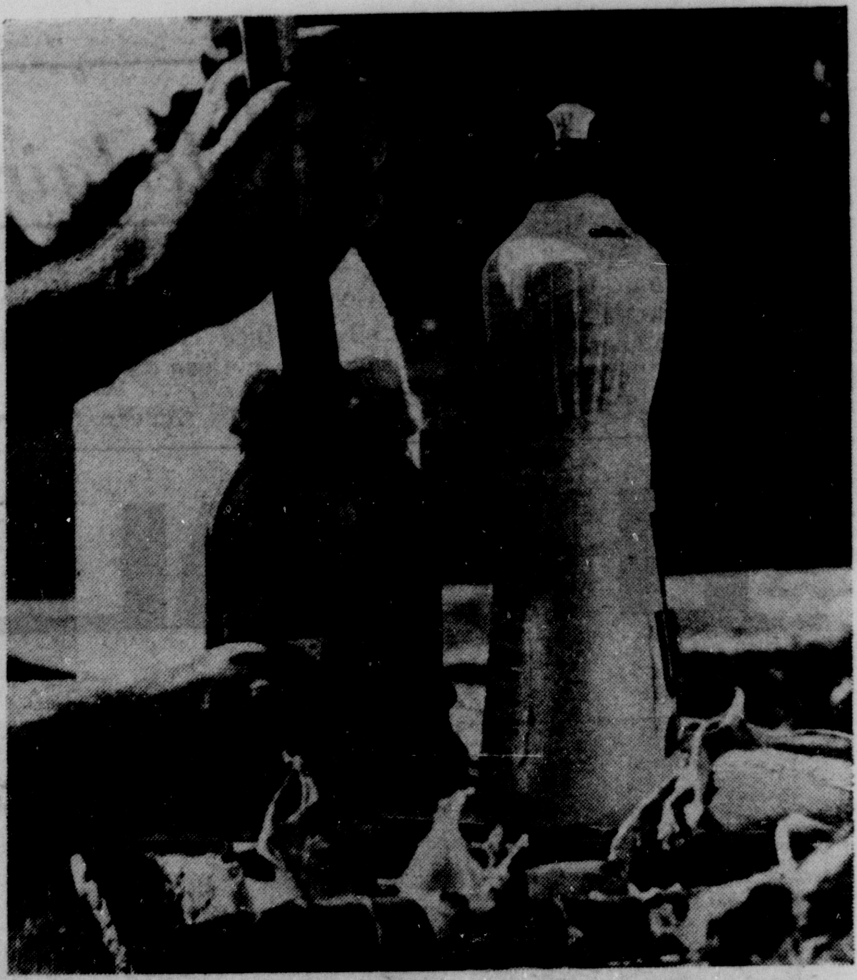
To start a bottle garden, all you need is a bottle or container, water, and cut limbs or stems from the selected plant. United States Agricultural Departament Research Service scientists advise that any waterproof container — canning jar, beverage bottle, goldfish bowl, vase, etc. — can be used.

Their plant recommendations include the geranium, impatiens, peperomia, wax begonia, hibiscus, coleus, aucuba, ivy, aglaonema and grape ivy.

These are well suited to bottle gardening, they say, because many already have embryonic root systems at each point where a leaf originates.

CUT THE STEM just below the node (the point where a leaf originates). The cut should be a clean one made with a sharp implement so that the stem is not damaged.

REMOVE EXCESS stem and make the cut closer to the upper part of the plant. Put plant in water at once. All damaged or dying foliage should be removed from the plant stem.



TO BEGIN your bottle garden, was the container with warm soapy water, rinse, and then dry the container before filling with fresh water. Also wash the plant material with soapy water and vegetable brush.

BY USING florist's foam, you can make a garden out of individual leaves cut from a long vine. Each node should be inserted into the foam so that the pre-formed root can develop rapidly. Insert leaves in a circular pattern.

ADD FRESH-CUT flowers to your "garden," watering every three or four days, and replacing fading flowers with other cut flowers.

Gardening Pages

HERE A group of containers with plants have been arranged to create a true garden in bottles. The plants are, left to right, English ivy, the aluminum plant and peperomia, all good choices. Remember to add water to replace that lost by vegetation. And the entire container of water should be replaced at monthly intervals to control the growth of algae, so your container will remain clean and clear. For best results add a water-soluble house plant fertilizer at one-fourth or one-fifth the ratio recommended for potted house plants.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Maric gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Winter Sweet Peas should go in the ground without delay. You want them full grown before the arrival of winter.

✓ September feedings keep many plants blooming — into fall. Roses are prime examples. Lawns may also be fed.

✓ Plant cool season vegetable crops now. Peas are good in the cool months, as are many leaf crops such as cabbage, kale and broccoli.

✓ Bedding plants for winter color are available — or will be available in the immediate future — in local nurseries. Plant early to enjoy a maximum of bloom from Calendulas, Pansies, Violas, Stocks, Snapdragons and Iceland Poppies.

✓ Buy potted Chrysanthemums in bloom to take the place of those you forgot to plant last spring.

✓ It is planting time for the earlier autumn-planted bulbs, while others will be coming on soon.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

So you are going to buy carpet? . . . And if you are the average person, you know very little about it. What to buy, where to buy, looms ahead of you, so you decide to shop around.

Everyplace you go tells you something different and you become so confused, you are just about ready to give up the whole idea.

In order to eliminate some of the confushion, here are a few tips . . . Think about color, you might as well eliminate the colors that won't do for one reason or another. Never buy a color you don't like simply because it's the fad of the day. After all, you have to live with it for several years, long after its popularity is gone.

Decide on what texture and patterns are right for your particular decor. Have a general idea of the key areas to be carpeted. In addition to these facts, it is helpful to take along samples of colors and swatches of fabric being used.

Last, but most important, as in all purchases you make for your home, you want to do business with a reliable firm. One with a good reputation for satisfied customers will likely stand behind the products they sell.

We have earned that reputation, and we invite you to discuss your carpet needs with us.

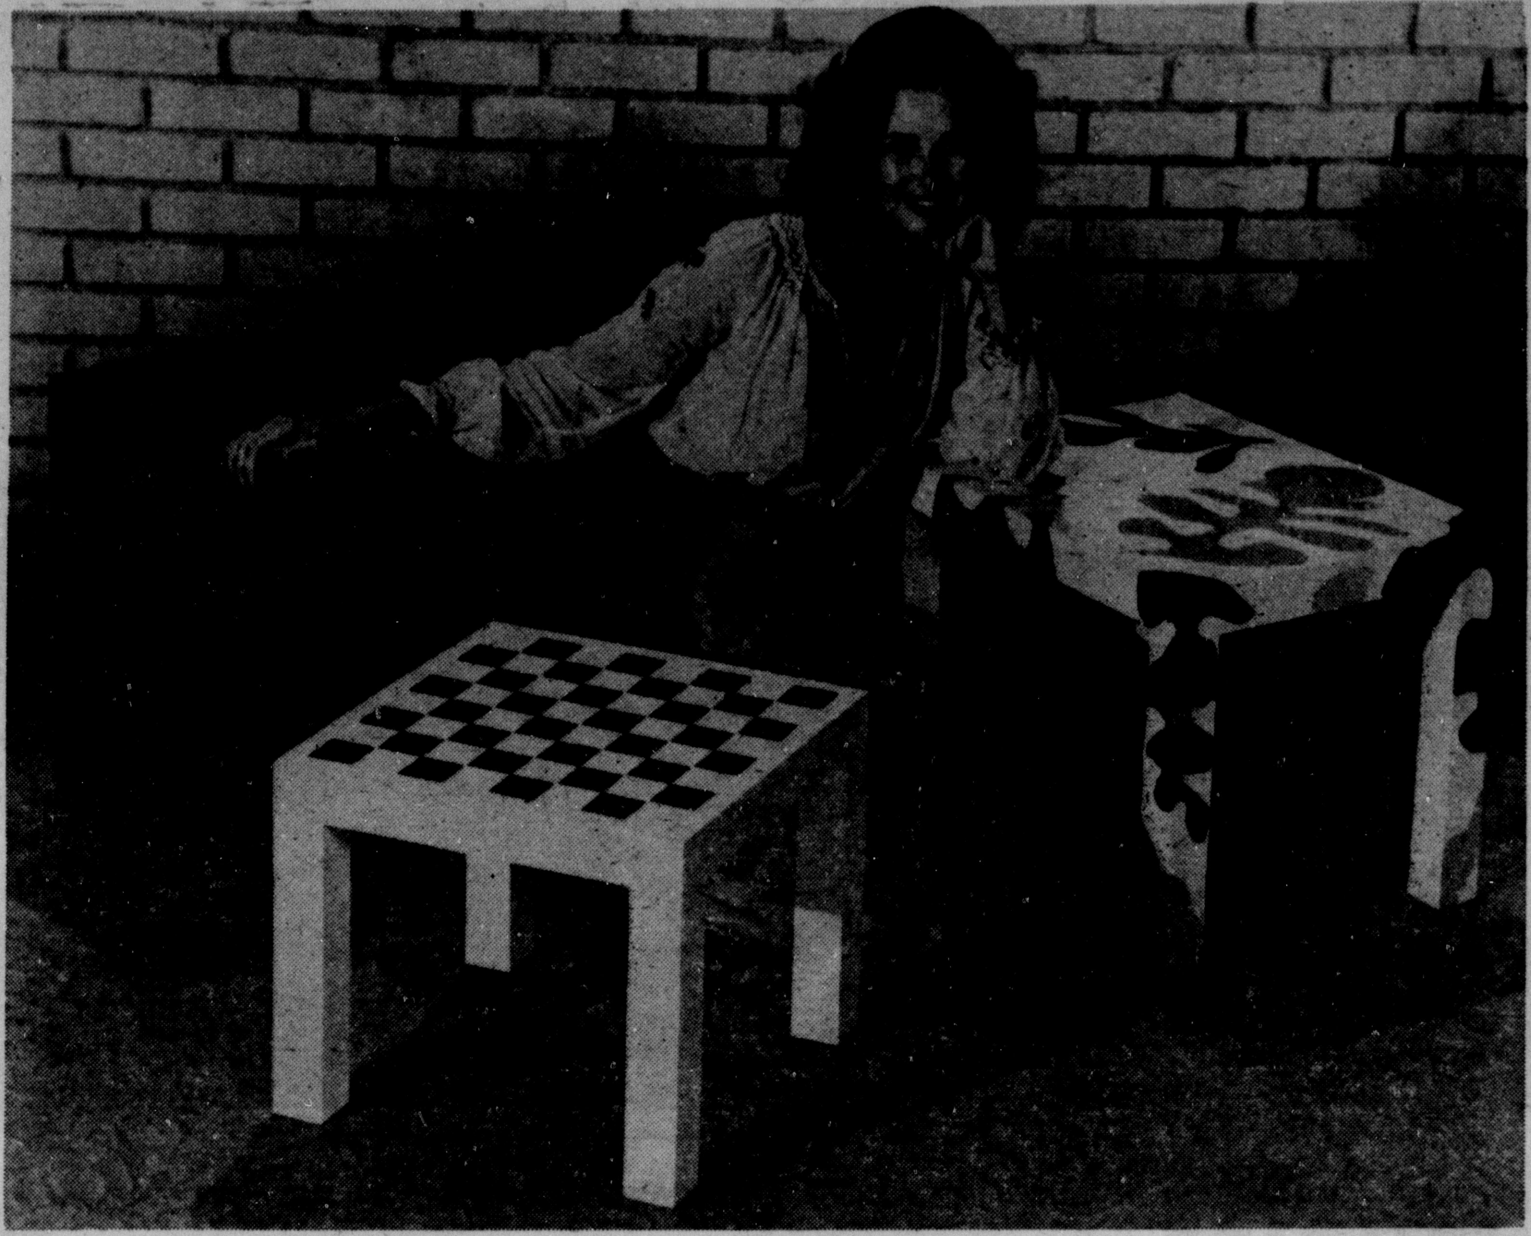
Mix 'n' Match Parsons Tables You Can Build



TRADITIONALLY, the Parsons table is a square or rectangular table with apron and leg widths measuring the same width. The design, quite similar to early Chinese tables, was originated by and named for the Parsons School of Design in New York. Its chief virtue lies in its simplicity. But we are into an eclectic age that frowns on too much sameness. Even the Parsons table has taken on an individuality. Steve Ellingson suggests that you build your own set of these useful tables, then decorate them to suit your personal taste, either coordinating the finished or doing each one differently. Actress Dayle Haddon, no plane Jane herself, shows you three possible decorating styles, with one table painted black and white with "wet look" enamel for the chessplayers, another treated in wild colors and mod designs, and a third finished in the more traditional oiled walnut. To help you along, Ellingson offers his pattern and construction instructions for Parsons tables, plus suggestions for decorating. Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Parsons Tables Pattern 503. Some other Ellingson patterns: No. 338, Colonial drop leaf coffee table, $1; No. 393, revolving album rack, $1; No. 414, magazine end table, $1.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Treat Child As An Individual

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Your children may have to share a room, but that doesn't mean they have to share an identity, does it?

How many of you parents have been heard to say, "My girls are nothing alike!" Well, if that's the case, try to give them a little room for expressing their differences.

You can start with the basic ingredients: twin beds, similar bedcovers (although the colors could be individual) and a proper amount of storage.

But why not stop there and let them expand on the idea?

ONE FAMILY I know has really encouraged the younger set to set up hobbies and all the accoutrements in their bedroom. What did they get? Three tanks of fish, one turtle box and rug-covered wooden tree for their cat to scramble up and down!

Of course the presence of the fish indicated that a counter was needed to hold the tanks, and a place had to be created for storage of little nets, boxes of food and plastic accessories.

Water splashed out during tender-loving-care time and so the countertop had to be surfaced in Formica (sea blue, naturally,).

ELECTRICAL outlets were needed close by, so father had to tackle that assignment. Mother added a roll of paper towels, mounted on the wall next to the tanks, and that's saved a lot of near diseasters.

The funny thing is that the family frequently gathers in the children's room to watch the fish. So a stack of colored plastic cubes found their way into the kids' room. Bookshelves began to overflow with handy gifts from aunts and uncles.

And the children next turned on to birdwatching!

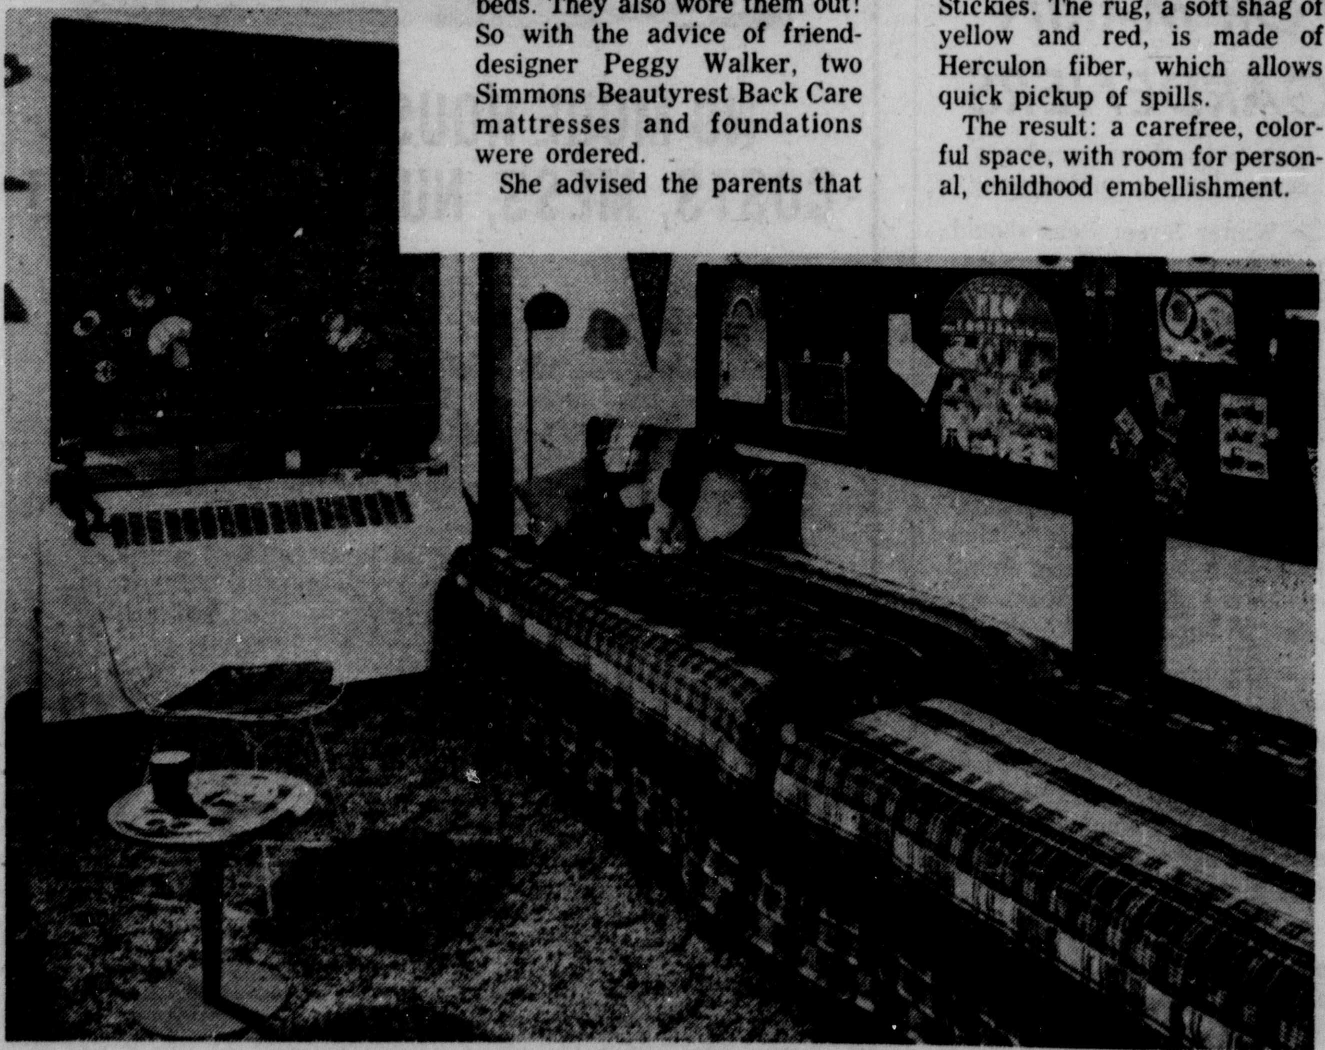
IT WAS AMUSING to watch the way activity revolved around a simple hobby. Yet at the same time it's a lesson in how not to overload a child's room with things parents think are essential.

Another young family, living in a city apartment, had two young boys outgrow their bunk beds. They also wore them out! So with the advice of friend-designer Peggy Walker, two Simmons Beautyrest Back Care mattresses and foundations were ordered.

She advised the parents that the best time to invest in good sleep support is when the young are growing, instead of after back trouble develops.

THE ROOM was eight by 10 feet, so the beds were placed foot to foot along one wall. A great big bulletin board was made of homosote (a pressed board) and covered in navy-blue felt. Some exposed plumbing pipes were painted the same blue, and a bright new window shade was decorated by the children with Rickie Tickie Stickies. The rug, a soft shag of yellow and red, is made of Herculon fiber, which allows quick pickup of spills.

The result: a carefree, colorful space, with room for personal, childhood embellishment.



A NEAR MATCH in the part of Indian Madras bedcovers for identical Simmons beds achieves an air of compatibility in this room for two young brothers. But there the matching stops. Each boy has been permitted to leave his own mark on the room through the posting of his personal treasures on the felt-covered bulletin board. And there is room for still more expression.

The Chronic Problem Of Chair Rungs

By ANDY LANG

The rungs of a chair have an annoying habit of coming loose over a period of years, especially when there is either too much or too little relative humidity in the room where it is used.

If at all possible, the loose rung should be removed, doing this very carefully so as not to cause further damage or mar the finish. All glue should then be scraped from the holes in the legs of the chair as well as the ends of the rung.

Do not sand the joint for any reason, since this will enlarge the holes and make the repair more difficult.

GLUE IS THEN applied to both the holes and the ends of the rung, but not if it appears that there will not be a tight fit. In that event, it is necessary to take up the slack in some way. This can be done by cutting thin kerfs in the ends of the rung and inserting tiny wedges in them. Another way is to wind some silk thread around the ends of the rung. Sometimes, winding some strands of fine steel wool around the ends of the rungs will suffice.

In any of these three choices, apply a little glue to the holes, before putting the pieces together. If any squeezes out during the reassembling, wipe it off immediately, using a soft cloth and warm water.

The joint must be kept tightly together while the glue hardens, in most cases as much as 24 hours, more if possible.

IF YOU HAVE bar clamps, this is simple, but be careful to place small, softwood blocks under the jaws of the clamps. Set the clamps to the desired positions before applying the glue. If you do not have clamps, you can make a kind of tourniquet with some rope or heavy cord, winding it around the two legs that hold the rung in place.

Here again use some padding so the rope doesn't damage the legs. Place a stick in the center and turn it and the rope together, an action which will draw the legs together. When sufficient pressure has been applied, rest one end of the stick against the rung so that it doesn't spring loose.

If necessary, tie it in place.

WHEN A CHAIR rung will not come out without danger of further damage: After drilling a pilot hole, drive a nail through the end of the rung from the inside of the chair leg. Use a finishing nail so that it can be driven slightly below the surface and the hole filled with wood putty or plastic wood.

Another solution is to drill a tiny hole through the leg so that it stops just before it reaches the end of the rung. A glue injector is then inserted into the hole, which permits glue to reach the inside of the joint.

Whatever method you use to repair a loose rung, do it. Or some day the chair will collapse when some one sits on it.

ANDY LANG'S HANDY BOOK

Andy Lang has prepared a handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," that outlines the solutions to 35 different repair problems that crop up frequently in the home.

Jean Shepherd, Traveling Man, Pokes Into The Small Corners

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Shepherd is an old-fashioned traveling man. When the mood hits, he wanders about this nation, gabbing with people, fishing, drinking beer and generally seeing if all is in order.

The last time the mood hit, he decamped with a six-member crew, a $250,000 portable videotape recorder and the blessings of the Public Broadcasting Service to put his footloose findings on the record.

The result was "Jean Shepherd's America," 13 half-hour UHF essays on life in such locales as a Milwaukee brewery, a snowbound motel near Pueblo, Colo., and the Skowhegan branch of the Kennebec River in Maine.

The show poked and prodded into small corners of America, dwelling at length on the incredible beauty we often never see in this country and occasionally on the jarring ugliness we always do.

The series was produced at WGBH in Boston. For reasons known but to PBS, it started running Easter Sunday a year ago and finished in the summer, a time most viewers are trapped in a station wagon somewhere near Disneyland.

It's making the rounds again now on more than 200 PBS stations and is well worth seeing, if for no other reason than that the tour guide is Shepherd.

He's a Chicago native, proprietor of a late-hour talk show on WOR Radio here. He tells meandering, wonderfully funny stories about things he's seen as boy and man and ties the good memories of the past to whatever he's doing in the present.

Shepherd doesn't know if another "America" series ever will be made. Money is the problem. PBS doesn't have much and may have less after Congress inspects its budget next year.

ON THE STEREO SCENE WITH ATLANTIC

By JOHN SUNIER

The Atlantic group of record labels have had such a large batch of excellent releases since I last turned my attention to them in these pages that I'm forced to limit things to a sort of checklist:

EAGLES — Asylum Records SD-5054: A very exciting rock quartet full of snap and verve re: their big hit, "Take It Easy." Good stuff.

EMERSON LAKE & PALMER — "Trilogy" — Cotillion SD-9903: E. L & R's latest release re-establishes this group as leaders in the jazz-classical rock instrumental area after their pretty sorry treatment of "Pictures at an Exhibition." Very trippy.

YES — "Fragile" — Atlantic SD 7211: A group with many fresh ideas about where today's rock is at. Several keyboard instruments including harpsichord, Mellotron and synthesizer are featured, along with Jon Anderson's vocals in tracks ranging from gutsy blues to an excerpt from Brahms' 4th Symphony.

THE ROLLING STONES — "Sticky Fingers" — ATCO COC 59100: The famous zippered album has been out for a while now, and succeeded by the "Exile on Main St." double album. Since I don't usually even devote space to LPs as worthless as the latter, I'll say a good word about the former. "Sticky 'Fingers" highlight is probably "Wild Horses," but "Sister Morphine" is good Stones material too.

"BOBBY SHORT LOVES COLE PORTER" — Atlantic SD 2-606: In a leap of light years, may I call your attention to a wonderful collection which will probably never be found in the vicinity of a Stones album. Bobby Short is very New York and very 1920s and 30s in his treatment of 22 mostly rarely-heard Cole Porter gems. Great nostalgia trip!

THE CONCEPTION CORPORATION presents Conceptionland" — Cottilion SD 9051: A number of wild and strange humor LPs have appeared lately on the heels of the madcap Firesign Theater. This one unleashes four similar satirists on a trip to an absurd Dizzyland featuring such attractions as "The Ego Trip," "Bummerland" and "Test Your Weakness." "All-Night Obituary of the Air" is also a laugh-provoker.

GEORGE CARLIN — "FM & AM" — Little David LD 7214: By now Carlin's humor is surely familiar to most radio listeners or TV viewers. My favorite characterization was "Son of WINO," in which the hip humorist captures perfectly the frantic KFRC-type radio format. "The 11 O'Clock News" convulsed me too, especially the weather report: "Continued dark tonight, followed by scattered light tomorrow morning."

"ARETHA LIVE AT FILLMORE WEST" — Atlantic SD 7205: Aretha has been doing lots of recording lately, and this is some of the best, taped last year at a live appearance at Fillmore West. "Respect," "Love the One You're With," and "Dr. Feelgood" are among the tunes she gives high-powered treatments. King Curtis is the sax soloist and band leader, and on "Spirit in the Dark" Ray Charles makes a surprise appearance that brings the house down.

ARETHA FRANKLIN — "Amazing Grace" — Atlantic SD 2-906: Aretha, who began her career in the church, has returned there — to Rev. James Cleveland's Baptist Church in Los Angeles — for a dynamite gospel album that may well change the course of popular music. If you were turned on by the wonderful spirit of the first Hawkins Singers album ("Oh Happy Day"), don't miss hearing Aretha, the Southern California Community Voir and Cleveland on piano in thrilling versions of "Amazing Grace," "Mary Don't You Weep," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and other gospel numbers. Recorded in the church with a full congregation present, this is a thoroughly inspired musical experience.

"HEAVY SOUL" — Atlantic SD 2-500: This xargain-priced two-LP package provides a fine opportunity for those of us honkies who like some but not all soul music to sample a bit of the best. Just a few of the artist represented in this high-voltage set: Brook Benton, Wilson Pickett, Aretha, Sam & Dave, Clarence Carter, and Roberta Flack and Donny Hathaway.

"HISTORY OF ERIC CLAPTON" — ATCO SD 2-803: This important double-disc package of re-issued material traces one of the best guitarists in rock from his beginnings with the Yardbirds through the classic Cream to today's Derek and the Dominos. "Spoonful," "Sunshine of Your Love," and the breathtaking "Layla" are some of the high points in the 16 tracks.

"LIVE CREAM, VOLUME II" — ATCO SD 7005: More reissued gems featuring Jack Bruce and Ginger Baker by Clapton's side in live tapings of the late lamented group's favorites such as "White Room."

BEE GEES — "Trafalgar" — ATCO SD 7003: British history seems to be the Bee Gees' inspiration in their latest LP, with a beautiful cover painting of the Battle of Trafalgar and a tune of that title. The Gibb brothers' high-voiced harmonies receive tasteful support from strings directed by Bill Shepherd. I liked "Lion in Winter," and "The Greatest Man in the World."

BOLINAS VICTORIAN BURNS

Arson Feared In 2 Fires

Three house fires — two of them the apparent work of arsonists — kept firemen busy in pre-dawn hours today.

In Bolinas, a $58,000 Victorian house at 19 Brighton Avenue burst into flames at 4:30 a.m. Its former owner was arrested later in Petaluma on suspicion of arson.

In Forest Knolls, an empty house at 13 Forest Drive erupted into flame at 5:30 a.m., and arson investigators were called in.

And in Petaluma, firemen took 90 minutes to bring under control a fire at 238 Keller Street after being called out at 1:53 a.m.

Twenty volunteer firemen fought the blaze in Bolinas with three engines, and laid extra lines along Brighton Avenue to save neighboring houses.

Capitola Kimball and three children were asleep in the old frame house when neighbors saw flames coming from the right side and sounded the alarm.

Fire Chief Jose Silva said later the fire began in a crawl space alongside the house and there was a strong smell of oil or gasoline. County arson investigators were summoned.

Flames shot through the home's roof as volunteers battled the blaze, and a preliminary estimate of damages was put at $25,000. None of the house's occupants or firemen was injured.

A unit from the Stinson Beach Volunteer Fire Department stood by at the Bolians Station while the kre was fought.

Less than two hours after the fire started, one of its former owners, Charles K. Post of 390 Edd Tide, Sausalito, was arrested in Petaluma.

Post — until two years ago a Bolinas volunteer fireman — was stopped at 6:10 a.m. at Kentucky and Washington streets, according to Petaluma Police.

Police on routine patrol said they saw his car northbound on Petaluma Boulevard, passing a stop sign at about 70 miles per hour. After an 80 mile-per-hour chase southbound, roadblocks were set up, police said, and he finally was cut off and stopped by a police car.

Post was arrested for reckless driving, and held in city jail on suspicion of arson for Marin authorities.

Post reportedly sold the home on Brighton Avenue last year, and Mrs. Kimball had recently offered it for sale at $58,500. One of the oldest houses in Bolinas, it was built in 1885 by Chips Anderson, and was for many years owned by Jack Pepper — who sold it to Post in December 1969.

An hour later the county fire department at Woodacre was besieged by alarm calls from Forest Knolls residents reporting the house at 13 Forest Drive on fire.

Three trucks, six firemen, and as assistant chief took 19 minutes to bring the blaze under control. Most of the damage was in the home's basement, living room and in one bedroom, with damage estimated at $7,500 to the structure and $2,500 to its contents.

The house, owned by John Dent of 61 Birch Avenue, Corte Madera, has been unoccupied.

County fire officials said arson investigators were called to the scene, and reportedly a store in the San Geronimo Valley was broken into and flammable liquids stolen just prior to the fire.

Authorities said they were unaware of any connection between the Forest Knolls and Bolinas fires.

The Petaluma fire was at the home of Ronald Pyle on 238 Keller Street at 1:53 a.m., and firemen remained on the scene for 90 minutes. The home was damaged by smoke throughout, and the cause is under investigation, firemen said.

ARMIES IN CONFRONTATION

Israelis Strike Deep Into Lebanon

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Strong Israeliiair and ground forces struck deep into Lebanon today in what the military command in Tel Aviv called a search-and-destroy mission against Palestinian Arab guerrilla bases. The guerrillas fought back and Lebanese spokesmen said Lebanese army units also engaged the Israeli raiding force in fierce fighting.

An Israeli military source said there was no indication when the Israeli ground forces would be withdrawn. Hours after the attack was launched, the spokesman said, "when we are through mopping up and when we finish the job we have to do, we will clear out—the Lebanese will not dictate when we should withdraw."

Military sources said the clash between the Israeli and Lebanese armed forces was one of the biggest since the 1948 war. Labanon did not take part in the 1967 war and in previous Israeli raids most opposition came from the guerrilla forces.

Lebanese military sources said the Israeli strike appeared aimed at isolating South Lebanon militarily.

The Beirut government, at 3:30 p.m., about 10 hours after the Israeli strike was launched, declared a state of emergency throughout Lebanon. It also called on citizens to donate blood.

The Israeli air, artillery, armored and infantry strike into the central sector of the 50-mile border was the biggest in nearly seven months. The Israelis did not disclose the size of the force but Beirut said it included an armored brigade and at least 25 warplanes.

Both sides reported casualties during the hours-long twin-pronged attack which the Lebanese said penetrated up to 14 miles. While the fighting continued, Israel reported one soldier killed. Lebanese military spokesman said seven of their soldiers were killed and three wounded. They also reported three tanks destroyed, a gun-carrier burned and three anti-aircraft batteries hit.

An Israeli military correspondent said Lebanese tank fire scored a hit on an Israeli tank. Israeli military sources said there were "dozens" of guerrilla casualties while other Palestinians were captured. There was no immediate report from the Palestinian headquarters but a guerrilla spokesman said Israeli losses included one plane, two tanks and three military vehicles. The guerrilla spokesman in Beirut said 60 Israeli Skyhawk and Mirage jet fighter-bombers took part in the assault. The Egyptian Middle East News Agency said Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), was directing guerrilla operations from "an advanced position in the central sector of south Lebanon."

Israeli planes attacked what the Tel Aviv command described as the "main headquarters of the terrorists" at Nabatiyeh, about 10 miles inside Lebanon, and destroyed two bridges across the Litanij River linking the town with the border regions known as "Fatahland." A Lebanese military spokesman said the Israeli warplanes dropped napalm on its military positions.

The Israeli command said Israeli armor and infantry penetrated up to 12 miles inside Lebanon, flushing out guerrillas in 13 villages and killing and capturing "a number of them." It said "dozens of terrorists' houses" were blown up in the villages of Rmaich, Ein Abel, Bint Jbeil, Ainata, Beit Yahoune, Jaijme, Brachite, Kafra, el-Tori, el-Abeisa, majdal Islam, Kabarikha and Tulin.

Humphrey To Stump For McGovern

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who bitterly fought Sen. George McGovern in the California primary, will campaign side-by-side with the Democratic presidential nominee in an effort to shore up his underdog campaign in this state.

McGovern strategist Frank Mankiewicz disclosed the plan Friday, telling newsmen "it would be very difficult to win" in November without carrying California and New York "and I would think certainly impossible to win if we lost both."

Mankiewicz, in a telephone conference call interview with several newsmen, said McGovern is "probably better off" politically in California "than almost any other" state because he spent a lot of time campaigning here during the primary.

"Senator Humphrey will be campaigning with him in California," said Mankiewicz, McGovern's national political director.

McGovern campaign headquarters in Los Angeles later said the two senators probably would campaign together in California during mid-October.

Humphrey will campaign separately in San Francisco a week from today and in Los Angeles Sept. 24. McGovern will campaign in Northern California Sept. 25 and Los Angeles Sept. 26.

McGovern defeated Humphrey by less than five percentage points in California, a primary which all but assured the South Dakotan of the Democratic nomination and splintered the party with disunity.

Some former Humphrey supporters—noteably among organized labor, the Jewish community and old-line party fundraisers—have given McGovern only lukewarm support at best.

The joint campaigning will represent a continuation of the strategy begun this week when McGovern toured the Midwest and East with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mankiewicz said McGovern next week would campaign with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, another losing candidate for the Democratic nomination, and join up with Humphrey the following week.

"I would not refer to it as a celebrity of the week campaign," said Mankiewicz, answering a newsman's question. "It is evidence that he's able to get prominent Democrats to endorse him and others to campaign with him."

Mankiewicz sat in a Baltimore airport telephone booth during the conference call, the first of several the McGovern campaign intends to hold with reporters in various California cities.

He said the "economy is a very crucial issue in California" and "the people are beginning to realize (McGovern) is committed to full employment."

He said "if the election were held today it would probably be close" in California.

Quang Tri Citadel Falls To The South

Red Forces Ousted— Long Battle At End

SAIGON (UPI) — The red and gold flag of South Vietnam fluttered in a typhoon wind atop the scarred walls of the Quang Tri Citadel today, officially marking the end to one of the most significant battles of the war. Hastily sewed into one corner of the standard was the green and yellow shoulder patch of government marines who raised it.

In a scene reminiscent of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima by U.S. Marines in World War II, rain-soaked South Vietnamese marines raised their national flag on a 20-foot pole atop the west wall of the battered fortress, recaptured by government forces Friday.

The marines huddled under tents and ponchos and military spokesmen said there probably would be relatively little activity by them Sunday while the slashing rain and wind of Typhoon Flossie covered the northern segment of South Vietnam. Air support has been at a minimum because of the bad weather for several days.

Top military officials involved in the fight turned their attention to the question of "what next?" The most logical target was the town of Dong Ha, eight miles north. The North Vietnamese still held the 18 miles of territory between Quang Tri and the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), and everything west of the Thach Han River which passes the west wall of the Citadel.

All North Vietnamese opposition within the walled 19th century fortress was reported removed, as well as in the surrounding city, which was the only provincial capital to fall during the Communist offensive, UPI correspondent Barney Seibert said.

Seibert said 27 prisoners were taken in the final sweep of the Citadel, some with documents that showed the Communist defenders were short on all types of supplies. He said requests for food, ammunition and other supplies returned with the notation "don't have any, don't have any." He said a request for replacements noted 54 men were being sent as reinforcements, but only 27 had weapons. "You must provide weapons yourselves for the others," the document read.

A military source said the Communists stopped firing their longrange 130 mm cannon into the Quang Tri area to give any remaining North Vietnamese troops time to withdraw. He said heavy barrages may hit the marines soon, and they were spreading out and digging bunkers to meet such a threat.

The capture of the Citadel was announced late Friday by official military spokesmen in Saigon, but was officially sealed at noon today when the gold flag with three horizontal red stripes was planted.

President Nguyen Van Thieu sent his personal congratulations to the marines and bottles of champagne were dispatched to top officers by the military commander of the northern region, who was in charge of the

Swedish Skyjack Ordeal Ends In Madrid Surrender

MADRID (UPI)—Three Yugoslav terrorists who hijacked a Scandinavian airliner and flew to Spain with a ransom of six prisoners and $100,000 in cash surrendered to Spanish authorities today.

The climax to the suspense-filled incident came after three hours of tense negotiations with Spanish and Swedish officials while the plane was parked in a tightly guarded corner of Madrid airport. "They have surrendered," a police spokesman said.

Spanish sources said the three hijackers may face a Spanish court for air piracy. The six freed prisoners—who had been serving terms for a variety of crimes including the murder of the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden—will be returned shortly, the sources said.

Police will also return the $100,000 ransom, Spanish officials said. They said authorities had ruled out the possibility that political asylum would be granted to the nine Yugolslavs.

The hijackers and their companions left the DC9 jetliner at 3 p.m. and a spokesman for Scandinavian Airways System (SAS) said they had surrendered.

They were driven away in a windowless police bus. A police spokesman at the scene said they were being taken to the downtown headquarters of the National Security Police.

More than 200 riot police, including sharpshooters who had been massed in a cargo shed near the parked SAS plane, were withdrawn shortly afterwards.

The hijackers and their companions are believed to be members of a Croatian anti-Tito movement known as the Ustashi.

The plane was hijacked over Sweden Friday. The hijackers released the 84 passengers after the Swedish government paid them the equivalent of $100,000 in cash and released six Croats who had been sentenced in Sweden for various crimes, among them the murder of the Yugoslav ambassador to Stockholm.

Spanish aviation sources said the hijackers had indicated by radio that they intended to refuel the plane, change crew, and then continue to an undiclosed destination,

But about 45 minutes after the plane landed here, three unidentifed men left the plane through the forward door and were escorted away by Spanish police. A fuel truck pulled up at about the same time but drove off a short tima later without attaching its hoses to the plane's tanks.

Several Spanish officials boarded the plane later to negotiate with the hijackers. Authoritiative sources said the Swedish embassy had asked Spain not to take any action which might lead to bloodshed or destruction of the plane.

The first indication of a break came when the crew was released and was driven off in a small SAS truck.

The jet left Malmo, Sweden, with the three terrorists, six of their countrymen whom they were able to free from Swedish jails by threatening to blow up the airplane, and the equivalent of $100,000 in ransom.

The Swedish government agreed to the ransom to save the lives of 83 hostage passengers who were left in Malmo. The plane touched down at 11:44 a.m. (6:44 a.m. EDT). ,

Former Capitol Aides Indicted In Bugging

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A federal grand jury climaxed a three-month investigation Friday by indicting two former White House aides and five other men on charges of breaking into and attempting to bug Democratic National Headquarters.

The eight-count indictment returned in U.S. District Court alleged that the seven men conspired to steal documents and install electronic eavesdropping devices inside the party headquarters located in the plush Watergate apartment complex.

The indictment also said some telephone conversations originating in Democratic offices had been monitored for three weeks before five of the men were arrested in the pre-dawn hours of June 17 inside the headquarters.

The five originally charged in the case were caught by police who arrived after being alerted by a Watergate security guard.

The two additional men indicted Friday were ex-White House aides G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt Jr. The indictment said Liddy and Hunt fled the scene moments before police arrived.

The other five men indicted were James W. McCord Jr., the former security chief of President Nixon's re-election committee; Bernard L. Barker, a Miami real estate man; Eugenio R. Martinez, an employee of Barker's firm; Virilio R. Gonzalez, a Cuban-born locksmith and a Barker associate, and Frank Sturgis, another associate of Barker's.

Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, who released the indictment, said the grand jury action climaxed "one of the most intensive, objective and thorough investigations in many years, reaching out to cities all across the United

Corona Attorney Goes To Jail

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — The defense attorney for accused mass-murderer Juan V. Corona was sentenced to two days in jail for contempt of court Friday for allegedly trying to prejudice the jury.

A few hours later, the prosecution admitted it also ran the risk of contempt action by discussing the case outside the courtroom in violation of the trial judge's orders.

Attorney Richard E. Hawk was given the jail term and fined $200 by Superior Court Judge Richard Patton after an outburst over use by the defense of a psychologist for help in jury selection.

Hawk had told venireman Chris Lawson that the psychologist had come from Los Angeles free of charge because he believed Corona innocent of charges that he murdered 25 field hands and buried their bodies in graves along the Feather River near Yuba City.

The prosecution protested vigorously and Patton ordered lawyers from both sides to his chambers. Court sources confirmed the sentence against Hawk, who served 48 hours in jail for refusing to allow the defendant to give a handwriting sample in pretrial proceedings.

Selection of a jury has been marked throughout the week by sharp exchanges between attorneys on both sides, and warnings on behavior by the judge.

After the trial recessed for the day, the prosecution held a news conference to disclose that it had failed to link Corona with a 1970 assault it had hoped to use as an important part of its case.

Bart Williams, Sutter County assistant district attorney, admitted he faced possible contempt action for his disclosure.

He said he had decided to make the findings known "because it's the only chance we had to neutralize the issue and hopefully reinstate our credibility."

Williams said he fears that Hawk's repeated accusation that the state was "hiding evidence" has "hurt our credibility with the public."

Ships Which Collided Are Freed

CAPE HATTERAS, N. C. (UPI)—Two merchant ships jammed together by a collision at sea were freed late last night and headed to port for repairs today.

Risking the danger of sinking by more flooding and the possibility of fire, the Trans Hawaii safely yanked its bow free from the 30-foot gash it tore into the amidships engineroom of the vessel Republica de Colombia Thursday 12 miles off the coast.

"But the best we can tell, she's faring all right," said a Coast Guard spokesman of the badly-damaged Colombian vessel. "She's down a little bit at the stern but she was all the time."

Three of the ship's seven compartments were flooded during the collision which ruptured diesel tanks, spilling some 24,000 gallons of oil into the Atlantic and creating a slick six miles long and 100 yards wide.

The spokesman said the slick appeared to pose no danger to the North Carolina Outer Banks. A first-light survey put the slick 16 miles due east of the Cape Hatteras light.

"We're just watching it right now. We've sent the (cutter) Laurel to Morehead City to pick up oil booms—sausage looking things—to put around the oil slick to keep it from spreading," he said.

The Colombia, disabled in the crash, was taken into tow by the tug Cape Henry and was headed for Norfolk. The Trans Hawaii proceeded under its own power to Baltimore, its intended destination at the time of the collision.

When the two ships were pulled apart, there were no signs of the missing chief engineer aboard the Colombia, where four other crewmen were injured and hospitalized for third degree burns.

The Coast Guard said the man would still be listed as "missing" although he was feared dead.

Teacher Pay Talks In Recess

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Contract talks aimed at ending the teachers strike that has closed 200 schools in Philadelphia have recessed until Tuesday. Teacher disputes continue in other parts of Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Wisconsin.

In Las Vegas, Nev., school is scheduled to begin Monday, 11 days late, for 30,000 Clark County elementary students but leaders of a parents group opposed to compulsory busing said Friday they will stage a boycott of classes.

Conflicting court orders from state and federal judges in Las Vegas on the busing issue had kept the schools closed. The state Supreme Court on Thursday stepped in and upheld an earlier decision ordering busing to achieve racial integration.

Philadelphia public school officials and representatives of the striking teachers union held a long bargaining session Friday and then adjourned until Tuesday. No progress was reported in ending the walkout by about 13,000 teachers that started Sept. 5 and has affected 285,000 students.

School Board President William Ross said the strike would last at least until October and not the three months predicted by John Ryan, negotiator for the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers.

In other teacher disputes:

Rhode Island: Strikes affecting 7,500 students in the school districts of Smithfield and Burrillville continued.

Massachusetts: Negotiators met with a mediator Friday in hopes of settling the strike by 500 teachers in Sommerville and "good progress" was reported. In Taunton, 300 teachers threatened a work slowdown if their dispute with schools is not settled by Monday.

RANSOM IS DELIVERED

Hands behind their heads, two Swedish policemen yesterday delivered $100,000 in ransom (in cases in front of their feet) to three Yugoslavs inside the hijacked Swedish jetliner in Malmo, Sweden. After securing the ransom and release of six of their countrymen in Swedish jails, the hijackers ordered the plane flown to Madrid, where it landed this morning. See story, page 1.

Massacre Lawyers Want Out

BONN (UPI)—Three West German lawyers appointed to represent three Palestinian guerrilla survivors of the Munich massacre said Friday they were trying to get out of defending the Arabs in court. It left legal proceedings against the guerrillas in doubt.

Gerhard Sieber, one of the three attorneys appointed by the Munich state court to defend the guerrillas, said he had asked to be relieved of his mandate for health reasons.

"I have been sick and I am incapable of defending the Arab," Sieber said.

Rolf Dahms and Werner Goetz, the other two lawyers, also voiced dissastifaction with the mandate.

They said they were seeking relief from the assignment "because of the emotional climate" surrounding the affair.

Under West German law, only West German lawyers can represent a defendant in court.

A justice ministry spokesman said that under certain circumstances a foreign attorney could participate in a trial only as "a guest of the court" if he were sponsored by a West German lawyer.

This, in turn, ruled out the possibility of Tunisian lawyer Mondher Ben Ammar defending the three Black September guerrillas, each now being held in a seperate and secret jail.

Ammar, whom Arab organizations had commissioned with the defense of the Palestinians, flew back to Tunis Friday after meeting officials of the Bavarian justice ministry in Munich and Dahms.

Dahms said, "I explained to him his rights under German law" but declined to give more details on his talks with the Tunisian.

In an apparent reference to the Munich shootout which claimed the lives of 11 Israeli Olympians, five Arab guerrillas and one West German policeman, Chancellor Willy Brandt demanded a crackdown on foreign guerrilla organizations operating inside West Germany.

Abrams: 'I Didn't Know About Illegal U.S. Raids'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Creighton W. Abrams swore to Senate investigators that he had no knowledge of U.S. bombing raids over North Vietnam that violated President Nixon's orders.

Nixon had ordered all bombing except for protective reaction to be halted during peace negotiations between November, 1971 and March, 1972.

In a transcript made public Friday by the Senate Armed Services Committee, Abrams said he did not know that Gen. John D. Lavelle, commander of the 7th Air Force in Southeast Asia, had supervised unauthorized raids. Abrams testified in secret before the committee on Wednesday.

In other testimony Friday, Col. Charles Gabriel said that false reports were written about the missions to make it appear they were conducted within the rules.

Gabriel confirmed accusations made by Sgt. Lonnie Franks in a letter to Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, that led to Lavelle's forced retirement and the delay of Abrams' nomination as Army chief of staff.

Abrams described an incident in January when the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) notified him as commander in Vietnam that a certain air attack on a ground radar installation in North Vietnam was illegal under Nixon's rules.

Abrams said he discussed the incident with Lavelle and came away convinced that Lavelle was abiding by the limitation, although disagreeing with it.

Lavelle has admitted conducting similar unauthorized raids — at least 28 of them, by the count of Pentagon investigators — both before and after the JCS incident. As punishment he has been allowed to retire, in lieu of being demoted.

Abrams, whose nomination as chief of staff is being considered by the committee, was closely questioned about whether he had any awareness whatsoever of the unauthorized air war Lavelle was conducting.

The testimony, which included questioning of Lavelle and members of some flight operational headquarters, generally bore out summaries of the hearing made public during the week.

Lavelle contended that while he did "stretch the rules" with the air attacks, he did so within what he thought was their intended limits and he believed Abrams was aware of his actions and interpretations. Lavelle also denied knowledge of some 75 false operation reports which according to testimony were circulated within his command.

Lavelle also testified he received permission once from Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to make an unauthorized air strike.

Lavelle said he got the permission during a discussion of increased activity by enemy MIG aircraft moving south. Hughes asked Lavelle to point out the area on a map. Then this followed:

Lavelle: "Right there, yes. We discussed the possibility, and I have to say discussed because I can't remember, of a protective reaction strike at Quang Lang....It was at this meeting that I told Adm. Moorer that that was Navy territory and we could not go up there without Navy permission and he told me 'don't worry about the Navy; I will get Navy permission.' And I said 'We'll go up there tomorrow.'"

Jews Working For State Can Have Holiday

OAKLAND (UPI) — Jews working for the state of California can take off Yom Kippur on Monday and may get paid for it.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Robert L. Bostick made the ruling Friday and said he will hear arguments Oct. 19 on whether Jewish employes are entitled to a paid holiday on Yom Kippur as Christians are on Good Friday.

Bostick granted a provisional writ on a petition by Miss Shelley Mandel, 23, a clerk-typist at the state department of Health in Berkeley.

Her class action petition said the state discriminated against Jews on the holiday question. She said her supervisors told her she could have the holiday with pay if she agreed to work overtime to make up the eight hours.

Bostick said that Miss Mandell must be paid for the holiday Monday, and if he eventually rules against her she'll have to pay back the money.

BERKELEY (UPI) — The University of California seismograph early today recorded an earthquake apparently in the vicinity of Central America which registered 5.8 on the Richter scale.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Prisoners Battle

STORMVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Two groups of convicts, some armed with broom handles, smashed wooden benches and battled each other in a dinner hour brawl yesterday at Green Haven state prison, authorities said.

Several inmates were injured in the disturbance, and seven were taken to Poughkeepsie hospitals for treatment. A spokesman said no corrections officers were hurt.

Guards fired tear gas to separate the 150 to 200 inmates, the spokesman said.

Newsmen were not allowed inside the main prison gate and were kept at the main entrance, about a quarter mile from the wall. By sunset, when officials said the convicts were being returned to their cells, searchlights could be seen lighting the wlls of the facility.

Greetings For Pat

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — Pat Nixon was greeted with cheers, antiwar chants, American flags and "Stop the Genocide" signs yesterday at Nixon-Agnew campaign headquarters.

A crowd of more than 600 persons raised "We love Pat" placards and pictures of President Nixon when she arrived in a limousine. But another group of about 50 Drew University students shouted, "Stop the war. Stop the bombing."

Mrs. Nixon accepted a bouquet of red roses and ignored the demonstrators. Then she firmly refused to follow officials guiding her along a red carpet leading to the closely guarded campaign headquarters. Instead, she moved to the right and shook hands with supports.

Vote Fraud

CHICAGO (UPI) — The U.S. attorney's office says a federal grand jury has returned 12 indictments charging more than a score of persons in connection with alleged vote fraud in Cook County.

Details of the suppressed indictments, which were returned yesterday, were to be released later today.

Several Cook County election officials were reportedly arrested by FBI agents following the indictments.

In Washington yesterday, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., asked the Justice Department to intervene in the Nov. 7 election in Chicago.

He said he wants FBI agents assigned "to selected polling places in Chicago" to guard against vote frauds.

Gay Marriage Out

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorney General Crawford Martin says homosexual marriages are permissable if the couple obtains a marriage license. The only problem, he says, is that under Texas statutes they can't obtain a license.

"At first blush, it might appear that the county clerk is authorized to issue a marriage license to persons of the same sex," Martin said in a ruling yesterday.

"But Texas lawmakers permeated the Family Code with terms 'husband,' 'wife' and 'marriage' and since the legislature must be presumed to know the definitions and usage of these words, it is eminently clear that under Texas law only two persons of the opposite sex may be granted a license to marry in Texas," he said.

Plunges To Death

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (UPI) — Hundreds of people watched in horror yesterday as a young man slipped slowly from the grasp of rescurers and plunged 120 feet to his death from the spire of Christchurch Cathedral.

Brian Herbert Sandford, 20, fell from the observation balcony on the spire in the heart of the city. Police said they believed he meant to commit suidice when he was spotted on the spire.

Police cars, fire engines and an ambulance sped to the scene. Two men, one an off-dty policeman, reached through the iron railings on the balcony and grabbed Sandford by the sleeves of his leather jacket.

The policeman tried to handcuff Sandford's wrist to the railing-but could not reach his arm.

NASA Revelation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has revealed that 15 astronauts involved in the Apollo program were paid $2,500 each for autographing postcards and blocks of stamps.

The space agency, in a letter to Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, chairman of the Senate Space Committee, said the astronauts received $5 for each of 500 signatures and placed on the postcards and stamps.

The money was paid by Horst Eiermann, who made friends with several astronauts while working at Cape Kennedy. He also was involved in a deal to sell 400 lightweight stamped envelopes placed aboard Apollo 15 shortly before it was launched to the moon July 26, 1971.

Deputy Testifies In Bomb Retrial

A Marin deputy sheriff again testified yesterday how he arrested Eddie Lee Griffin Jr. trying to make a homemade bomb into Marin City's almost completed public safety building in April.

The testimony came at the opening of Griffin's second trial.

The first trial of the 21-year-old San Franciscan began last week in Marin Superior Court, but was declared a mistrial when a juror suffered an asthma attack and was forbidden by her doctor from continuing.

Judge Henry J. Broderick had not selected alternate jurors because the trial was expected to be short.

Two alternate jurors were picked for the second trial, however.

Deputy Raymond T. Rhia reiterated for the new jury that he caught Griffin crawling through an unfinished vent in a door at the $110,000 building and, while arresting Griffin, found a bomb resting outside the door.

Rhia said Griffin was forced to carry the bomb to a eucalyptus grove where it exploded and burned. Only then did the deputy learn Griffin was armed with a pistol.

Griffin, reputedly a member of a black militant organization, is charged with burglary — in this case defined as attempting to enter a building with intent to commit a crime while armed.

'New' Rights Panel Names Chairman

The reconstituted Marin County Human Rights Commission has named Ernest J. Gray of Novato to serve as chairman for a year.

Gray, the only commissioner to survive a purge of the old commission earlier this year, won out in voting Thursday over June Weden of San Anselmo. Mrs. Weden was named vice-chairman.

Others on the new commission are Lily Whittle of Santa Venetia, Leland S. Bright of San Rafael, Edward W. Colthurst of Corte Madera, Rev. J. Barton Sarjeant of Sausalito and Joaquin P. Gallardo of San Rafael.

The meeting was the first held by the commission in four months. In May, the board of supervisors disbanded the previous commission of nine members and streamlined the body to seven members.

The commission, prior to being disbanded, had been criticized by supervisors for becoming involved in political matters.

In other matters, the new commission was told by executive Director Gerald J. Hood it would meet with supervisors Nov. 14 for a workshop session.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni appeared before the commission and promised a close working relationship with his board.

East Bay Cattle Rustler Sentenced

OAKLAND (UPI) -- A 30-year-old carpenter was sentenced Friday to one to 10 years in prison in the first cattle rustling case in Alameda County in more than a decade.

Robert L. Sweeden was convicted after the prosecution contended he shot a calf on the Lazy L ranch and took it to his nearby home to be butchered in the kitchen.

High Court Judge Denies Storer Plea

I-J Special Report

GOOSE PRAIRIE, Wash. — U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas yesterday turned down an appeal that he order California election officials to put former Marin County supervisor Thomas T. Storer on the November congressional ballot.

Douglas said the state's election laws unconstitutionally barred nonpartisan candidates from the ballot, but he was too uncertain that four of his colleagues on the court would sustain his opinion, the American Civil Liberties Union reported.

The ACLU's chief counsel in San Francisco, Paul T. Halvonik, said the denial by Douglas killed any chance of Storer getting on the ballot in the Sixth Congressional District, which includes Marin and part of San Francisco. The legal issue, however, will be appealed to the Supreme Court, Halvonik said.

The U.S. District Court ruled Tuesday against Storer's challenge to the state laws that effectively make it impossible to qualify as an independent candidate.

The ACLU took Storer's appeal to Douglas's vacation cabin in the Cascade Mountains. Douglas considered the issue overnight before denying the appeal yesterday.

Kissinger: Red Peace Plan Falls Short

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, just back from secret Vietnam talks in Paris, said today the Communists' latest peace proposal falls short of meeting U.S. demands against imposition of a Communist government in Saigon.

Kissinger met with reporters after he briefed President Nixon at the White House on his week-long mission to Europe and the Soviet Union.

While expressing reservations about the Viet Cong's most recent proposals for a political settlement, Kissinger reported a flurry of forthcoming negotiations in advance of a major new agreement on Soviet-American trade.

The President's chief foreign affairs advisers said three Soviet delegations would visit Washington next week to wrap up details of an accord on trade, shipping and settlement of Russia's World War II Lend Lease debt.

Kissinger refused to talk at length about his 17th secret meeting in Paris Friday with Le Duc Tho, a member of the North Vietnamese Politburo, and Xuan Thuy, chief of the North Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks.

But Kissinger said the latest Viet Cong proposal, advanced Monday, "leaves something to be desired. He said it does not meet the condition that no side would predominate in a coalition government.

The Viet Cong proposed a government of "national accord" recognizing, at least for a transitional period, two armies and government administrations in South Vietnam.

Kissinger, who returned late Friday from Paris, met with Nixon shortly after midnight and again this morning before he held a news conference.

3 Arrested For Sale Of Cocaine

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bail was set at $10,000 each yesterday for three men, including a vacationing lawyer from Washington, D.C., who were arrested in Sausalito on suspicion of selling a half-ounce of cocaine.

U.S. Magistrate Richard Goldsmith set the bail for attorney George E. Miller, 31, and two Sausalito men, Marco F. Madio, 29, of 241 Glen Drive, and Brian Neal Smith, 27, of 80 Cloudview Avenue.

Federal narcotics officers said Miller, also a Washington lobbyist for a Missouri firm, and the two others sold a half-ounce of cocaine for $300 after bargaining to sell seven pounds of the drug.

In a raid on the Madio home yesterday, authorities claimed to have seized an ounce of cocaine.

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Sept. 22.

5 Hurt As Car Flips In Sonoma

Five young persons were injured today when their car hit an embankment and rolled over on a Southern Sonoma road.

The California Highway Patrol said the driver, Stephen Darling, 18, of San Francisco, lost control of the auto at about 2:30 a.m. while westbound on Lynch Road.

Darling was reported in good condition today at Hillcrest Hospital with chest pains.

Also reported in good condition at Hillcrest were his passengers: Ronald Harris, 16, of 404 South McDowell Boulevard, Petaluma, leg pains; Diane Troxell, 13, of 1719 Pauline Way, Petaluma, back pains, and Deborah Troxell, 15, same address, scalp lacerations.

Another passenger, Barry Moore, 16, of 520 Canal Street, San Rafael, was treated at Hillcrest.

Hit-Run Case To Higher Court

A 23-year-old San Rafael man charged with felony hit-and-run driving has been bound over to Marin Superior Court for trial.

Judge David R. Baty of municipal court ordered Eugene Milton Paine to appear Oct. 3 after Paine's attorney agreed there was enough evidence for a trial.

San Rafael police arrested Paine Aug. 14 after he allegedly fled the scene of an accident at Fourth and Second streets. Police said Paine's car ran through a red light and hit a vehicle driven by Jacklyn Askew, 20, of San Anselmo.

Flood Barriers Due At Big Sur

SAN LUIS OBISPO (UPI)— California Division of Forestry officials have begun planning to head off flooding in the fire-scarred Big Sur State Park area.

A 16-man crew from the Los osos Ecology Center here has been assigned to build barriers in the park to prevent the flooding expected because of an Aug. 1 blaze which destroyed more than 4,000 acres of watershed.

POPULATION BOOM

Suddenly, Missy, a two-year-old Labrador retriever belonging to Ellen Rief of Mill Valley, finds herself being a busy woman. She gave birth this week to 16 pups, an unusually bountiful brood given to playful excursions around the James Street home. Now, of course, the problem is what to do with all the cuddly offspring.

Novatan, 18, Arrested In Fight Over Girl Friend

An 18-year-old Novatan was arrested yesterday on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon on another 18-year-old in a quarrel over a girl friend, Novato police reported.

Patrick Raymond Christian Carre of 1304 Cambridge Street was released on $500 bail from Marin County Jail to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported that Benny Ray Cameron of 286 Sunset Parkway was southbound on South Novato Boulevard with his mother, Ann, as a passenger at 5:40 p.m. yesterday.

Carre and two companions followed them into Tresch Triangle, according to police. Carre stabbed Cameron in the left cheek just below the eye with a sharp instrument, according to police reports.

A youth with Carre was cited to juvenile authorities on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon because he offered Carre a screwdriver and tire iron, police reported. Police found the tire iron and screwdriver but could not find the weapon used in the assault.

GOP Begins Voter Drive

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Republican program to register potential voters for President Nixon and make sure they go to the polls Nov. 7 begins in five California cities today.

Nixon administration and national GOP officials helped inaugurate the program, called "Canvas Kickoff," by walking door-to-door in selected precincts, canvasing residents.

Secretary George Romney of Housing and Urban Development was to preside in Los Angeles, administration environmental adviser William Ruckelshaus in San Francisco, GOP national co-chairman Anne Armstrong in Anaheim, co-chairman Tom Evans in San Diego and White House communications director Herbert Klein in Sacramento.

BUGGING

States as well as into foreign countries."

The indictment did not mention any top Nixon campaign officials such as former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, who served as the President's campaign manager until July 1, or Maurice H. Stans, the former commerce secretary who now is Nixon's campaign finance chairman.

The Democrats, led by former National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, had accused Stans of conspiring to use $114,000 in GOP campaign contributions to finance the Watergate affair. Stans responded Thursday by filing a $5 million libel lawsuit against O'Brien.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, has determined that the funds in question were funneled through Nixon's re-election committee before being deposited in Barker's Miami bank account.

The Justice Department said the investigation of the break-in and bugging was completed. "We have absolutely no evidence that any others should be charged," press spokesman John W. Hushen said.

He added, however, that department investigators were still reviewing the GAO funds report.

All seven defendants were ordered to surrender Tuesday morning at U.S. District Court for setting of bond for Liddy and Hunt. Bonds will be unchanged for the other five suspects who already have posted it.

There appeared little chance of the men coming to trial before the Nov. 7 general election.

Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, told reporters he believes the indictment intensifies the affair as a campaign issue.

"The indictments point up the seriousness in the matter. What now needs to be pursued is how it was funded and whether there are violations as there seem to be," McGovern said.

O'Brien, who is now McGovern's campaign chief, said he was pleased with the indictments but urged the Justice Department to continue investigation of how the bugging operation was financed.

"The only way for this entire case of political espionage to be laid to rest is for Mr. Nixon to order the appointment of a special prosecutor who is not politically beholden to anyone," he said.

Republican officials, however, demanded an immediate apology from the Democrats.

"As we knew all along, and as the grand jury has now determined, there is no evidence to substantiate any of the wild and slanderous charges McGovern has been making about many high officials in the Nixon administration and campaign organization," said Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole. "Those Republicans so slandered and the American people at large are due an immediate apology from McGovern."

Protestants In Belfast March

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Thousands of militant Protestants, some wearing military uniforms and others bowler hats, marched through Belfast in a show of strength today. British troops stood by to prevent clashes with Roman Catholics.

At least 1,000 members of the Ulster Defense Assn. (UDA), a para-military organization, trooped through the capital of Northern Ireland under gray skies to rally in Grove Park in the Protestant northern section of the city.

Another 1,000 members of the Ulster Vanguard Movement marched to Woodsvale Park in the Protestant western district of the city for a rally there.

Support Sought For Transportation Act

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Citing financial difficulties facing many of the nation's major railroads, Southern Pacific President Benjamin F. Biaggini yesterday urged support of the Surface Transportation Act now before Congress.

"The most important fact in transportation today is that a number of railroads are weak and in trouble, and many of these are key segments of the national system around or beyond the Mississippi," Biaggini said.

His remarks were prepared for a speech before the Commonwealth Club of California here.

He said that while the transcontinental railroads serving California "are the nation's best," seven of the nation's railroads are in bankruptcy. The reasons for these problems, he added, include dated regulatory laws that now work against the industry and the necessity of competing against government financed transportation modes while railroads remain financed almost totally by private enterprise.

"Legislative action — soon — is essential," said "Biaggini. "The best of the various bills before the Congress in the Surface Transportation Act."

He said the act is backed by the rail, truck and waterway industries and would provide access to loans, prohibit tax discrimination against transportation and help equalize ground rules to promote fair competition among carriers.

"Only motivated management can really run either your business or a good railroad — not agency officials or union officers or anyone else," Biaggini said.

"Your support for the Surface Transportation Act would be a vote for less government interference in business generally."

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

When The Buyer Does Not Pay

It used to be that if you missed a payment or two on the refrigerator, you could expect a short, ugly visit from the store people. A couple of brawny characters knocked. If you didn't answer, they might even break the door down. Then brush you aside with a gruff, "Geddowduhway, Buster, we're pickin' up d'box."

The courts didn't think this was fair. First, they said, the seller had to give notice before he came after his property. Some years later, they added that the seller had to tell you he intends to re-sell the item. He has to tell you how much you must pay to redeem it.

That's because when you buy most things on time, you sign a "conditional sales contract." This says that while you get to take the TV home with you, the company owns it until you make the final payments and don't fall behind. Then, according to the conditional sales contract, they have a right to repossess it.

Now the courts have limited creditors still further. In a recent case, the U.S. Supreme Court looked at the laws of repossession. Mrs. Fry had bought a stove from the Burnie Stove Co. She signed a conditional sales agreement. She made her payments for a time. But when she paid over two thirds of the balance she got into a dispute over servicing the stove.

Burnie Stove went to the sheriff. It got permission to take back the stove. Then it went and took the stove from Mrs. Fry's home. The Supreme Court said this wouldn't do. Mrs. Fry had the right to a fair notice and the right to be heard. She should have some kind of impartial hearing before the company could pick up the stove. There need not be a full trial. What is needed is a hearing that will prevent unfair and mistaken taking of property.

California's retail installment sales law says the seller must make a choice if the buyer doesn't pay as promised. The seller may sue for the unpaid balance. Or he may take back the goods. He cannot take it back, sell it, and then sue for the difference between what he gets, and what the buyer still owes.

fight for Quang Tri, 404 miles north of Saigon.

In a letter to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the army's joint general staff, Thieu expressed his "warmest congratulations and boundless admiration" to the victorious marines.

Thieu had set Sept. 19 as the deadline for recapturing all lost territory, but South Vietnamese spokesmen were saying the deadline had been met and that other land was only temporarily lost.

U.S. Air Force and Navy warplanes flew 340 strikes over North Vietnam Friday, the heaviest number of raids in one day since Aug. 18, the U.S. command said. U.S. tactical bombers have flown 300 or more missions over the north every day this week.

Main target Friday was the mile-long Bac Giang railroad yard, a five-track complex 28 miles northeast of Hanoi, the command said. It was the second major rail complex wrecked this week along the vital northeast rail line between Hanoi and China.

Navy and Air Force pilots reported 90 per cent of the Bac Giang facility destroyed, including all five lines, all support and storage buildings and at least 19 box cars.

The aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk returned to another tour of duty on Yankee Station in the Gulf of Tonkin Friday, replacing the USS Hancock, which headed for port.

Thailand-based U.S. Air Force jets also attacked the Dong Hoi airfield 38 miles above the DMZ and bombed craters into the runway, 7th Air Force spokesmen said.

Big U.S. B52 bombers hit five times in the North Vietnamese panhandle Friday, all within 18 miles of Dong Hoi. There were 28 missions within South Vietnam — 14 against North Vietnamese troop concentrations in a southwest-to-north swath at times moving as close as a mile to Quang Tri.

Joint Study To Be Considered

The Petaluma City Council, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall, will consider launching a joint study with Marin Municipal Water District aimed at locating a site for a recreational lake to contain treated waste water.

The water district has asked the council to study possible locations for the facility. A long-range subregional sewage plan for the Marin-Southern Sonoma area calls for reclaiming waste water for irrigation purposes and a possible lake in Chileno Valley or in the Lakeville area south of Petaluma.

The council also will consider appointing a new member to the planning commission.

Judge May Stiffen Pot Jail Term

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A federal judge took under advisement yesterday a government petition to siffen the three-year prison sentences of two marijuana smugglers to five years each.

The defendants were Thomas P. Vallejo, 29, of Langhorne, Pa., and David Miller, 35, of Corte Madera.

They pleaded guilty to the March, 1971, plane shipment of a ton of marijuana valued at $3 million from Mexico to a small airport here. A government informant piloted the craft.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Miller told Federal Court Judge Charles Weiner the sentences he imposed on the defendants earlier this year were illegal. Miller said the law mandates a minimum term of five years in prison in narcotics smuggling cases.

Standford Shmukler, counsel for Vallejo, told the court its sentence was "appropriate" and represented "an exercise of leniency," which he said has been justified by his client's behavior at the Allenwood Prison Farm of the Lewisburg, Pa., federal penitentiary.

Shmukler contended the government wanted "its pound of flesh," which drew the following retort from Miller:

"The government wants one pound of flesh for the 2,000 pounds of marijuana."

Five men were tied in the case after Leonard Glassberg, 36, of Novato, pleaded guilty and testified against them. He received a two-year prison sentence.

Norman Keim, 35, Penndel, Pa., is awaiting retrial; Charles Cornet, 45, Las Vegas, won a directed verdict of acquittal, and Edson Whipple, 46, Duncan, Ariz., is awaiting sentencing.

Recognition Asked For Need Center

The Novato Citizens Advisory Committee on Human Needs has recommended that the city council formally recognize th Novato Human Needs Center as a community agency.

The committee proposed the move — designed to lift the status of the organization — after hearing a report on center status Thursday night, according to Annette Smail, volunteer coordinator for the center.

The center, operating in space at Novato United Methodist Church, 1473 South Novato Boulevard, "has demonstrated its capacity to fill many of the basic needs of a considerable number of Novatans, regardless of race or economic status," the committee resolution said.

It also has "provided a vehicle for Novato churches to coordinate their heretofore fragmented efforts to meet many tupes of crises in human needs as they arise," the resolution said.

Mrs. Smail said the center gave "direct and referral" service to 129 families in July, compared to 24 families in May when it opened.

The center is receiving growing support from churches and other groups in the form of food, money and volunteer help, Mrs. Smail said.

Tippy Makes It 400 Miles Home

CONCORD (UPI) — Tippy the tomcat is back home after what his owners say was a 400-mile walk.

The five-year-old cat disappeared while owner Nancy Kitchen, 16, was at Central Point, Ore., near the California border early in July.

Tippy showed up a week ago at Miss Kitchen's home here, about 400 miles from where he disappeared.

"I couldn't tell if it was Tippy, he was so dirty and his fur was so matted down," said Nancy's mother, Mrs. Mack Kitchen. "But I called him a few times and he followed me into the house."

Education Board May Appeal

The Marin County Board of Education at its Monday night meeting will consider Wednesday's ruling by Marin Superior Court Judge Henry J. Broderick that the board must pay the attorney's fee for a suit against it.

Ruling that the board acted arbitrarily and capriciously by withholding the names of candidates for a board vacancy, the judge ordered the board to pay Sausalito attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund $500 and court costs for the suit he filed asking the court to order the release of the names.

Asst. Supt. Robert E. Spain predicted yesterday that the board will appeal the judge's intended decision.

Board members, meeting at 8 p.m. at the county schools office, also will announce the names of two persons recommended for appointment next month to the Marin County Schools Personnel Commission.

USE OF NEWSPAPERS

Special Class For Teaching Teachers

The Independent-Journal and Sonoma State College will cosponsor a special course next month aimed at teaching elementary and secondary school teachers how to use newspapers as an educational aid.

Entitled "Motivating Students With Newspapers," the course will be given Oct. 6-7 and 13-14. Friday sessions will run 4 to 10 p.m., Saturday sessions from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., both at Vallecito Junior High School in Terra Linda.

The opening session will include a lecture by Dr. Walter McHugh of California State University, Hayward, on teaching children to read by using newspapers.

Following a dinner sponsored by the I-J, participants will tour the newspaper's plant at Fifth Avenue and B Street in San Rafael.

The tour will include a panel discussion on suburban newspaper operations by a panel of the newspaper's executives and editors.

Other topics to be discussed during subsequent meetings will include a description of the I-J's newly instituted current events filmstrip program; ways to use newspapers in teaching language arts, math, science, social studies and English, and a slide presentation of early political cartoons.

Participants in the course will produce a workbook for teachers on using newspapers as a teaching aid. It will be printed by the I-J.

The course will carry two semester credits.

Satellite Launch Delayed To Friday

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The launch of a satellite to explore the space environment halfway between Earth and the moon has been delayed one day, to next Friday, because of lagging flight preparations.

The satellite, an 860-pound Interplanetary Monitoring Platform (IMP), is scheduled to take off at 9:20 p.m. EDT Friday on a new model Delta rocket. It will soar into a distant orbit ranging from 127,000 to 155,000 miles high.

$556 Million To State In Sharing Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California will receive $556 million this year under a compromise federal revenue-sharing formula approved by House-Senate conferees, Sen. Alan Cranston's office said Friday.

About two thirds of the funds will go to cities and counties. The remainder will be allocated to state government.

(Although Cranston's office was able to provide an estimate for the state's share, no breakdown for Marin and Southern Sonoma counties and cities was available immediately.)

The compromise measure, which won final approval of the conferees Friday, would share about $30 billion in federal revenue with the states and local governments during the next five years.

A Cranston spokesman said the first 12-month payout is retroactive to last Jan. 1.

California's $556 million share during the first year represents a gain over the $510 million the state would have gotten under the Senate version of the measure but a drop from the $610 million in the House bill.

The Reagan administration has said it hopes to use state government's share to lighten the California income tax load.

Rallye Scheduled

The Marin Rallye Association will hold an automobile rallye tonight, with cars leaving Corte Madera Shopping Center between 6 and 9 o'clock. Participation is open to the public, and an entry fee of $3 per car will be charged.

Student Dip; Schools Ask Teacher Shuffle

Faced with an enrollment of 92 fewer children than projected for 1972-73, San Anselmo School District trustees have asked if four teachers they have hired could be employed on a temporary basis.

The reason, reported Supt. Frank R. Elliott, is an attempt to keep the new teachers' names off a lottery list if more teachers have to be dismissed in the spring.

Last spring, 10 teachers in the San Anselmo district were let go because of diminishing enrollments. The 10 were selected through lottery drawings.

Elliott said the four teachers — Jacqueline Byrne, kindergarten teacher at Isabel Cook; Lynda Dooley, second grade at Brookside; Eleanor Prentiss, language arts at Red Hill and Hidden Valley, and Ruth A. Smith, scond grade at Brookside — were hired as replacement teachers at Thursday's board meeting for staff on leave or for those who had left the district.

He said he will report on the legality of temporary hiring at the Sept. 28 board meeting.

District enrollment for this school year of 1,839 students represents a ratio of 1 teacher to 23.9 students, Elliott said. Later in the meeting, trustees approved a board policy of maintaining class size in a 1 to 25 ratio. Dissenting was Trustee Mary Helen Olive who, according to Elliott, believed the policy was too restrictive.

San Anselmo School District Board Also:

BUSING — Approved busing arrangements so that all kindergarten, first, second and most third graders would be bussed to school starting Sept. 25.

PERSONNEL — Hired Barbara Bell (language development and speech, Brookside, $8,144 annually), Margaret Bommarito (language development/speech, Isabel Cook and Yolansdale, $7,441 annually), Richard Babcock (teacher aide part-time Brookside, $321 monthly), Ann Barnecut (secretary Brookside, $505 monthly), and Bess Niemcewicz (receptionist district office, $472 monthly).

TEACHER AIDES — Employed 13 part-time teacher aides to work for two hours daily at $2.47 an hour under Title I funds.

RESIGNATIONS — Accepted the resignations of teachers Patricia Holland, Maria S. Koehane, Barry B. Connell and Marjorie Neville, and custodian Gerald L. Cruthers.

AGENDA — Adopted a policy that board meeting agenda items should be of sufficient detail that the public can obtain information from them, and instructed Elliott to revise distribution.

COMMENTS — Instructed Elliott to prepare three alternate policies on plaicng of agenda items by both trustees and the public, adding that the current requirement of a trustees' quorum approving placement of an item should be deleted.

MINIMUM DAYS — Approved board policy supporting minimum days for teacher planning, with scheduling not to exceed one day per week.

STUDENT — Held over to the Sept. 28 meeting a suggestion that a student representative sit on the board. A motion by Trustee John Hulpke that a seventh or eighth grade district student sit on the board failed.

PROJECT Approved a statement of intent to write a language development project for state Title III funds for Yolansdale and Wade Thomas schools in order to meet the state deadline.

TAX RATE — Deferred discussing the district's tax rate for 1972-73 to the Sept. 28 meeting.

Handling Sweater Knits —Some Dos And Don'ts

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

In answer to your many questions concerning sweater knits, I shall try to generalize some of the dos and don'ts of handling them. During the following weeks, I shall go into more specific techniques for these special knits. They are a whole new world of sewing and you'll need all the information you can get.

Please cut out and save these columns on handling of knits for your own future reference. I shall also welcome more questions from you. Believe me, when I tell you, I am learning right along with you.

Sweater knits are usually single knit fabrics, knit on one set of needles with a definite right and wrong side. They look and act like hand knits, stretching freely in both directions. These knits will need little or no ease in the patterns you use.

Check the fiber or yarns used and the care recommendations of the manufacturer. These knits are often a combination of fibers and they will take on the characteristics of the more predominant fiber. If the garment is to be washed, be sure you have taken the time to preshrink before cutting.

IF THE KNIT is still in a tube form, not cut on one side, refold the two folds and use the center of each side as the fold line. You may use the lengthwise rib as the true grainline.

Patterns must be clearly marked "for stretchable, unbonded knits only." This is not the same as using a pattern that is marked, "suitable for knits."

One very fine teacher recommends that you make a full pattern from the half pattern and cut on a single thickness if using stripes or plaid knits, which are hard to fold. Then you will be certain that the under layer is identical to the upper layer. Knits of this kind are much easier to cut single because of the bouncy quality of knit. Cut pieces of your pattern in one direction just as you would for napped fabrics.

Notches are important for marking center and other seam matching. Small clips that you might have used for woven fabrics will be lost in knits. Notches should extend past the cutting line, not into the seam allowance.

Use ball point or new sharp needles for your sewing machine. It is wise not to sew over pins because the needle will become blunt and cause the fibers to break or snag. If you are sewing on tricot or fine banlong, your only choice is a ball point needle. Use thread that has a "give" in it. I personally prefer a Swiss thread that is 100 per cent polyester. Be sure there is not too much pressure on the presser foot. Since all knits should be handled individually, it is best to test each one before proceeding.

Steam pressing is good for most fibers. However, you must use a very light touch when pressing. Some acrylic fibers stretch with steam and cannot be brought back to the original shape. Again, pre-test your fabric. A press cloth on the right side of knits will prevent shine.

You will notice that most knits create lint when stitching. For this reason, you must brush out your bobbin case often to prevent a build up of lint which will affect the stitching quality.

Remember, this is just the first of my articles on stitching with knits. Each week will go into more details. They are fun to wear and comparatively easy to sew, as long as you realize they are not woven fabric and need a whole new set of rules.

MRS. DUANE A. Kinney, San Antonio, Tex., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"Normally, I have found that one bobbin is not enough thread for making a garment. It is frustrating to have to stop in the middle and wind another bobbin. My hint is to take a few seconds more in the beginning and wind a second bobbin at least half full. Then you won't have to stop and re-thread your machine. I have also found it extremely helpful to always clip the threads at the end of the seams immediately after taking the necessary securing procedures. This eliminates the need to go back and look over the entire garment for dangling threads at completion."

DEAR EUNICE,

I enjoy using the fabric conversion chart I got from you. However, for the first time I am completely confused. My fabric is only 36-inches wide, so I bought extra fabric since the pattern only called for 54 inches. The pattern was cut with a dolman sleeve and there is no way it will fit on the fabric, because it simply isn't wide enough. Shouldn't the pattern company state on the envelope that it requires a certain width fabric? Mrs. L.O.R.

DEAR MRS. L.O.R.,

The fabric conversion chart is a great money saver in most instances. However, like everything else, it does have limitations. There are some designs that require wider fabric, such as the dolman sleeves and wide bias skirts. Probably, the fact that your pattern only suggested 54-inch fabric would have been your clue.

You can still work this pattern out if you don't object to a center front seam or closing, as well as one in the back. The problem is that the long sleeve cut without a seam at the armhole needs more width than a garment with a set-in sleeve.

When working with fabrics that are wider than the pattern suggests, you may find it worthile to place your pattern on a piece of paper the width of the fabric first. Then you will know exactly how much you will need. Fabrics that are wider than 54 inches often require as much as one length less to cut it out, this could be quite a saving. It is unfair to expect the fabric shops to guess the proper yardage when you have these extremes.

Set-in sleeves take perhaps more skill than any other operation in dressmaking. If you want professqonal looking sleeves, Eunice Farmer's illustrated booklet "All About Sleeves" tells you how to set-in sleeves successfully. For your copy send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

He 'Gave' A Little In Apology, So Maybe You Should Give Too

HELEN AND SUE:

Don and I have been going together for four months. We're both nearly 16. I can't single date yet, but he comes over almost every day. He isn't wild or anything.

A couple of days ago we went for a walk. Some of his friends drove by, stopped to talk, and offered him a beer.

I told Don before he accepted it that I wouldn't allow drinking at my house and I'd send him home, so he had a choice of staying with me the rest of the evening or drinking the beer.

He took the beer, and the guys drove off.

Later that evening he called me and apologized for drinking the beer but said I'd still have to call and ask him over before he'd return.

Should I? I think it's his place to ask if he can come see me, and my mother agrees. I told her the whole story. What do you two think? — MARY

MARY:

At first I agreed with your mother, but then I thought: look, Don "gave" a little by apologizing, so perhaps you should give some too. He might feel he's not wanted at your house (especiall if he thinks your parents heard the story).

Let him know there are no hard feelings, even if you DO have to dial his number. — SUE

DEAR M.:

Think back: You darn near forced Don to take that beer when you threatened, (in front of his friends) "I'll send you home if you do!" Had he turned it down, they'd have labeled him "Mary'sLittle Lamb" from here on out —with a ring in his nose yet.

He apologized for drinking. . .it's your turn now. When you ask him over, let him know you understand how a guy feels when his girl puts him on the spot. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I am a 12-yearold-girl who smokes. Some older people think this is really terrible, but they smoke so why not me?

I have at the most seven cigarettes a day and sometimes I don't have any. If I don't inhale, could I get lung cancer? And can I get cancer of the mouth from smoking? —S.Z.

DEAR S.:

First question: Adults think it's terrible to see a 12-year-old lighting up because they don't want you hooked, as they are — they know how hard it is to break the habit.

Second question: Chances for lung cancer are less if you don't inhale — BUT few people continue with cigarettes unless they inhale.

Third question: Your biggest worry isn't cancer (which may or may not develop after years of smoking). It's starting a habit you'll bitterly regret someday. Why don't you get smart? — HELEN

DEAR S.:

Ask yourself, "Why do I smoke?" And be honest. Do you really like cigarettes? Do you need them? Are you showing off to the kids? Are you "getting even" with your parents? Do they make you feel grown up? Help nervousness?

Then read the warning on the package, and ask one more question: "Are they really worth the risk?" Sugarless gum tastes better and isn't habit forming. — SUE

Faire Has Booths For Charities

Youth groups and senior citizens are among the organizations participating in the Renaissance Pleasure Faire with booths to benefit their charities.

The Senior Citizens of Marin County is offering a checking service near the entrance to the fair. Sixty senior citizens from throughout Marin County are working at the "Ye Keeper of the Goods" booth.

Girl Scout Troop 1482 of Novato is serving fair goers by taking care of children at the "Daffydowndillydell." The scouts built seesaws, swings, a sandbox and a small house that children can paint. While their parents stroll the fair the young children can also fill bean bags, draw with charcoal and play games.

A special favorite, according to troop president Doris Kirkwood is "Huckie Buckie down the Brae," a straw hill slide.

A carting service is run by Girl Scout Troop 427 of the Richardson Bay Association. Stationed around the fairgrounds with carts and wheelbarrows they will push or pull anything anywhere in the tradition of medieval carters.

The Methodist Youth Fellowship of Aldersgate Methodist Church in San Rafael is running a pitching game booth, "Thread the Needle" on the"Old Haggler's Way" in the Leather Market area of the fair. This is the group's third fair.

Members of Sunny Hills are selling grapes.

Members of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce are letting themselves be dunked in a huge barrel of water. Disguised as witches, monks and jesters they challenge fairgoers to throw baseballs at a target that will release them into the water.

League of Women Voters of Marin members are staffing the fair ticket office.

The fair, near Novato, is taking place weekends through Oct. 8.

MILL VALLEY ENTREPRENEURS — Three young businessmen embark upon a timeless enterprise in this scene which is one of fifty black-and-white photographs by Suki Hill, currently on view at Dominican College. Miss Hill's photos deal with lifestyles and terrain in Mill Valley and in Inisheer, Ireland.

ART REVIEW

Suki Hill Photos Show 2 Worlds

By ADA GARFINKEL

The photojournalism of Suki Hill, currently being shown at Dominican College, San Rafael, is a blend of beautiful photography and compassion for people and environment.

Fifty of the photos are on display in the college's San Marco Gallery, focused on two totally different worlds — that of Mill Valley, her home, and Inisheer, Ireland, where she visited.

The photographs of Mill Valley are of familiar places and faces. They depict varied life styles from straight to mellow, and there is a relaxed and pervasive ambiance of joy in the good life and lush, nature-endowed environment. The scenes are caught in close-ups as well as panoramic views, and in candid shots of neighbors, pets, mist, rising fog, and rain.

Inisheer, Ireland, is a small island off the coast of Galway. Miss Hill, a professional photographer only since 1965, notes that it comprises a small, homogeneous community (there are less than a hundred people) stopped in time. The inhabitants weave their own clothing, there is no electricity, the land is barren — not a single tree, no grass, no vegetation or hill appears in any scene. The people, too, are as withdrawn and somber as their land.

Houses are shown with thatched roofs and thick, solid walls in one close-up, and a patch of daffodils and an interior shot of a cup-laden cabinet are offered as well. So is the shot of a white, crowing rooster.

Low, snaking rock fences which go on and on, interesecting and criss-crossing, form interesting planes and patterns in two or three photos. They are not erected as property dividers, however, but purely for the purpose of clearing the land and there is no place to dispose of the rocks, according to Miss Hill.

Using a doorway of ruins at an ancient and abandoned church as her format, Miss Hill penetrates the site of a centuries-old graveyard to record gravestone markers in the forms of Celtic and Roman crosses, some with foliation.

Inisheer is three hours by ferry from Galway and can only be reached by going to Galway first. There, Miss Hill recorded the tall, double-decked buses which fill a narrow, paved street; an elaborately decorated pub; two elderly men drinking ale as they rested in a grocery store, their thoughts turned inwardly, and a universal scene of three small boys dressed in Sunday best and playing marbles on their knees.

The photographs are handsomely mounted and handsomely installed and quite appropriate to Miss Hill's thoughtful attention to meaningful moments in time.

The exhibit will continue through Oct. 12 and may be seen from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

Commodore John D. Scott raised the American flag at the Custom House in Monterey July 7, 1846, signaling the passing of California from Mexican rule.

Coast Guard Cutter Is Kept Busy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Coast Guard rescue crews were kept busy yesterday when a fishing vessel burned to the water line and a woman suffered a stroke in unrelated incidents.

Mrs. Marie Pitkin, Alameda, was listed in critical condition at Peninsula Hospital after she was flown there by helicopter from the 38-foot schooner Mars, 65 miles west of the Farallon Islands.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the woman apparently suffered a stroke and her husband, John Pitkin radioed from the schooner for assistance.

The Coast Guard cutter Point Chico assisted in the rescue just hours after racing to the aid of the 44-foot fishing vessel Poor Boy, which caught fire in the engine room and burned to the waterline, a spokesman said.

The Poor Boy's two-man crew was safely taken aboard the fishing vessel Wasp, then transferred to the Coast Guard cutter.

There were no injuries. The Coast Guard said the two fishermen would be returned "to the port of their choice" late today.

Investigationinto the incident was under way.

Construction Tools Stolen From Site

Thieves took $983 in construction equipment —including a 300-pound compressor and three saws — belonging to Mason and Mason Contractors of Saratoga from a construction site at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry, sheriff's deputies reported yesterday.

The theft took place Sept. 1 or 2, deputies said.

How One Tribe May Have Survived Aztec Conquest

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mexican ruins nearly 2,500 years old may hold the secret of the Tarascan Indians' successful defense of their territory against the powerful Aztecs, according to Columbia University anthropologist.

Shirley Gorenstein believes that study of the ruins in Guanajuato state, 90 miles northwest of Mexico City, will sustain her theory that the Tarascans defended their borders through a chain of outposts manned by people of other tribes.

The ruins, consisting principally of two pyramids, five other structures and more than 30 carved rock outcrops, were located this summer by Mrs. Gorenstein and a field party of six students. Study of old Spanish records and aerial photographs set the stage for the discovery.

Mrs. Gorenstein said Thursday that exploration of the ruins could explain how the Tarascans survived when nearly all other Mexican Indian tribes succumbed to Aztec conquest.

"We believe that our studies during the coming year will help confirm our initial hypothesis: that the Tarascans brilliantly chose strategic settlements of other Indians on their borders to defend against the Aztecs, pressing independent tribes into their service..." she said.

"There is no evidence that the Aztecs ever got into Tarascan territory. It appears that such outposts...held the line."

New Prison Industry Plan Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A public interest law group yesterday proposed that California prisons go into competition with private industry by setting up manufacturing plants that employ inmates and pay the $1.75-an-hour minimum wage.

The project envisioned by the Public Interest Law Center would have manufacturing plants both inside and outside state prisons — and would put the profits from their operation into prison reform programs.

"All we're talking about," said Ray Bourhis, co-director of the non-profit center, "is giving inmates the skills to go out in the world after their terms are over and compete — so they don't have to go back to crime."

Bourhis said a six-month study by the center found that virtually all equipment used by prisoners is obsolete, that inmates are paid between 2 cents and 16 cents an hour for work, and that 85 per cent of their families are forced to go on welfare.

If inmates could work in a well-equipped plant and be paid the going minimum wage, he said, they could support their families while in prison and learn the skills for a job when they get out.

Bourhis told a news conference that he asked Assebmly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, to appoint a committee to study the proposal and do a feasibility study involving interested parties such as labor, industry and banks.

Burton For Marijuana Initiative

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Saying it is "time to face reality," a member of the legislature's Democratic leadership yesterday endorsed Prop. 19, which would legalize marijuana possession for private use in California.

"Proposition 19 simply provides that no person 18 years of age or older would be punished for possessing marijuana for personal use. In view of well substantiated evidence regarding its widespread social use, this seems only reasonable to me," Assemblyman John Burton said at a news conference.

Burton, a San Francisco Democrat, is chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee.

He made the endorsement "because the time has come to face reality regarding marijuana," Burton said.

Proposition 19 will be "doing well" if it collects 40 per cent of the vote Nov. 7, Burton said, but added, "I wouldn't be surprised if it passed."

Measures which would have eased marijuana possession penalties failed during this year's legislative session.

Marijuana possession is currently punishable as either a felony or misdemeanor upon first conviction, at the discretion of the judge.

Selling or possessing marijuana for purposes of sale would remain illegal if Proposition 19 is approved.

Nixon Names Trustees For Center

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon yesterday appointed six persons to the board of trustees of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts for terms expiring Sept. 1, 1982.

They are Abe Fortas of the District of Columbia, Catherine Dulin Folger of the District of Columbia, Alice S. Marriott of the District of Columbia, Gustave L. Levy of New York City, Benjamin A. Trustman of Brookline, Mass. and Bonita Granville Wrather of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Fortas, Mrs. Folger and Mrs. Marriott currently are serving on the board and are being reappointed.

THE "OLD LADY"

who lived in a shoe had so many children she didn't know what to do until she saw our shoe in San Anselmo. The "Old Lady" remarked, "My, you have five or six or even seven bedrooms, and I can train all my children to be Olympic Champions in the huge heated & filtered swimming pool." — And after they're through, they won't catch cold because there are 2 fireplaces in this shoe. This is not an "Old Boot," by any means, and doesn't need a new heel or sole. If this shoe sounds good, then try it on.

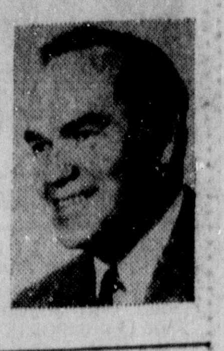
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Marijuana Smoker's Chances Of Lung Trouble Are Minimal



Several interesting letters on marijuana reached my desk. The following is from Illinois. "Will smoking marijuana have the same effect on the lungs as smoking tobacco? What about lung cancer?"

Prolonged marijuana use may cause bronchitis and emphysema in much the same way as does tobacco. To my knowledge, lung cancer has not been reported. The risk probably is minimal, but the possibility of developing bronchogenic carcinoma cannot be discounted among heavy users of marijuana.

Tests show that there is 40 per cent less tar in marijuana smoke than in tobacco smoke. But both tar residues cause cellular changes when applied to the skin of a mouse. Since the pot smoker gets less tar and usually smokes fewer cigarets, his chances of developing lung trouble are minimal.

A second letter hits a little below the belt. "When are doctors going to decide whether pot is harmful or harmless? What about hashish?"

WE MUST agree that far too little is known about the physical and mental effects of marijuana. This is understandable because the strength of the cannabis weed (marijuana) depends upon where it is grown, how much it is diluted or adulterated, how much is consumed, and for how long. It tends to lose some of its potency after standing. But despite this, serious side effects have been reported.

A NOVICE, FOR example, may become fearful and confused following his first experience with pot. Delusions are likely to occur only with high doses. Heavy or habitual use may also lead to apathy, loss of drive, and psychosis. But these side effects have been debated. The most consistent physical effects are red eyes and increase in the pulse rate.

THC (tetrahydrocannabinol) the active ingredient is found on the flowering tips of the upper leaves of the plant. Hashish is the brown resin that covers the upper leaves and flower clusters of the ripe plant. It is five to 10 times stronger than marijuana and contains the psychoactive substances.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

DILATING PUPILS FOR TEST

D. E. Writes: Why are the eyes dilated before being fitted with glasses?

REPLY

Because the eyes are able to overcome or compensate for visual deficiencies by adjusting the size of the pupils. When the pupils are dilated with eye drops, a more accurate test can be made. But these measures are not needed for ordinary refractions.

BLOOD WILL TELL

D. G. writes: How does infectious mononucleosis differ from leukemia?

REPLY

A few cases are indistinguishable during the early stages, but bone marrow and blood studies help establish the diagnosis. This is important, because leukemia is fatal whereas almost everyone survives mono.

TIC OF THE FACE

V.D. writes: Can a tic of the cheek be cured?

REPLY

Yes, provided the causative tensions can be decreased and it is possible to interrupt the habit pattern. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on habit tics.

HUSBAND IS SHRINKING

Mrs. M. K. writes: I'm three inches taller than my husband when he leaves for work at night. When he comes in the morning, he looks an inch or so shorter than when he left. I this sounds ridiculous, but is it possible?

REPLY

In other words, he leaves like a lion and comes home like a mouse. Your husband is tired after his stint at the plant and probably slumps a bit. How do you look to him?

Mexico To Guard Waters With Old Navy Vessels

By C. CONRAD MANLEY
The Christan Science Monitor
News Service

MEXICO CITY — Naval vessels that once defended American warships from enemy mines and air attacks will soon be employed to keep U.S. and other trawlers from fishing illegally in Mexican waters.

This country has just negotiated the purchase of 10 fleet minesweepers from the U.S. Navy for use as offshore patrol vessels on both the Gulf of Mexico and Pacific coasts of Mexico, with the possibility of purchasing 20 more at a later date. All of the craft will come from mothball fleets of the American Navy.

In addition, a second tank-landing ship delivered to Mexico in May is now being fitted out at the Acapulco naval base for service as an emergency relief vessel for use in the event of floods, hurricanes, and other disasters.

Another LST acquired earlier, the former USS Park County (renamed the Rio Panuco), was transferred to the Mexican Navy at San Diego last September and is now based at Veracruz.

The fleet minesweepers, 215-foot steel-hulled ships of the Auk class, were built for service during World War II and have been mothballed in the reserve fleet at San Diego. A Mexican Navy source said that nucleus crews of several hundred officers and men would be sent there soon for training with their ships pending delivery.

The recently acquired Mexican LST, formerly the USS Clearwater County, was accepted by Mexico's naval attache in Washington, Vice-Adm. Carlos Valenzuela Monroy, in a ceremony at the Seattle Navy Yard on May 30. The 335-foot tank-landing ship was turned over to the Mexican Navy by Rear Adm. Wesley L. McDonald, USN, commandant of the 13th Naval District.

Rechristened the Manzanillo and manned by 10 officers and 70 enlisted men, the second LST will join the Rio Panuco in providing security on both coasts for persons in areas threatened by high winds, floods, and other catastrophes. In a crisis, either ship can transport 2,000 to 3,000 refugees to places of safety.

During a Navy Day celebration at Veracruz in June, President Luis Echeverria witnessed a demonstration of an emergency rescue, including the use of two helicopters, of refugees "stranded" on an island off the coast in which the Rio Panuco and its crew simulated procedures to be followed in an actual emergency.

In June, 1971, two 2,100-ton World War II Fletcher-class destroyers, the Harrison and John Rodgers, were bought by the Mexican Navy and renamed Cuauhtemoc and Cuitlahuac after the last two Aztec leaders during the Spanish conquest of Mexico. Armed with 5-inch guns and 40 and 20-mm. cannons, they are the major vessels of the Mexican Navy.

The newly acquired 1,250-ton minesweepers, purchased for what was described as "a friendly price," will be used to control illegal fishing in Mexican waters within the 12-mile limit.

Authorities frequently denounce what they describe as "poaching" and "piracy" by U.S., Cuban, and Japanese trawlers and occasionally such vessels caught in Mexican waters have paid fines and forfeited their catches.

In the Gulf of Mexico, according to Jose Enrique Negroe, president of the National Chamber of the Fishing Industry, Mexico's losses to illegal fishing amount to more than $112 million a year.

Rehiring Of Angela Opposed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke yesterday said he opposes rehiring of Angela Davis to teach at UCLA because of "her use of the classroom to expound on her personal Communist ideologies."

In a statement issued by his office, Reinecke commented on a report that some members of the philosophy department at UCLA would like to offer Miss Davis her old job back.

The lieutenant governor is a member of the University of California Board of Regents which has decision-making power over whether to rehire her.

"I am still against rehiring Angela Davis for the same reasons I was earlier," Reinecke said. "Her use of the classroom to expound on her personal Communist ideologies was not compatible" with the duties of a teacher.

The Editor's Notebook

City's Downtown Important To County

IF SOMETHING drastic is not done soon, downtown San Rafael is in danger of becoming a depressed area.

One has only to look along Fourth Street to see some previously important and valuable store spaces standing vacant.

It has been 30 years since shopping centers emerged to challenge downtown business districts. Up to now, San Rafael has withstood the challenge. It has not done so without drastic action.

About two decades ago, the city prepared its first master plan for handling downtown traffic and parking. The plan seemed adequate on paper, but what has actually been accomplished falls short of the plan's ideal.

To appease certain property owners, the parking plan was juggled and gerrymandered. San Rafael's offstreet parking today is not arranged and located in the most efficient or ideal manner.

Establishment of one-way traffic was slow to come because of loud opposition from some businessmen. Even now, the long recommended addition of two more east-west one-way arteries is still snagged.

More than a decade ago, the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce pushed vigorously for a federally encouraged downtown redevelopment program. For awhile it appeared that might succeed. Unfortunately, it died.

Now the city government is trying to put together a downtown redevelopment program. Already, opposition is mounting; this time, from government agencies which fear their tax "take" may be limited in the deal.

WHAT HAPPENS if downtown San Rafael is not saved? What happens if it is lost?

It is easy to oversimplify and say that progressive merchants will one-by-one move to shopping centers and prosper. As their sales increase, so will sales tax income.

Presumably, most of the movement would be to Northgate and adjacent areas inside San Rafael city limits. The City of San Rafael's financial stability would not be threatened. The San Rafael city treasury could be no worse off, on the income side.

Some marginal businesses might disappear, but they contribute little to the economic health of the community, one might say simplistically.

It all seems so harmless that one wonders why we worry about redevelopment and San Rafael's future at all.

LET'S CONSIDER what happens to the downtown area after profitable business moves out.

Landlords need tenants. They must take whom they can get at whatever rent they can get. Rents go down. Landlords no longer can afford to maintain their properties properly. Decay sets in. The downward spiral gather momentum.

If you think this is all just theoretical, recall Salinas in the 1950s or take a look at the Haight-Ashbury which only a few years ago was a bright, clean area of rising property values.

As an area deteriorates, the cost of police and fire protection rises.

Health and welfare problems multiply and the major portion of the burden of solving these problems falls on county government.

What Marin County does NOT need is a transplant from Fillmore or the Haight-Ashbury to the main street of our county seat.

Trite and hackneyed it may be, but it is nonetheless true that if we do not move forward, we stand in danger of sliding backward.

RICHMOND, BERKELEY and Oakland are not exactly model cities. Each has its expanding depressed areas. But each has its downtown bright spots, thanks to redevelopment.

Without those bright spots to attract and hold profitable businesses — paying high rents to property owners, paying high taxes to city and county, and providing jobs for large numbers of residents — Richmond, Berkeley and Oakland would surely have drowned in a hopeless morass of economic and sociological problems.

Marin County does not need to increase its own health and welfare burden by allowing any part of itself to become a depressed area.

It is easy to find fault with San Rafael's presently pursued redevelopment program. It has its flaws. They are real. They are serious.

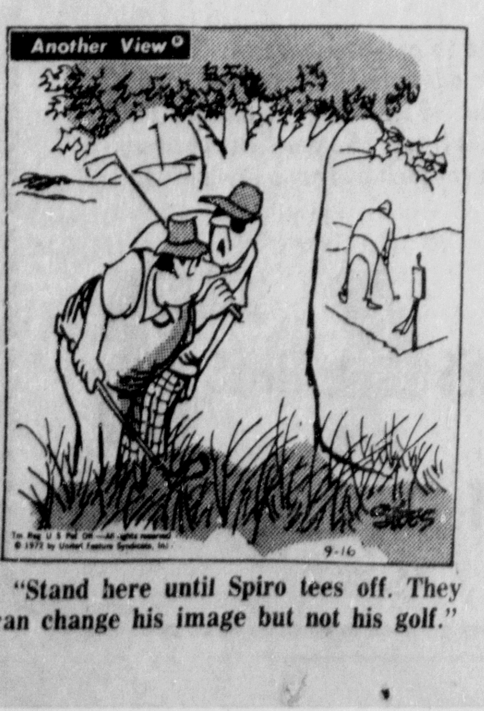
Compared to the alternative of lingering decline, the flaws in the projected redevelopment are minimal.

All of the county has a financial stake in the future of a threatened area. Downtown San Rafael cries for revitalization. Let's get on with it.

Hearing Deer

Deer don't say much. But in these dry grass and brittle twig times before Marin's fall rains, every animal that moves on the ground leaves a trail of noise. Even the usually quiet cat gives unintended warning to its prey as it crackles through the underbrush.

How, then, can one tell a deer from a cat, a raccoon, a skunk, an untagged dog or a brown towhee just by listening? The answer is that only the deer pauses now and then to snack at shrubs and trees, banging its teeth together with the loud pruning-sheers chomp of a browsing animal. When we hear that noise coming, we know we've got to run to save the roses and chrysanthemums.



"Stand here until Spiro tees off. They can change his image but not his golf."

In 1893, the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma was opened to homesteaders. More than 100,000 persons rushed to the area to claim land.

In 1963, the Asian nation of Malaysia was created, occupying the southern portion of the Malay Peninsula and the northern part of the island of Borneo. The country is the world's largest producer of rubber.

Dog Pack Chases Deer In Sleepy Hollow

At seven o'clock this morning a mother and baby deer came tearing through my yard with six large dogs after them. This is in the hills of Sleepy Hollow. It is an upsetting sight to see six large dogs running in a pack. The police, sheriff and Humane Society don't seem to know what to do about it. I would never poison dogs but I would like to poison their owners.

San Rafael's Own Conservationists Campaign

We greatly appreciate your support in urging a "yes" vote on San Rafael's open space bond election next Tuesday. I do, however, feel there could be a misinterpretation of your editorial of Thursday (Conservation Groups Silent on Bond Issue).

While it is true that the major state and national conservation organizations have not participated in this campaign, it is definitely not true that there has been "little campaign in its behalf". Hundreds of San Rafael residents have worked long and hard in the short time since the city council set this election to organize and carry out a city-wide campaign aimed at passing the bond issue.

Homeowners associations in the city have taken the lead, and many other local organizations have lent support. Door to door canvassing, highly organized and supplied with educational materials, has been planned and carried out. The list of local groups and organizations who are supporting and contributing to the campaign is far too long to list in this letter. They represent, however, most of the "avowed spokesmen for preserving the environment" that you mention in your editorial.

This is the first time San Rafael residents have had a chance to do anything more than give lip service to our belief in open space. We think the response from the citizenry has been outstanding. We have every hope that it will result in a resounding "yes" vote next Tuesday.

Again, many thanks for your support. But please don't downgrade the campaign. A great many individuals and organizations have spent a lot of valuable time and effort to try to put across something we believe in. Maybe the "professional" conservation groups have not been too involved, but this is a San Rafael issue, and a great many San Rafael people are very involved.

(The editorial noted lack of campaigning by the established conservationist groups. We recognizethat the San Rafael Open Space Committee has been working hard for passage of the issue. — Editor.)

Too Many Quarterbacks Spoil The 'Living Color' Of Football

WASHINGTON — The football season has officially begun, and living rooms all over the nation friends are gathering to watch these exciting contests on TV.

There is a certain one-upmanship in football TV watching that has become part of the game.

If you are the host, it goes something like this?

BRADLEE COMES IN and sits down. "What's wrong with your color?"

"It looks fine to me," you say.

"You have too much green. The players all look sick." Bradlee goes over and adjusts the color knobs. "There," he says, "that's better."

Two minutes later Dalinsky arrives. "Why is the grass so red?" he asks.

"Because Bradlee said it was too green."

"How can grass be too green?" Dalinsky asks.

Bradlee replies, "The grass is too green when the players are too green."

"I'LL FIX IT," Dalinsky says. He gets up and twists a dial.

"It's fine now," you say, having missed the first seven plays.

Geyelin arrives and asks, "Do you still have that old TV?"

"It's not old," you protest. "I bought it two years ago."

"Where's your fine tuner?" Geyelin asks as he goes up to the set.

"It's the third button down."

GEYELIN TWISTS the fine tuner. The color comes in perfect, but he's lost the sound.

"Will you get the sound back?" Califano yells.

"If I get the sound back, everything will look yellow," Geyelin says.

"It wasn't yellow until you started fooling with it," you say. "Will you sit down so we can watch the game?"

Califano asks, "Do you have an aerial on the set?"

"Of course I've got an aerial on the set."

"Outdoors or indoors?"

"Outdoors, dammit. What kind of question is that?"

"You should be able to get Channel 7 better than that," Califano says. "Maybe there are leaves clogged in it."

"THERE ARE NO leaves clogged in it," you say angrily. "I had a perfect picture before you guys came in."

"Why don't we go to my house?" Dalinsky suggests. "I have no trouble getting Channel 7."

"I don't have any trouble either," you shout.

"Then why is Howard Cosell's face chartreuse?" Geyelin asks.

"His face is always chartreuse," you reply. "That's what makes him such a good sportscaster."

Bradlee gets up and starts fiddling with the dials. The picture goes to black and white.

Everyone starts yelling at once.

Geyelin gets up and pushes another dial. The vertical is now moving 60 frames a minute.

DALINSKY GETS UP, stops the verticle, but now the players are elongated and look 12 feet high.

"This sure is a crazy set," Caifano mutters as he tries to get the horizontal back.

"Everyone sit down," you scream. "The next person who touches the set leaves the house."

You get up and adjust the knobs exactly as they were before anyone arrived. It's a perfect picture. You sit back and suddenly you hear Frank Gifford's voice. "And that's the end of the exciting first half. Now stay tuned to a wonderful half-time show, right after this message."

Always vote for a principle, though you vote alone, and you may cherish the sweet reflection that your vote is never lost. — John Quincy Adams.

Abortion Issue In Background Of Campaign For Presidency

NEW YORK — Beneath the churning surface of the presidential campaign is a sleeper unlikely to find a place in the campaign oratory of either party. Nevertheless, it is an issue that triggers strong emotions and intense partisanship.

The liberalization of laws permitting abortion at the option of the woman and the doctor is at stake. The focus of the dispute is here in New York state where a liberalized law has set a pattern for other states.

That law was repealed by the legislature after a lobbying spectacular at Albany which had seldom been seen even in that capital of high-powered lobbying. The attack was led by Roman Catholics and, to a lesser degree, by other religious groups. Legislators were threatened with certain defeat if they refused to vote for the repealer.

GOV. NELSON ROCKEFELLER promptly vetoed the repeal bill. In a forthright veto message he said: "I do not believe it right for one group to impose its vision of morality on an entire society. Neither is it just or practical to attempt to dictate the innermost personal beliefs and conduct of its citizens."

This drew a volley of criticism from the forces that had lobbied so intensively to put over the repealer. The prospect now is that the legislature, under the same pressures, will pass another repeal bill and the governor will once more exercise his veto. It puts his future in an interesting light.

Widespread reports have had Rockefeller coming to Washington in the second Nixon term as either secretary of state or defense. The governor insists these reports have no basis in fact. He would prefer to stay where he is — in the middle of his fourth term, believing his power base here gives him more leverage on national affairs than he would have in the scramble for place and position in Washington.

Moreover, the question of the state's abortion law is possibly a consideration. If Rockefeller were to resign as governor, he would be replaced by Lt. Gov. Malcolm Wilson. Wilson is a Catholic and a conservative, and he would almost surely sign a repeal bill.

IN THE BACKGROUND of the emotional issue of abortion is a monumental study that has particular relevance for Governor Rockefeller. At the request of President Nixon, John D. Rockefeller III, brother of the governor, headed a commission to survey "population and the American future." After a comprehensive study with a distinguished staff, a majority of the commission recommended the option of abortion between a woman and her physician as one means of population control. Present state laws restricting abortion should be liberalized "along the lines of the New York state statute," it said.

The Rockefeller Commission report faced squarely up to unrestricted population growth and its consequences, with stress on the quality of life rather than quantity. The average person will be markedly better off, the report stated, in terms of traditional economic values if population growth slows down than if it resumes the pace experienced in the recent past.

The report had scarcely been submitted last May when the President nullified the recommendation on abortion, saying "unrestricted abortion policies would demean human life." The following week, in tha course of wooing Catholic voters, he sent a letter to Cardinal Cooke in New York voicing support for efforts to repeal New York's liberalized law.

SINCE THIS HAPPENED, a Gallup poll has come out showing a marked change in public opinion. According to the poll 64 per cent, and even a majority of Roman Catholics, believe that the decision to have an abortion should be left solely to the woman and her doctor. Of the Catholics in the sample, 56 per cent responded in the affirmative on the right of choice by the woman and her physician. Shortly after the report was issued, the National Catholic Welfare Conference accused the commission of entering "an ideological valley of death."

Sen. George McGovern's critics on the right have accused him of taking a radical stand on abortion. His response is that he believes the issue should be left to the states, with no interference by the federal government. Submerged though it is in the heat of the campaign, the abortion issue is certain to be heard from again.

Kissinger May Have Role In Future Of Weapons Race

President Nixon's greatest political asset, Henry Kissinger, is traveling again. This time his mission is to Bonn and Moscow. (The last trip was to Paris, Saigon, and Tokyo). The fact of the trip keeps summitry in the air. Wherever Mr. Kissinger goes, top reporters are sure to follow —and write about Russians and Chinese instead of about taxes, the price of meat, and unemployment.

But the fact that Moscow is the main target does, usefully, call for a review of the state of American-Russian relations.

They could be better. They have been far worse at times in the past. Actually, they are about normal — for these times.

THERE ARE TWO important subjects pending for discussion and, if possible, reconciliation: the establishing of a new Russian relationship with Western Europe, and the second round of talks over nuclear weapons.

On the first point — Russia and Europe —the immediate question is whether Washington can keep the matter of mutual force reductions separate from a general conference on European security. The Russians want the general conference, and soon as possible, and are trying to avoid any separate or earlier discussion of mutual force withdrawals. Obviously, they hope that by avoiding the subject of forces, Washington will be pushed by domestic pressures to reduce its strength in Europe without Russia doing the same.

Washington argues that mutual force reduction is a long and complicated subject which should be put into a special conference of indefinite duration, rather like the SALT talks. The Americans want to avoid having it put into the general conference where they might find themselves outmaneuvered in a general rush to settle, at long last, Russia's relations with Western Europe.

ON THE SECOND point, SALT, the question now is how soon to get started on the second round. The place has been agreed. Instead of switching SALT II between Vienna and Helsinki, as in SALT I, it will all be done in Geneva.

But how soon?

The time can make quite a difference. Congress has under consideration now appropriations for beginning a whole series of new weapons of all varieties, including a "hard target" missile which, at least in theory, would make obsolete all existing land-based missiles and force the competition into air and sea — where the race costs even more money.

If SALT II could get under way at once, it is conceivable that the negotiators could get a lid on the race before the taxpayers of both Russia and the United States have to pay for still another, and very much more expensive, generaiton of new weapons. The cost just to get going on the new ones is around $10 billion a year. That kind of saving could help President Nixon get his budget back into balance.

But Mr. Nixon is inhibited here by political considerations. Any further limitation on weaponry is bound to be unpopular in the cities and states where the weapons would otherwise be built.

And any limitations are even more unpopular with the unions involved in the building. The best time for weapons limitation is always in the first year of a new term, never during an election campaign.

MR. KISSINGER CAN talk about such matters in Moscow, and presumably will. But these also are the routine subjects of routine diplomacy. Russia keeps its ablest ambassador in Washington, and Washington has a top professional diplomat in Moscow. Matters like this are best handled through regular channels rather than in the rush and glare of a Kissinger visitation.

Any Kissinger trip to anywhere always raises speculation about a possible early end to the Vietnam War. Undoubtedly the subject will come up in Moscow this time. But experts are in agreement that Hanoi shows not the slightest sign of interest right now in a negotiated settlement. It is Hanoi, not Moscow, which decides when the war will end. The war has been Vietnamized on the Hanoi side, if not yet on the Saigon side.

Neither Moscow nor Peking can influence Hanoi as much as Washington can influence Saigon — and that is limited.

A Look At Those Who Surround George McGovern

By GODFREY SPERLING JR.
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Frank Mankiewicz was not available. "He has his door shut and says he will shoot me if I bother him," his secretary told a reporter on the telephone. "He's up to his ears."

"Please pass a note under Frank's door," the reporter replied. "Ask him what relative of Buster Keaton used to play outfield for the St. Louis Cardinals."

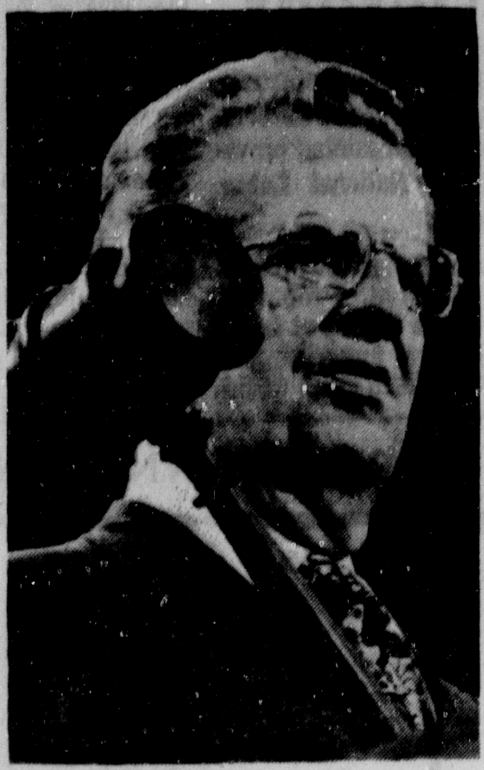
Within minutes Senator McGovern's national political director was calling back. Both he and Senator McGovern play this little game of "who played what on the St. Louis Cardinals." Usually Mr. Mankiewicz stumps the Senator; but this time, stumped himself, he was anxious to find out, as he did, that the answer was outfielder Ernie Orsatti. And then the reporter got the information he needed from Mr. Mankiewicz.

This kind of banter goes on continually in the McGovern camp with many other staff members as well. The lighter spirit is encouraged by Senator McGovern, who seems to believe that it is healthy to counter the adversity with a little laughter.

But adversity is thumping the Senator hard these days, not only in the polls — where his race appears to be doing quite poorly — but within this same outwardly fun-loving staff.

For beneath the facade is a staff in turmoil, one in which dissidents, including former Democratic National Committee Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, have criticized the McGovern organization openly.

The young man who doubtless has the ear of Senator McGovern more than many others is campaign manager Gary Hart.



LAWRENCE O'BRIEN
The Old Pro

Mr. Hart, in his early 30's, is often viewed — from those on the outside looking in — as a brilliant amateur who, more than anyone else, masterminded the highly successful McGovern primary campaign. Doubtless, Mr. Hart deserves much credit.

But another young man, Rick Stearns, put together the McGovern organizations in all the nonprimary states — and made them work. With Mr. Hart heading the state campaign efforts across the nation, there are those within the McGovern organization — as well as critics on the outside — who say Mr. Hart doesn't have the professional know-how or, for that matter, the authority, to "put it all together."

However, at this writing, Mr. Hart seems to have been given something of a vote of confidence by Senator McGovern.

In the wake of a threat by Mr. O'Brien that he would bolt the McGovern staff if the organization was not tightened up, Senator McGovern met with Mr. O'Brien and then announced that the two had worked out their differences.

He said that Mr. O'Brien, who had been acting principally as a liaison with Democratic leaders, would now have a "coordinating voice" in the McGovern campaign operation.

This, to observers, was a rather enigmatic explanation.

But Mr. Hart stays on with the nominal No. 1 title of "campaign manager." He continues to "handle the campaign operation," including fund raising, media expenditures, and voter registration.

What Mr. O'Brien does now is subject to what best can be termed a "shakedown trip." There is some appearance — although not confirmed by Mr. McGovern — that Mr. O'Brien has now become the overall adviser of the campaign.

This may mean that before long Mr. O'Brien as the "old pro" in the organization, will become, in fact, the staff leader under the candidate.

There are other "old pros" aboard but none whose experience would qualify them for the command position. One is Mr. Mankiewicz, best remembered for his impressive show of equanimity as he reported on TV the moment-by-moment condition of Robert Kennedy at the time of the assassination. From the press secretary job in 1968 Mr. Mankiewicz became a newspaper columnist and TV commentator. Then he moved in early as one of the first experienced political people to join with Senator McGovern. But this time, Mr. Mankiewicz is the chief campaign strategist with another ambiguous title, "National Political Director."

Mr. Mankiewicz really operates apart from the intrinsic campaign organization. He is Senator McGovern's "right-hand man," the one who talked to Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton and asked him about the "skeletons in the closet." Mr. Mankiewicz is always more privy to Senator McGovern's thinking on almost any subject than anyone else. He is a generalist. And more than that, like his famous father, film writer Herman Mankiewicz

Campaign Manager

("Citizen Kane" among many others), Mr. Mankiewicz is a wit and raconteur. He is a favorite among newsmen, with whom he always mingles on the campaign plane.

Another "old pro" is Ted Van Dyk, who runs Senator McGovern's issues and research division. Besides putting together position papers (about one a week these days), Mr. Van Dyk heads a staff of speech writers including Milt Gwirtzman, former Robert and Edward Kennedy speech writer (Gwirtzman wrote Sen. Kennedy's convention speech this year); John Bartlow Martin, author and ambassador to the Dominican Republic under President Kennedy; Sandy Berger, former speech writer for Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa; Robert Shrum, formerly a John Lindsay and Edmund Muskie speech writer; and Steven Schlesinger, a son of Arthur Schlesinger.

Mr. Van Dyk seeks to keep his hand on the "McGovern theme," trying to see to it that all those who speak for the candidate, including congressmen, say what the candidate himself is saying.

Another McGovern key aide with high professional standing is Richard Dougherty, former New York bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times. He, more than anyone else, must be given the credit for the lack of grumbling among newsmen.

Mr. Dougherty makes Senator McGovern accessible to the press, much more so than most candidates have been in past presidential years. Further, he sees to it that all staff, including himself, are available to talk to newsmen. And he does it all with grace and good humor.

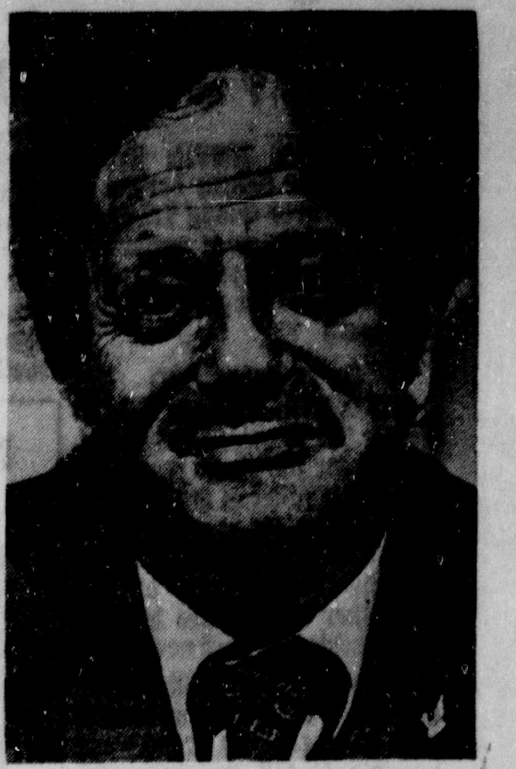
The man who feels Mr. McGovern's low ebb in the polls as much as anyone is Henry Kimelman, the Virgin Islands land developer and longtime friend of the Senator, who is in charge of collecting money for the campaign.

Under Mr. Kimelman is Morris Dees, who has performed magnificently in directing the direct-mail, fund-raising drive. The small bills flowing in as a result of the mail appeal provided the financial backbone for the preconvention campaign. And now a further direct-mail appeal (aided by Mr. McGovern's plea over TV) has brought in $2 million since the convention and during a period when the big contributors were holding back.

Miles Rubin is in charge of collecting the big amounts which means, at this stage, he has the difficult task of getting wealthy Democrats to invest heavily in what, as of now, looks like a losing cause.

Mrs. Jean Westwood, new Democratic National Committee chairman, is devoting most of her time to pulling the party together. Thus, as she seeks to bridge rifts and court defectors, Mrs. Westwood contributes importantly to the campaign effort. But she does not provide input into planning on any day-to-day basis.

John Holum, the Senator's legislative assistant, is the candidate's speech writer aboard the campaign plane. His expertise lies in the area of foreign policy and, particularly, military defense matters.



FRANK MANKIEWICZ
Wily And Tough

Former Robert Kennedy adviser Fred Dutton is another political strategist who sits close to Mr. McGovern these days. Mr. Dutton is also a "trouble-shooter," available to tackle any unexpected problem that crops up along the campaign trail.

Joe Duffey is executive director of Citizens for McGovern, a group which seeks to broaden the McGovern appeal among youths, blacks, minorities generally, and others. Pierre Salinger is co-director of this organization.

At campaign planning sessions, held at headquarters on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, representing the black and minority point of view is Ed Sylvester, himself a black.

New Choices And Possibilities Face Mediterranean Countries

By JOHN K. COOLEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

TRIPOLI, LIBYA — Early in 1805, an adventurous United States Army officer from Woodstock, Conn., named William Eaton, set out almost single-handed to change the balance of power on the southern shore of the Mediterranean.

For centuries the European seapowers had been battling the Barbary pirates based in North Africa who had been sinking ships, capturing cargoes, and enslaving their crews. For Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal this became one of the many pretexts to occupy and colonize parts of North Africa.

The Aemrican merchants of New England, too, had suffered at the hands of the Arab corsairs. After careful study of the situation as U.S. consul in Tunis, William Eaton persuaded U.S. President Jefferson to let him lead a motley expedition of 10 U.S. marines and a few Arab mercenaries, to seize power from the Tipoli pirates.

Mr. Eton's camel-borne force trekked westward from Alexandria, Egypt, through the torrid Libyan desert andcaptured Derna, Libya, in April, 1805, with support from the cannon of the U.S. Mediterranean Fleet.

Mr. Eaton never reached the shores of Tipoli because before he could the Pasha of Tripoli signed a treaty of eternal peace with the United States.

From then on, piracy declined and the European powers wrangled for colonial positions, with France winning the choicest ones in Algeria, Tunisia, and Morocco and the United States withdrawing from the scene.

Some 170 years after William Eaton's raid, and after two major wars and many minor ones fought over Mediterranean seaports, oil, travel routes, real estate, and power positions, new choices and new possibilities face the peoples on the Mediterranean's southern shore, the West and the newcomers to the region —the Soviets.

After the Arab defeat by Israel in 1967, the Soviet Union's growing new fleet and thousands of Soviet military men and technicians moved into the area, mainly Egypt, to aid the Arabs and to challenge the old supremacy of the West, which was expressed among other ways in the return of the United States Navy.

Under the watchful radar scanners of the 50-odd ships and hundreds of aircraft of the U.S. Sixth Fleet, and the navies of the other North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) powers, Russian missile cruisers, nuclear-powered submarines, and land-based naval aircraft became daily features of the Mediterranean scene.

But suddenly this summer, on Egyptian President Anwar al-Sadat's orders, nearly 20,000 Soviet military advisers, pilots, air-defense teams, and Soviet naval personnel quit Egypt. Their departure has opened new perspectives for Western planners, who want to inject more unity in the complex and sometimes contradictory Mediterranean strategies of the Western powers.

Many of the Mediterranean people themselves, however, see things in a different way. "For us," Mansour Rashid Kekhia, Foreign Minister of Col. Muammar al-Qaddafi's militantly nationalist Libyan regime in power since September, 1969, told me, "the situation is clear. Since 1969, we have been saying that the fleets of both superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, should sail home where they belong. The Mediterranean should be for Mediterranean people."

With certain nuances, the Libyan view is shared by Presidents Boumedienne of Algeria, Bourguiba of Tunisia, Tito of Yugoslavia, and Makarios of Cyprus. With the departure of the Soviets, and after agreeing to unite with Libya by September, 1973, Egypt may soon come round to this view too.

The Soviets' departure from Egyptian naval facilities, completed at the end of August, has led the Kremlin to make strong efforts to retain those it still has at Latakia and Tartus, Syria, and if possible to get more.

At the region's extreme western end, where King Hassan of Morocco has just escaped the second attempt within 13 months by mutinous officers to kill him, the King himself took a more cynical view of the Mediterranean's demilitarization.

He told the Beirut magazine Al-Hawadith, "This is only a dream and a waste of time." The U.S. and the Soviet Union are present "because they want to be here, and not because we allowd them to come in." Not even the combined forces of the Mediterranean states and Western Europe could get them out, he added.

What King Hassan omitted to say was that first, despite inter-NATO frictions, United States ships are in the Mediterranean and using shore facilities on its northern coasts and approaches, from Portugal eastward to Turkey, with Western Europe's consent. Second, King Hassan himself permits the U.S., whose naval air personnel train the Moroccan Air Force at Kenitra air base, to operate naval and other communications facilities quite important to the U.S. position in the Mediterranean.

Several other Western nations base their continuing positions of power in he western Mediterranean at least in part on the stability of the Moroccan monarchy, now seriously threatened. The former colonial powers, France and Spain, especially France, control major mining, banking, and manufacturing investments. Spain's southern desert colony of Spanish Sahara, claimed by Moroccan nationalists whom King Hassan has held back from militant action, has become a major world producer of phosphates, competing directly with Moroccan phosphates for markets.

Britain's continued possession of its beleaguered Gibraltar colony, claimed by Spain, depends to a large degree on stability in Morocco which furnished Gibraltar with labor and fresh food and water supplies. Together with Spain's Ceuta and Melilla on the Mediterranean coast and Rota near Cadiz, used by the U.S. Navy, Gibraltar still keeps a Western military watch on the Mediterranean's western entrance.

In April, 1961, a year before Algerians won their eight-year war for independence from Fance, a handful of French army generals and colonels tried unsuccessfully to overthrow French President Charles de Gaulle and block the Algerian independence he was slowly acquiescing in.

Their leader, Gen. Maurice Challe, tried at the moment of the putsch to play on NATO fears of being outflanked from the south.

"Do you," he asked ina broadcast beamed to France, 'swant Mers el-Kebir to become a Soviet base?" — implying this would certainly happen if Algeria won its freedom.

Today Mers el-Kebir, a kind of giant southern Gibraltar with anti-nuclear submarine pens and sheltered anchorage, is a purely Algerian base, out of Soviet reach. Though accepting major Russian military aid and training, President Boumedienne's government never permitted the kind of major Russian presence which President Sadat of Egypt put an end to in July, 1972.

Visits of Soviet warships and military aircraft to Algeria are rare. The Algiers government has been quietly but steadily reducing what Soviet military presence there has been.

Though it lacks formal diplomatic relations with Washington, broken during the 1967 Arab-Israel war, Algiers is expanding its trade, especially in sales of oil and natural gas, with the West. Ironically, its Soviet benefactor competes for its natural-gas markets: One of North Africa's big cutomers for gas, Italy, is increasing its imports from Russia at North Africa's expense.

Algiers also is exapnding its oil and natural-gas sales to the United States. Hundreds of American technicians now work in the Algerian oil and gas industries. If finally approved by the Federal Power Commission in Washington, a major deal between Algeria and El Paso Natural Gas Company will result in sale of huge quantities of liquefied Algerian gas to a power-hungry United States over the next 25 years.

Gun Control Pinned Down In Crossfire

By ROBERT P. HEY
The ChristianScience Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate-passed gun control bill is pinned down by potentially heavy crossfire in the House. As a result the proposal to ban the sale and manufacture of cheap new handguns may be doomed this year.

On one flank lie the traditional gun control opponents, largely conservative representatives from rural areas.

On the other flank is a surprising opponent — liberals who support tougher gun control. Quite a few of them privately think for a variety of reasons that the present proposal is so weak it would be better not to pass it, but to try to pass a stronger one next year. They admit, however, that their chances next year might be no better, and possibly worse, than this year.

It is not yet certain how many liberals who hold this private view finally will oppose the measure. But it is known that a number are considering such step. Such a public fracturing of the fragile gun control coalition would surely defeat the measure.

By themselves the conservatives in the past have been strong enough to defeat most gun control legislation, and they could be that strong again this time. They might be able to bury this year's proposal in the conservative-dominated House Rules Committee, which must formally send most bills to the floor of the House.

There are two ways of circumventing this committee but both are considered impractical in this case. One would require a majority of the members of the House to approve a discharge petition, but that would consume too much time. The second would require passage of the bill by a two-thirds majority in the House; it is not believed to have anywhere near that much support.

Natural Gas Supply Starting To Dwindle

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Owing to a growing natural-gas supply pinch, gas utilities in a number of Eastern and Midwestern states are reluctantly curtailing fuel service to new homes and apartments.

In Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, Ohio, and several other states, gas distributors supplying the heating needs of more than 5 million homes are refusing to take on additional residential customers.

In Ohio, for example, the Columbia Gas Company, which serves two-thirds of the state's 88 counties, will cease providing new gas hookups to builders and developers after Oct. 31. Some months ago New York's Public Service Commission ruled that gas suppliers could continue to connect lines to one-and-two family homes, but had to stop seeking new business from multifamily units, as well as industrial and commercial customers.

"There's a real crunch on," says William J. Miners, vice-president of New Jersey Natural Gas Company, one distributor that has already felt the supply pinch acutely. Since July, 1970, the utility hasn't taken on any new business from shopping centers, factories, or warehouses.

When pipeline operators forecast further cutbacks in gas deliveries from wells in Texas and Louisiana last year, the central Jersey utility stopped making new residential connections. Despite climbing demand for the clean-burning fuel, the company this summer asked its 250,000 customers not to install new gas appliances such as stoves or driers, unless it was to replace similar wornout units.

"A lot of people would like to convert to gas heat, but we have to turn them down," laments Mr. Miners.

These curtailments, which are expected to become more and more widespread in coming months, don't directly affect the nation's existing 37 million residential users. But the shortage of available supplies, utility spokesmen say, has forced the industry to take steps to protect its current customer base by not overloading distribution systems with new outlets.

In most parts of the nation, utilities have followed a policy of curtailing lower-priority commercial and industrial use when supplies are inadequate to serve all customers. The Federal Power Commission has also asserted its authority to allocate natural gas flowing through interstate lines in favor of homeowners during periods of shortage.

In the past few years, the emerging gas supply squeeze has mainly affected industrial and commercial users in the East and Midwest. Many hold "interruptible" service contracts, which provide for supply cutbacks when residential demand is heavy in winter months.

Unless this coming winter is a mild one, gas officials warn that many more factories face reduced allocations in an effort to conserve fuel for home heating and cooking purposes.

The threat of cutbacks in residential gas supplies has aroused the concern of the home-building industry. Since gas heating is often less costly than alternative fuels, builders are anxious to avert reductions of service to new construction.

In a number of cases, builders have had to abandon plans to use gas heating in new projects. Levitt & Sons, one of the nation's largest home builders, said it recently redesigned several hundred homes in Maryland and New Jersey for electric or oil heat after local gas distributors were unable to guarantee the availability of gas supplies.

Normally Levitt installs gas-fired water and space heating equipment into 95 per cent of its homes. Unless the supply situation improves, predicts Robert Hoppe, a Levitt engineer, "there will be a swing away from gas heating."

In a typical single-family home, a shift to oil or electric heating boosts initial equipment costs anywhere from $200 to $500, according to Mr. Hoppe. And in the case of electric heating, heavier insulation materials must be used, and monthly heating bills tend to be higher.

THIS WEEK In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The United States, using its veto right for the second time in U.N. history, blocked a Security Council resolution this week calling for an immediate halt to all military operations in the Mideast.

The council was called into session Sunday by Syria and Lebanon to discuss Israeli air raids.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said the resolution was vetoed because the resolution did not mention the Arab terrorism that led to the Israeli attacks.

West Germany announced it would pay about $1 million to relatives of the 11 Israeli athletes killed by Arabs at the Munich Olympics.

Around the World; Around the Clock

BRUSSELS—A clerk at the Israeli embassy was shot and wounded after going to a cafe where he was told he would be given information on plans for a terrorist attack.

WASHINGTON—The united States announced the sale of 20 million bushels of wheat to China—the first major farm sale to China by the United States since the Communist takeover in 1949.

MOSCOW—Henry A. Kissinger adviser to President Nixon, met with Soviet officials to discuss trade. The White House said it expected a new trade agreement with the Soviet Union to be signed in the near future.

TEL AVIV—Israel ruled that MeyerLansky, a reputed underworld figure in the United States, could not receive Israeli citizenship.

WASHINGTON—Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, who has been nominated to be Army chief of staff, was summoned by a Senate hearing looking into unauthorized bombing raids covered up by Lt. Gen. Paul D. Lavelle. Sen. John C. Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, reported a conflict between Abrams' testimony and Lavelle's. But Abrams' nomination was expected to be approved.

Flight Over Quang Tri—Graves, Craters, Ghosts

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Tracy Wood of the Saigon bureau of UPI flew over Quang Tri Province in a helicopter yesterday. This is her dispatch on that most wartorn province in South Vietnam.)

By TRACY WOOD

HAI LANG, Vietnam (UPI)—Quang Tri Province is the battlefield for the single most devastating conflict of the Vietnam War—a scene of destruction not equaled during the 1968 Tet offensive when much of Hue and other cities were leveled. Only ghosts live here now.

I flew over this hellish landscape in a helicopter Friday and from the air it was not possible to tell the difference between the thousands of round mounds of earth used for graves in the low-lying country and the thousands of circular craters blasted by the fighter-bombers.

Below, tanks, trucks and soldiers in camouflage fatigues churned through acres and acres of Quang Tri's rice paddies. Many acres simply were abandoned by the 250,000 refugees who fled south when North Vietnamese troops launched the spring offensive across the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

From a helicopter, eastern Quang Tri Province resembles a desolate swamp. The deserted, water-filled paddies are crisscrossed by dikes and red dirt roads, made nearly impassable by typhoon rains. The promising rice crop has gone to seed.

Highway 1, a ribbon of black asphalt about 12 miles inland from the South China sea, marks the front line in many places between the North and South Vietnamese armies.

Far to the west, the dark green hills are partially hidden by mist. The greens become more vivid moving east across the paddies which end abruptly in the white sand dunes along the coast.

Some North Vietnamese troops still are entrenched in bunkers in the dunes but the South Vietnamese control the lowlands from the coast to the highway and an area north to Quang Tri city, about 18 miles south of the DMZ.

East of the highway, the only signs of human life are the long truck convoys ferrying hundreds of South Vietnamese soldiers to the intense fighting in Quang Tri City, only a few miles below the DMZ.

Hai Lang where I am writing this dispatch is just off Highway 1 and about five miles south of Quang Tri City. It once was a prosperous village with many two-story stucco houses. All that remains of the town is its location on a map and piles of rubble.

A few soldiers sit in the shade cast by mounds of pastel blue and yellow stucco bricks. Another shaded area temporarily shelters the bodies of dead soldiers before they are removed to Hue, 27 miles to the south.

No civilians are supposed to stay in Quang Tri province but a few walk back from the refugee camps to try to salvage possessions from wrecked homes or visit the graves of relatives.

Occasionally, civilians — women, children and old men—still escape from the Communists north of Quang Tri City.

Barefoot, wearing only cotton pajamas and the conical white straw hats, they follow Highway 1 south to the safety of refugee camps.

Last week one column of about 20 civilians was trudging south when North Vietnamese soldiers west of the highway launched a heavy attack on government troops across the road. The civilians, caught in the middle, dived for cover.

"They'll be all right," an American adviser said. "They know how to survive."

Before the North Vietnamese captured Quang Tri May 1, more than 300,000 civilians lived on the farms and villages of the 40-mile-wide and 35-mile-long province.

The huge refugee camps at Da Nang, 85 miles south of Quang Tri, now shelter 250,000 Quang Tri civilians. Government officials estimate 60,000 more civilians still are in Quang Tri province behind North Vietnamese lines, another 2,000 were taken to North Vietnam and 2,000 more were killed in fighting.

State CofC Urges Tax Measure Defeat

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Chamber of Commerce today urged voters to approve the controversial agricultural labor relations initiative on the Nov. 7 ballot and defeat the Watson property tax limitation measure.

In making its recommendations on all 22 ballot measures, the chamber said Prop. 22, the agricultural labor measure, would extend to farm workers the collective bargaining provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

The chamber said the property tax initiative, Prop. 14, would create a deficit of more than $1 billion annually and "the major shift in taxes would be from the large landowner to the small taxpayer."

"The average taxpayer would pay a 40 per cent higher sales tax, plus 25 per cent more on liquor and 100 per cent more on tobacco if the amendment is adopted," it said.

The chamber urged a "no" vote on Prop. 19, which would permit the private use of marijuana by persons 18 years and older. It said the effects of marijuana use are "unpredictable" and liberalization of laws governing marijuana "would be the green light for even more drug abuse ... "

The chamber urged approval of Prop. 17, the measure designed to restore the death penalty in California. It said the death penalty is "an effective deterrent to some would-be killers."

But it declared its opposition to Prop. 20, an initiative which would tighten controls on development along California's coastline. The chamber said the measure does not provide compensation to property owners for the "immediate decrease in property values" which would occur if Prop. 20 is passed.

Norwegian Price Freeze Imposed

OSLO (UPI)—Prime Minister Trygve Bratteli's Social Democratic government yesterday imposed a complete freeze on prices in Norway for an undetermined period.

The government said prices will be held at the level of Sept. 7. The government said it will also investigate the possibility of reducing the 20 per cent value added tax on certain food stuff.

The move came one week after the powerful Norwegian Trade Union Confederation urged Bratteli to halt galloping prices.

Redwood, San Marin Take Grid Openers

Giants' Defense The Key

In the kind of football game that leaves fans with gray hairs and badly-bitten fingernails, Redwood High School held off a last-instant charge by host Antioch last night and came away with a 7-6 victory.

Frank Giorgi and Pete Massoletti led a defensive charge that stopped Antioch's Jim Woodward short of a two-point conversion with 30 seconds left in the game. Woodward attempted to sweep the left side of Redwood's defensive line.

Antioch scored with 30 seconds left to earn the right to try for two points, as Woodward ran three yards on fourth down.

Redwood's touchdown came on a 28-yard pass interception return by Mike Connor in the first quarter, and Don Nelson kicked what proved to be the winning conversion.

"We were really pleased with the work of John Troppmann at quarterback," said Giants' coach Phil Roark. Troppmann, a junior, completed nine of 16 passes for 186 yards and directed a ground game that rolled up an additional 193.

Redwood spent the entire evening threatening Antioch's goal, but fumbled twice in the end zone and had the ball stolen once at the four yard line.

Troppmann opened the game with a 63-yard completion to Matt Gondak, and at one point connected on six straight passes.

Katsumi Johnson led Redwood's receivers with four catches for 75 yards. Connor spearheaded the rushing attack with 58 yards in 13 carries.

Roark felt beforehand that the game was a critical one for his team. "They (Antioch) are very physical, and this is an important game for us, especially for an opener." Redwood expects to contend for the Marin County Athletic League championship this year.

Mustang Air Game Is Sharp

San Marin High School began its campaign to forget last year with an unforgettable performance last night, revving up an aerial game and bombarding host Healdsburg High with it, 30-0.

Quarterback Hoza Wright threw for two touchdowns and ran for another, and his replacement, Mark Moore, rifled another scoring pass to laad the Mustangs' victory.

"I expected to win, but not by this big a margin," said Mustang head coach Bob Martin, whose team went 1-8 last year and won its lone game by four points. "It's been a long time since we've won one like this."

Wright scapered 37 yards for the first touchdown, and later in the first quarter tossed 23 yards to sophomore wingback Wayne Roach, "who made a circus catch," Martin said. "He made some fantastic catches during the game."

In the second quarter, Wright hit Kevin Keller, who bulled his way into the end zone on a 15-yard play.

Moore took over at quarterback at the start of the third period, and immediately directed the team the length of the field, hitting Greg Pater for 17 yards and the score. The final TD, also in the third quarter, came on a 43-yard pass interception return by Terry Kom.

"Roger Brewster (linebacker) and Steve Fowler (middle guard) were outstanding on defense," said Martin. "Dave Azevedo (running back) had some outstanding hits, and Pater made one circus catch deep in addition to his touchdown.

"Hoza was outstanding, and I was really pleased with Moore, who's a junior. He called his own plays and did quite well."

Terra Linda Is Surprised By Concord

By TOM THOMPSON

Disappointment was the word last night for Terra Linda as the Concord High Minutemen upset the host Trojans 22-7, in the preseason opener for both teams at San Rafael High.

"Maybe we took Concord too lightly," explained Trojan Assistant coach Hank Yamagata. "I don't know whether it was the players' or the coaches' fault."

Perhaps Minutemen Rick Wolf and Gerral Reavis were the men the Trojans took too lightly. The quarterback and end, respectively, combined for two of the Concord scores and consistently ripped through the vaunted Trojan defense.

Wolf and Reavis put their winning combination together with about 5:15 left in the third quarter. After a series of fumbles, when possession of the ball changed four times, the

DeMont Case Gets Support

DENVER (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC) acted irresponsibly in stripping U.S. swimmer Rick DeMont of a gold medal because he took a drug for his asthmatic condition before competition, the head of the nation's largest asthma clinic said Friday.

"What the IOC has cone," said Dr. Dudley I. Solomon, "is to deny the hope of ultimate accomplishment to every handicapped person who strives to overcome his problem."

He said DeMont's medal should be returned to the swimmer.

Solomon, executive director of the Children's Asthma Research Institute and Hospital, said DeMont had made no secret he was taking the drug Ephedrine before competing in the 400-meter freestyle trials in Munich.

DeMont, 16, of Terra Linda, was stripped of his gold medal in the 400-meter freestyle and later ruled ineligible for the 1,500 meter freestyle, an event in which he held the world record.

The IOC gave as its reason the fact that traces of Ephedrine were found in DeMont's system after his win in the 400-meter competition. The drug had been outlawed for participants in Olympic competition.

Solomon said that DeMont had been taking the drug for an asthmatic condition for a year and made no attempt to conceal the fact from Olympic officials.

"Rick DeMont made a full disclosure of the medications he was taking," Solomon said. "The appropriate authorities of the the IOC should have recognized that Rick was taking an Ephedrine-containing drug. The IOC action strikes me as arbitrary and wholly indifferent."

Solomon said he believed the IOC "could re-establish some of its lost creditability by restoring Rick's gold medal and apologizing to him for its indifferent actions."

Federal Group Will Probe Future U.S. Olympic Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, noting the problems and tragedies of the Munich Olympic games, voted Friday to set up a presidential commission to study whether American athletes should participate in future Olympiads.

If established, the commission would be ordered to review not only the "objectives" of the Olympic movement, but also "the manner in which Olympic games are administered" and report its preliminary findings prior to the February, 1973 meeting of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The commission proposal was attached to a bill pledging $15.5 million in federal aid to the 1976 Winter Olympics in Denver.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., sponsor of the amendment, said it was in response to the "petty bickering, partisan judging, outrageous blunders and, finally, unparalleled barbarism" of the 1972 Summer Games in Munich.

His amendment was adopted by voice vote shortly before the bill was passed, 59-3. It now goes to the House.

The Tunney amendment calls for creation of a seven-member commission to be appointed by the President. It would review not only the future participation of American athletes in the quadrennial games, but also the role of the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) in international sports "and the manner in which United States participation in the Olympic games has been organized and administered by the committee."

The USOC was created by Congress and holds a federal charter.

Earlier, the Senate killed by a 64-7 vote a move by Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., to shunt the bill back to committee for further study.

"The taxpayers ought not to be asked to pay for these rich men's games," Harris said.

The bill would only authorize, not actually appropriate, the $15.5 million sum. But it would be null and void if Colorado voters adopt a proposed state constitutional amendment at the Nov. 7 election that would bar spending any state funds on the 1976 Olympics —thus ending the Denver games before they begin for lack of money.

The state has budgeted $6.2 million toward the games, but polls have shown that a majority of Colorado residents are against having them. Harris said the Senate should wait until after the election and follow Colorado's lead.

Unhappy Beman Leads St. Louis Golf Tournament By 2 Strokes

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Dean Beman, unhappy with a "shabby round of golf" Friday, goes into the third round of the $150,000 St. Louis Golf Classic today with a nine-under-par total of 131.

Beman carded a 67 Friday, again playing in a light drizzle on the soggy, 6,550-yard course at Norwood Hills Country Club. He had four birdies, including a 40-footer, but complained, "generally speaking, I played lousy. My irons were less than sharp. It was a shabby round of golf."

Lee Trevino finished with a 36-hole total of 133, two strokes behind the 34-year-old native of Bethesda, Md. Don Bies used four birdies to move into third place at 134 and Bob Goalby, who played with Beman both days, was fourth at 135.

Trevino, treating his large following to relaxed chatter and tense putting, finished with three birdies for a 68.

On the 16th hole, he needed to sink a 50-footer for a birdie. He shouted, "it's got a chance," but the ball stopped three inches from the cup. On the 17th, he put in a 25-footer and pranced to the hole amidst an ovation from "Lee's Fleas."

On the 18th, Trevino lined up a 50-footer after admonishing a photographer who positioned himself behind the hole. "I try to look pretty for that damn camera and three putt every time," he said. His ball then curved and stopped inches from the hole.

Bies, holing five birdies, said, "it didn't seem like I was playing sensational golf, but I didn't make any mistakes."

Four players were tied at 136. They were Orville Moody, John Schroeder, David Glenz and Harry Toscano.

Steve Melnyk shot a 65 Friday, the round's lowest score. He had a two-day total of 138. Napa's Ron Cerrudo took a 141.

TWIN BILL: THE GIANTS VS. BRAVES

ATLANTA (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants, trying all season to overtake Atlanta for fourth place in the National League West, could tie the Braves by sweeping a twi-night twin bill here tonight.

It will be Jim Willoughby and Juan Marichal for San Francisco and Ron Reed and Phil Niekro for the Braves.

Marichal won his last outing in impressive style, getting the 8-2 win over Cincinnati. But he is only 6-15 for the season. Willoughby beat the Reds in a 2-1 thriller his last time out.

The Giants will be returning to action after a two-day break in the schedule.

Alou Is Finley's Insurance Policy; A's Spank Rangers

OAKLAND (UPI) — Matty Alou has to be the best insurance Charley Finley ever bought.

Picked up less than a month ago from the St. Louis Cardinals, Alou has proved the steadying influence the A's needed both in the outfield and at bat.

Friday night the veteran Alou drove in four runs for the second time since becoming an Oakland player as the A's rolled over the hapless Texas Rangers 12-3.

Matty's first inning sacrifice fly and a bases-loaded double in the fifth accounted for the four runs batted in as the A's piled up 13 hits off four Texas pitchers.

Mike Epstein, with his club-leading 24th homer, added three RBI's and Reggie Jackson and Tim Cullen had two RBI's each.

The victory, combined with a

SIGNING 'NEXT WEEK'

Thurmond Approves Terms For $300,000-Per-Year Contract

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nate Thurmond will sign a contract with the Golden State Warriors "sometime early next week" that will make him one of the three top paid centers in the National Baseball Association.

Thurmond said Friday he had approved terms of the contract, which reportedly calls for $300,000 per year on a multi-year contract covering three of four seasons.

"I'm paying him as one of the three top centers in the NBA," said warriors president Franklin Mieuli.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar reportedly has signed a new contract in the $350,000-$400,000 range while Chamberlain's salary has enabled him to build a unique $1.5 million home in the Los Angeles Hills.

Thurmond reportedly had a contract offer worth $1 million or more from the Carolina Cougars of the rival American Basketball Association.

But Thurmond said the thing that convinced him to stay in the Bay Area was his plan to open a new restaurant in San Francisco.

Thurmond's signing gave the Warriors only five players under contract with training camp already in session at San Jose. The others signed are Rick Barry, whom the Warriors say will report on Oct. 2, Clyde Lee, Bob Portman and Jeff Mullins. The latter reportedly signed for $105,000 on Wednesday night.

Barry, though, has announced he will not play for the Warriors and is trying to break the contract in court.

WILDCATS FALL

Rancho Cotate Takes 1st Game

By PAUL DWORIN

Don't be surprised if you find Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park head coach Claude Brock reading Henry David Thoreau next week, because Brock just might be looking for clues to win football games.

Last night, with starting quarterback Bob Haas out for the season with a finger injury, sophomore Eric Mogel took over a "simplified" Rancho Cotate offense and led the Cougars to a 20-6 victory over non-league foe Marin Catholic at Durst Field in Petaluma.

Before the game Brock explained that "we've cut out about two-thirds of our offense, so we could simplify things for Eric. Not that he doesn't know how to run the team, but we decided to keep things as simple as we could. We'll be operating a bare-bones offense, but it will still be wide open."

The Cougars threw occasionally, but struck mostly with their ground game to dominate the undermanned and ailing Wildcats, who had an eight-game winning streak broken.

Most of Rancho Cotate's running was done by fullback Kent Holman, a 6-foot-2, 197-pound junior who carried the ball 20 times around the tackles and through the middle for 57 yards, and junior Ray Jones, who ran for 125 yards and two touchdowns.

In the third quarter, Jones, who almost died of spinal meningitis seven months ago, broke three tackles on a left power sweep and galloped 51 yards for a touchdown that put the Cougars ahead 12-6. Three minutes later, he ran the same play again, only this time he ran away from all would-be tacklers for a 53-yard scoring sprint.

Mogel, although leaving most of the offense to Holman, Jones and Wayne Hill, threw 13 passes and completed five. His first completion as a varsity quarterback was a 33-yard scoring strike to Dan Dettling.

The Wildcats only score came in the first quarter when Rich Cervisi fielded a Cougars' kick on his own 24 and slithered around the right side for a 76-yard touchdown.

After the game a disconsolate Wildcat coach Bruno Banducci commented, "We lost key personnel. As thin as we were (Marin Catholic has a 22-man squad), we couldn't afford any injuries." Five Wildcats were injured, with halfback Layne Cozza in the hospital for X-rays.

Unfamiliar Faces For 49ers, Raiders

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

There will be some different names in the lineups of the San Francisco 49ers and Oakland Raiders as they prepare to open the 1972 National Football League season tomorrow.

A schedule of 12 games is on tap in the NFL, with a 13th clash, between Minnesota and Washington, slated for Monday night telecast.

The 49ers will face the San Diego Chargers at Candlestick Park at 1 p.m. The defending National Football Conference West champions, beset with injuries during their 3-3 exhibition season, will start Larry Schreiber at fullback and perhaps Jimmy Thomas at halfback.

Stalwarts Ken Willard and Vic Washington were injured, although both are expected to see action, and Washington may start. Injured worse, and not expected to play, are free safety Mike Simpson (shoulder) and running back Doug Cunningham. Veteran Johnny Fuller will start in Simpson's place.

After a long quest left-handed Raider quarterback Ken Stabler has, at least temporarily, unseated Daryle Lamonica as No. 1 and will start against the Steelers in Pittsburgh. The game begins at 10 a.m., PDT, and will be telecast on Channels 3 and 4.

Jim Otto, who's played center for Oakland since the Middle Ages, and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff will not start due to injuries sustained in the Raiders 4-2 pre-season campaign. Replacements will be rookies Dave Dalby (UCLA) and Cliff Branch (Colorado), respectively.

The 49ers are favored by six over the Chargers, despite a 17-16 exhibition loss to them. The Raiders are picked by three, despite Pittsburgh's impressive 4-1-1 pre-season mark.

In other NFL games, defending Super Bowl champion Dallas is a 14-point favorite over Philadelphia, Kansas City is five over Miami, New York is seven over Buffalo, Baltimore is six over St. Louis, Detroit is 9½ over the New York Giants, Los Angeles is nine over New Orleans, Cincinnati is 1½ over New England, Denver is three over Houston, Cleveland is three over Green Bay and Atlanta is three over Chicago. Minnesota is four over Washington in the nationally televised game.

More is at stake in Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium than the score of the game.

The time has come for the Bills, owners of two of the last three No. 1 draft choices in the NFL, to fulfill their promise to return to the contending ranks and the time has come for the New York Jets, led by a healthy quarterback Joe Namath, to prove their 1969 Super Bowl season was no fluke.

Potent Bat Swung By Orioles' Powell

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Paul Blair's hot bat has kept the Baltimore Orioles in contention in the American League East—only it's Boog Powell that's using it.

Powell, using his teammate's bat, stroked a three-run first inning homer to help Jim Palmer to his third successive 20-win season Friday night as the Orioles downed the New York Yankees, 3-1, in the torrid American League East pennant chase.

Powell, borrowing the bat from Blair in an attempt to improve his anemic batting average, slammed his 20th homer of the season 420 feet into the right-centerfield bleachers with one out in the first after Don Baylor and Rich Coggins had drawn walks.

Boston continued to set the pace in the AL East with a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Detroit remained a game behind the division leaders with a come-from-behind 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In other American League games Oakland ripped Texas 12-3, Minnesota edged Kansas City 4-3, and California blanked Chicago, 1-0.

Norm Cash singled home Dick McAuliffe with two out in the ninth inning to lead Detroit over Milwaukee.

Reggie Smith smashed a two-out double in the bottom of the ninth inning to score Carl Yastrzemski from first base to keep Boston in the lead.

Smith earlier hit his 20th home run with Yastrzemski on first in the sixth inning as the Red Sox battled back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score.

Bob Veale, acquired as pitching insurance during the late season pennant drive, picked up his second victory with one inning of relief.

George Mitterwald tripled and socked his first home run of the season to lead Minnesota over Kansas City.

Leo Cardenas' two out single in the 11th inning scored pinch runner Curt Motton from second base with the only run of the game as California blanked Tom Bradley and the Chicago White Sox 1-0.

Norman Fans 15 To Beat Cincinnati

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Fred Norman didn't believe it and neither did Cincinnati.

Norman pitched a seven-hitter and caught 15 Reds' batters looking at strikes Friday night as the San Diego Padres punched out a 1-0 victory over the Reds.

Norman was in disbelief after being told his strikeout total had set a new club record.

"Did I really strike out that many? Gee, I thought it was only eight or nine," said the lefty hurler.

Clarence Gaston's bat supplied Norman with all the support he needed with a fourth inning homer.

The victory squared Norman's record at 9-9 and was the sixth shutout of the season for the lefthander.

Over in the Eastern Division, Pittsburgh shared a similar losing fate as St. Louis romped to a 10-4 victory, keeping the Pirates' "magic number" at three.

In other National League games, Chicago topped New York, 9-3, Los Angeles edged Houston, 4-2, and Philadelphia downed Montreal, 5-3.

Willie Crawford and Wes Parker hit run-scoring singles and Claude Osteen pitched a four-hitter for his 17th win to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to victory over the Houston Astros.

Jim Hickman hit a grand slam home run and Jose Cardenal and Billy Williams chipped in with round-trippers as Chicago downed New York and Milt Pappas won his eighth straight game.

Ted Simmons, Bernie Carbo and Ken Reitz hit consecutive run-scoring doubles in the first inning of St. Louis's victory over Pittsburgh to back up the five-hit pitching of Rick Wise, now 15-15.

Steve Carlton notched his 24th victory for last place Philadelphia with the help of three RBI's by Willie Montanez and a tie-breaking home run by Greg Luzinski as the Phillies defeated Montreal.

San Rafael Gridders Eye Title Despite Big Graduation Losses

By LEW CODDINGTON

(Fourth in a series on Marin County Athletic League football prospects.)

Perhaps you haven't heard of anybody on San Rafael High School's football roster, but just be patient. By season's end, the names will be quite familiar.

"We're going out there to defend (our co-championship)," said coach Bob Muster. "We don't look at it as a building year."

San Rafael has just 14 lettermen and four starters back from last year's team, which went 5-1 in the Marin County Athletic League and shared the title with Novato.

But 22 of the 39 players on the roster are seniors, familiar with San Rafael's system and ready to step into the spots vacated by such lustrous names as Scott Duncan, Mark Farrar, Bill Lechner, Dirk Correnti, Mark St. Gaudens, and Duke Bessee, each an all-leaguer.

Last year's starters were defensive tackle Bob Sinclair, defensive end Chris Valentino, linebacker Mike Cook and defensive back Craig Bacharach. Three of them will go both ways this time around — Sinclair at tight end, Valentino at halfback and Cook at offensive tackle.

There has been a duel at quarterback throughout practice between senior Lance Loughlin and sophomore Dave Steele, and Muster is in no hurry to make up his mind, although he doesn't intend to institute a two-quarterback system.

Impressive in practice, according to Muster, has been junior fullback Steve D'Ambra. Senior halfback Jim Grigg has been hampered by a leg injury sustained during track season, but hopes to regain the form which last year enabled him to finish 10th in the MCAL in rushing even though he wasn't a starter. Meanwhile, 160-pound junior Craig Saunders has been blocking impressively from the halfback spot.

San Rafael will operate out of a full house backfield. Last year theulldogs had an awesome ground game, but Muster is not Woody Hayes, and he'll pass "if they (opponents) give it to us."

The offensive line is "just getting there," Muster says, although tackles Gary Jordan and Bob Seymour have been hitting well, as has Cook.

The defensive unit looks solid, with the two-way players. Tackle Dan Dell'era and linebacker Graham Wright have caught Muster's eye.

Only Bacharach has varsity experience in the secondary, but Steele and junior Mike Farris combined with him to intercept five passes in a scrimmage against Pacific of San Leandro Saturday. Should Steele win the quarterback job, Nelson Moore or John Sims will take over for him on defense.

San Rafael opens its season tonight at 8 o'clock, hosting Lincoln of San Francisco. The Bulldogs open the MCAL season Sept. 29 against Tamalpais.

two men combined for a 20 yard touchdown pass, wiping out the Trojans' 7-6 halftime lead.

And they did it again in the fourth quarter. With a little over four minutes left in the game, it was a 28-yard Wolf to Reavis pass that closed the scoring at 22-7.

Scoring opened early late in the first quarter, as Concord culminated the game's first sustained drive with a four-yard rush through the Trojan line by fullback Carlos Brown.

Terra Linda came back early in the second quarter as the Blue and Gold put together their best series of the evening behind the fine rushing of Sean Casey and Pete Corbett. The Trojans capped a nine-play, 80-yard march with Casey scampering in from four yards out. Corbett's kick gave the blue and gold a 7-6 halftime lead.

Friday at 8 p.m. the Trojans will attempt to find the winning formula when hosting highly regarded Alameda High on the San Rafael high field. But, as Yamagata warned: "if we're not ready for them, we better not come onto the field."

Meanwhile, the Trojan junior varsity blanked their Minuteman counterparts, 26-0, last night at San Rafael High.

1-0 triumph by the California Angels over Chicago, increased the A's lead overthe White Sox in the American League West to four games and reduced their pennant clinching magic number to 12.

Ken Holtzman had the Rangers shut out on three hits until they reached him for four hits and a sacrifice fly in the ninth for their three runs.

The victory was Holtzman's 17th of the year compared to 11 losses and equalled his major league high achieved twice before with the Chicago Cubs.

Holtzman struck out four and walked two batters. Four of the seven hits he gave up were singles and there were two triples and a double off him as the Rangers dropped their straight decision. Don Stanhouse, chased in the second inning, was the loser and now is 2-6.

The two clubs meet in single games today and Sunday and then the White Sox come to town for single games Tuesday and Wednesday. Those two games could be decisive ones for both clubs.

Carmona Stops Foe For Crown

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — Chango Carmona brought the World Boxing Council lightweight championship to Mexico on its Independence Day by inflicting so severe a beating to Mando Ramos that Ramos had to be hospitalized.

After being knocked down four times by the 10-7 underdog Carmona at the Los Angeles Coliseum Friday night, Ramos was taken to a hospital for observation of a possible concussion and internal injuries.

Referee Rudy Jordan halted the bout at 1:48 of the eighth round to the delight of a predominantly Mexican audience in the outdoor arena after Ramos had gone down for the fourth time.

Football

DALLAS — Pro Football Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday he hoped the "sudden death" playoff would become part of the National Football League rulebook next year and said he was opposed to instant replays being shown on modern scoreboards.

Baseball

WASHINGTON — Despite assurances from baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and Rep. Bernard F. Sisk, D-Calif., that Washington is in line for a major league baseball team, none materialized in what was billed as an important meeting Friday.

"Real progress was made," said Sisk. "The Baseball Committee assured us that the Washington problem still has priority. Mr. Kuhn told us that it is still the no. 1 matter to be taken care of."

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — The Milwaukee Brewers announced Friday that manager Del Crandall has chosen former San Francisco Giant pitcher Bob Shaw, 39, as his pitching coach for next season.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — World champion Billie Jean King put down a strong challenge from Mona Schallau, and Rosemary Casals defeated Kerry Melville, Friday to enter the semi-finals of the $40,000 Four Roses Premium Tennis Classic.

Mrs. King, seeded No. 1, took a 6-2, 6-7, 6-1 victory from the unseeded Miss Schallau of Iowa City, Iowa. Miss Casals, seeded fourth, beat Miss Melville of Australia, 6-0, 6-2.

SEATTLE — Ilie Nastase of Romania will meet Jaime Fillol of Chile tonight in the semi-finals of the $25,000 Rainier International tennis classic.

Nastase devastated Sherwood Stewart of Baytown, Tex. in their quarter-finals singles match Friday, 6-1, 6-1.

In other quarter-finals action, second-seeded Bob Hewitt of South Africa and third-seeded Tom Gorman of Seattle both emerged victorious, setting up their semi-final match today. Hewitt beat Onny Parun of New Zealand, 6-1, 7-5, while Gorman dispatched Ian Fletcher of Australia, 6-3, 6-3.

Don't Be Afraid To Do Duty— Thwart Your Opponent's Plan

When you see what your opponent is trying to do, your duty is to thwart his plan. If you're afraid to do your duty, you won't be mentioned in he books they write for schoolchildren — but you might find yourself in my bridge column.

CASHED HEARTS

South won the first trick with the ace of diamonds, cashed three top hearts to discard a diamond from dummy and then led a fourth heart, discarding another diamond from dummy.

West found himself on lead, knowing that South intended to ruff diamonds in the dummy. The obvious countermove was to lead trumps, but West was agraid to lead from his queen of trumps. Fear caused West to lead the jack of diamonds.

Declarer ruffed in dummy and returned a low club. East won with the nine of clubs and returned a trump, but it was too late. Dummy won with the king of spades (capturing West's queen, which didn't survive the trump return), got to his hand by ruffing a club and ruffed his last diamond with dummy's last trump.

CLAIMS CONTRACT

South then ruffed another club, drew another round of trumps with the ace and claimed his contract. He lost only a heart, a trump and a club.

Now go back to West when he won the fourth round of hearts. If he returns the low trump, dummy steps up with the king. Declarer must lead a club from dummy, and East wins with the nine of clubs and leads a second trump.

ONLY ONE TRUMP

South wins with the ace of trumps, but now has only one trump in dummy. He can ruff one diamond with dummy's remaining trump, but must eventually give up a diamond trick. Down one.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠- Q 6
♥- J 8 7 3
♦- Q J 10
♣- A Q 3 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs.

The hand is not quite worth a jump to 2-NT. Bid your suit, such as it is, and await developments. You will probably bid 2-NT at your next turn, suggesting 11 or 12 points in high cards.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Dear Mr. Greb:

Your "Happy Birthday" salutes to people who reach 80 are wonderful! But why not congratulate other ages, too? Bobby Fischer became a chess champion at 14 and Satchel Paige a baseball star at 50. Let's read about some interesting younger people from time to time. Signed: Jimmy Dee

Dear Dee: Good point. So let's make some points by singling out star football player George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders for special attention. Tomorrow (Sept. 17) he will be 45 years old!

As sports fans know, this graying giant can still kick, pass, and run with a football at an age when his contemporaries are home watching it on TV. He had 10 years playing with the Chicago Bears and thought he had retired when he took off his uniform 13 years ago. But Houston hired him to play with the Oilers, where he helped win three divisional titles and two league championships. Then the coach and fans thought Balnda was washed up and booed him out of town. Next he began place-kicking for Oakland. And when desperate measures put him in the game at the last-minute, Blanda passed and kicked the Raiders into victory after victory.

No wonder George Blanda is still a happy warrior. For people like him, life begins at 40.

DRAMA IN SAN RAFAEL

This is a scene from "Circuits to Ride," a musical drama, which will be presented tomorrow at 10 a.m. at First United Methodist Church, 9 Ross Valley Drive, San Rafael. Methodist Actors Serving the Church (MASC), a Sacramento-based company which travels throughout Northern California and Nevada, will bring a religious theme in a musical and dramatic setting. "Circuits to Ride", with a cast of 25, covers the periof of 1771 to 1784 in the U.S. The public is invited, and no admission will be charged. A free will offering will be received.

Church's Ski Club Opens Membership

"Great Life Ski Club," a fellowship of recreational skiing sponsored by Lucas Valley Community Church, has opened its membership to other church youth.

Begun last year as an experiment, the club this year already has applications from local Catholic and Protestant churches. But there is a limited membership, warns Rev. Dale Nystrom.

The club will feature skiing at five of California's major resorts. A weekend retreat will be held at Joyfjellet Lodge at Donner Summit, of a cost of $15.

Each Thursday night, January through March, a "skiers only" service is conducted at the church. The 8 p.m. service will feature 20 minutes of folk singing and a ski devotional, followed by hot spiced cider and a ski film.

The club grew out of the desire of Nystrom, church pastor, to offer recreational skiing combined with Christian fellowship. The basic structure was derived from his years working with the Blizzard and Huski ski clubs.

"My years with Huski," Nystrom said, "were most rewarding. For instructional skiing the Huski package can't be beaten. But our concept offers a kind of Saturday skiing that has found great appeal."

Application to the non-profit club is $10. Information may be secured by contacting the church. Les Kuhns and Art Butterfield serve with Nystrom on the steering committee.

OF GOD AND MAN

Why Does He Let Us Suffer?

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P.International

Suffering can be "the raw material of happiness".

That is the personal testimony of a great British scholar, Dr. H.A. Williams, former Dean of Chapel at Trinity College, Cambridge University.

In a profound new book entitled "True Resurrection" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston), Williams abandons the age-old attempt by Christian theologians to find a single, overall answer to the question: "Why does a loving God permit so much suffering in the world?"

That question can never be answered satisfactorily, Williams says, because we cannot see things as God sees them. We have no right even to try to explain the sufferings of others. We can speak intelligently only of the suffering we personally have experienced.

Out of his own life, Williams has learned —and I am quoting him here because I have had precisely the same experience —that suffering can result in a new outlook on, and a more joyous participation in, the human adventure.

Williams is no masochist. He believes we should avoid suffering whenever and wherever we possibly can. But when it comes upon us anyway, he says, it is a great mistake to try to escape from it by seeking distractions and diversions. The trick is to "accept it and receive it, to take it on as part of what we are".

"In doing this, we discover new and hitherto unimagined areas of our being. We discover that the self we took as our total self was in fact only a small fraction of what we are, and that we have reserves of strength, and insight and courage and heroism and love and compassion of which we so far have been totally unaware.

"That is how suffering can by acceptance create us —by activating and making accessible to us powers within us which hitherto were dormant and only potential so that we had no inkling of their existence."

Williams warns —and again I say amen —that people who accept suffering should not expect immediate irradiation by "a glorious certainty" that they are growing toward fulfillmem and joy.

"All we shall feel is much pain with spasmodic and very faint glimmers of hope," he said. "The faint glimmer of hope will be obscure and undefined. It will be a glimmer of hope for we know not what. Yet for all its being feeble, intermittent and without content, the hope is the call to us of our own future, indicating we are not only at an end but also at a beginning. For the hope, weak and unidentified though it is, is a sign tht a transformation has begun."

New Series Of Recitals Announced

Beginning Sunday, Sept. 24, at 8 p.m., St. Paul's Episcopal Church of San Rafael will inaugurate a series of recitals on the centennial memorial organ, installed last December.

Charles Ward, recently appointed organist of Calvary Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, will play the first recital.

Subsequent recitals will be: November, Doris Goldberg, organist, and Byron Jones, baritone, of First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael; December, traditional Christmas concert of lessons and carols according to the rite established by King College Choir of Cambridge, England; January, Rev. Al Price, organist and choirmaster at St. Paul's will be the recitalist; February, Rev. Michael J. Pavelis, minister of Sacred Music, Queen of All Saints Church, Concord.

March, John Stump, organist of Presbyterian Church, Alameda; April, Steven Grubb of Fresno; May, Kenneth Mansfield, organist of Lafayette-Orinda Presbyterian Church and Professor of music at California State University, Hayward.

The Catholics Who Marry After Divorce

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A Youngstown, Ohio, man writes: "I'd do most anything to be given the opportunity to once again be a 'complete' Catholic. I thought I had that chance after reading your column, but my pastor gave me a polite, but firm, 'No'."

The fact is that the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, through its president, has called a halt to a procedure initiated in some dioceses allowing divorced and remarried Catholics in "good conscience" cases to return to receiving Communion.

John Cardinal Krol, president of the bishops, said the Vatican is studying the question, but has made clear that dioceses "are not to introduce procedures that are contrary to present discipline."

Until this admonition was issued late last month, several dioceses had quietly initiated steps to restore the sacraments to divorced and remarried Catholics, who affirm a "good conscience" about it and believe their previous marriages invalid, even though unable for technical reasons to get them officially annulled.

After Cardinal Krol's warning, however, the special procedures apparently were being suspended.

Under existing Church canons, Catholics who remarry after divorces without Church annulment of previous marriages are automatically excommunicated — barred from the sacraments. There have been estimates that about five million American Catholics are in such a status.

"The Church is not insensitive to the anxiety and anguish of the individuals involved," Cardinal Krol said. But he added that "grave doctrinal implications, including the indissolubility of marriage and fidelity to the Gospel of Christ are involved."

He said the Church must offer its "ministry of compassion, mercy and reconciliation," but also must provide its "ministry of correction. The Church must be faithful to her children by recalling them to fidelity to Christ and the Gospel."

Although the problem is being studied, Church authorities "do not venture any ready solutions," he said, and "it would be rash to conclude that a study must necessarily lead to change of principles or procedure."

Church In Outing To Angel Island

Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur will begin its fall schedule tomorrow with a celebration, picnic, games and fellowship on Angel Island.

Sponsored by church fellowship groups, the celebration is for church members and their friends. Arrangements have been made for a ferry to the island to leave at 9 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. in addition to regular runs.

An informal worship service at 10:30 a.m. will be led by Rev. William N. Johnson, assisted by ruling elders Dr. Burt Richardson and Daniel White, with music by Yohann Anderson, director of Young Life in Marin.

A regular worship service for those who cannot go to the island will be held at the church at 10 a.m. with Rev. Dr. C. James Miller as guest preacher.

'Bible Policeman' In Santa Rosa Talk

Inspector Paul Dilena of the New York City police will be guest speaker at a criminal justice appreciation banquet Monday at 6:30 p.m. at El Rancho Tropicana Convention Center, Santa Rosa.

The banquet is being given in honor of all who serve in the fields of law enforcement and criminal justice.

Dilena has served the department for 23 years in an area of police work that is often referred to as one of the toughest beats in the world — New York's subway system.

Dilena has been called a policeman whose bible is more powerful than his revolver. He is a charter member of Teen Challenge, founded by Rev. David Wilkerson.

Teen Challenge is a program designed to reach, convert and rehabilitate drug addicts. The story of the program is told in the book, "The Cross and the Switchblade."

The banquet at Santa Rosa is one of seven to be held in Northern California and Nevada during the week.

Rev. George E. Elrod, director of men's ministries for the Assemblies of God of Northern California-Nevada, said, "We invite all police, members of the sheriff's department, highway patrolmen, judges, attorneys and anyone who serves in other areas of law enforcement and criminal justice to be our guests at this banquet."

Anyone who has not received an invitation may call Assembly of God Church in San Rafael for reservations.

'Peace Day' Observed By Baha'i

"World Peace — The First Priority" is the theme of this year's World Peace Day, being observed today and tomorrow by the Baha'i Faith in Marin and some 4,800 U.S. cities.

The purpose of World Peace Day is to spread the recognition of America's spiritual destiny to raise the standard of peace in the world. Inaugurated in 1959, the day is sponsored annually by the National Baha'i Assembly.

As part of the observance in Marin, a public meeting will be sponsored by the Marin County Baha'i Community at the Manzanita Recreation Center, Marin City, today at 7:30 p.m.

The program will consist of a brief introduction to the Baha'i teachings by Jim Yates of Fremont, followed by movies, featuring Dizzy Gillespie, Seals and Croft and others, and music sung by the Children of Light, a marin County Baha'i group. The public is invited.

Dorothy Cockcroft, Marin Baha'i chairman, said that because of its fruitful experience in federation and it's great spiritual capacities and blessings," the U.S. can be "a prime leader in bringing about world peace and world order."

MUSIC REVIEW

Joan Sutherland's Excellent 'Norma'

By WILLIAM CLARK

The flawless voice of Joan Sutherland rose in triumph even through the dazzle and splendor of opening the San Francisco Opera's Golden Jubilee season last night in a new production of Bellini's "Norma."

An enormously complicated and finely balanced structure seemed to be suspended from a single "bel canto" thread flowing effortlessly from the throat of the "prima donna assoluta."

This style of opera is for lovers of that most basic element of opera, fine singing. The skimpy plot, static sets, fire-drill chorus movements, formal predictability and scarcity of dramatic moments never get in the way of the melodic line, and the opera stands or falls on the execution of the title role.

The bell-like clarity and fine consistency of Miss Sutherland's voice never wavered through seemingly endless beautiful phrases, from the most delicate pianissimi of "Casta Diva" to the robust final chorus.

With incredible ease she made the elaborate vocal ornaments sound like a natural amplification of the feeling of the moment, and created a believable character with artistic simplicity and directness.

By comparison, the fine voice of Huguette Tourangeau as Adalgisa sounded at times almost uneven, but she acts well and sounded exceptionally beautiful in the soft duet at the end of the second act.

John Alexander sang a very strong tenor as Pollione, the third member of the love triangle. Clifford Grant, Erik Townsend and Gwendolyn Jones turned in fine supporting performances.

A special note is due the sensitive and understanding conducting of Richard Bonynge for the successful launching of the company's 50th season.

The San Francisco Opera has come a long way in 50 years — from a virtual repertory company offering 10 performances in a two-week season to one of the world's truly important and vital musical institutions.

Much excitement is promised for this landmark season by way of new productvns, singing debuts, unusual fare and an American premiere, "The Visit of the Old Lady," based on the Durrematt play.

Suspended Sentence In Burglary Try

A 25-year-old San Francisco man was given a suspended state prison sentence yesterday by a Marin Superior Court judge and ordered to spend a year in jail for the attempted burglary of a Sausalito home.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner also placed Vernon James Robinson on probation for five years, including two years under direct supervision.

Codefendant Walter James Brock, 32, also of San Francisco, received an identical sentence in June after the pair admitted the crime on the first day of their trial.

Robinson, an admitted heroin user, had a previous burglary conviction and also was previously jailed for possessing narcotics. He told his probation officer the pair had come to Marin to buy heroin, but decided on a burglary when they missed their connection.

Sausalito police arrested then April 4 at the home of Helme W. Schweikert of 5 Cloudview Trail after responding to a burglar alarm.

Food Stamp Sales Are Under Way

Post offices in six Marin communities yesterday began selling food stamps under a contract with the county public social services department and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Previously, stamps were available only at local branches of Bank of America, Crocker-National and Wells Fargo banks and at the Cooperative Credit Union in Corte Madera.

(The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council handled stamps until this summer, when its contract was revoked by the county for mishandling federal funds.)

Post offices offering the service are located in Novato, Corte Madera, Tiburon, Point Reyes Station, Mill Valley and the San Rafael Mission branch.

The credit union and banks will continue to sell food stamps, though some may phase out sales later, welfare officials said.

In 45 to 90 days, the post office is expected to expand food stamp sales to its branches in Sausalito, San Anselmo and Fairfax.

Sale hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays at the post office branches. Checks will not be accepted.

Roadwork To Alter Traffic

Projects in progress on Highway 101 which will alter traffic patterns or affect the flow of traffic Monday have been announced by the state Division of Highways.

Sections of freeway involved are:

1. Northbound, between the Golden Gate Bridge and Richardson Bay Bridge, inside and outside lanes will be closed intermittently between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. for shoulder and median work.

2. Southbound, near the Sir Francis Drake Boulevard off-ramp, outside lane will be closed from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for slide removal.

3. Southbound, between Golden Gate Bridge and south end of Richardson Bay Bridge, two inside lanes will be closed from 2 to 6 p.m. for operation of special bus lane.

> What San Francisco represents among cities, Marin County—just to the north over the Golden Gate—represents among suburbs. Still fairly light on people (206,038 in 1970), its geography is varied and a pleasure to the eye—a place where mountains, ocean, and bay meet, known for its canyons, loamy farmland, lagoons, and streams. Primarily, Marin is a commuter county for San Francisco's well-heeled, a place that has changed suddenly from rural backwardness like most of the North Coast to a sophisticated and urbane community. San Rafael (population 38,977) is the closest thing to a city in Marin County and also has a newspaper—the Independent-Journal, superior to any San Francisco paper.

Park-Rec Commission Supports Bond Issue

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission has unanimously endorsed the city's $2.25 million bond issue for open space which will be placed before voters at a special election Tuesday.

The bond issue is aimed at selecting parcels of open space within the city for outright purchase.

The commission, meeting Thursday, also heard Pierre W. Joske, county parks director, report that tentative plans for North Bay Regional Park northeast of Northgate Industrial Park include picnic areas, playfields, about 20 tennis courts, a 50-meter pool and the possibility of a small-craft harbor, sailing lagoon and golf course.

Development of the 320-acre park will begin next September, according to city parks director Andrew J. Snyder.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission also:

CONFERENCE — Heard Snyder report he would attend the Naional Parks and Recreation Congress conference in Anaheim on Oct. 1.

VALLECITO SCHOOL — Announced turfing of Vallecito School would begin next week at a cost of $5,000.

PARKS — Said lighting would be installed at Freitas, Santa Margarita Valley and Victor Jones parks, and that telephones would be installed at six city parks.

BOYD HOUSE — Announced that the Marin Historical Society had allotted $1,000 and the city council $2,500 for restoration of Boyd House.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Oct. 12.

The merry-go-round developed from a horsemanship training device used by knights in the Middle Ages.

Fee Hike Plea To Be Studied

The San Rafael City Council will consider a request from the parks and recreation commission that construction fees for new dwelling units be increased when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

The commission has recommended increasing fees from $30 to $75 per bedroom on newly constructed dwellings and from $60 to $75 per mobile home pad, saying more money is needed to meet demands for services.

An appeal of planning commission approval of a townhouse and apartment complex on San Pablo Avenue proposed by McCarthy Co. of Northern California as well as a zoning change requested by the firm, has been postponed, according to Marion A. Grady, city clerk.

Speakers at the opening lecture, "Family," will be Dr. Martin Kirschenbaum and Shirley Lathum, codirectors of the Family Therapy Institute of Marin. Their talk will center on family systems, communication patterns, value conflicts and changing life-styles.

The lecture series is designed to help members of the community gain a clearer understanding of the rapid changes in our society and their effects on the mental health of the community, according to Earlene Jones, college publicist.

Other lectures in the weekly series — all on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. at Olney Hall — are:

The Nelsons Collect Artifacts From Costa Rica's Past

Marin Couple Owns Store Of Treasures

By DON KEOWN

William A. Nelson of 499 Via Casitas, Greenbrae, has good reason to be grateful to the small Central American country of Costa Rica.

It has given him his attractive wife, Maria, born and reared in the fine old city of Cartago and a resident and citizen of democratic Costa Rica until her marriage four and a half years ago.

It has also given him an absorbing hobby shared by his wife — the collection of pre-Columbian artifacts from Costa Rica's Indian past.

The Nelson apartment today holds some 35 pieces of Indian work hundreds of years old.

NELSON, A salesman for Gardner-Denver Co. of South San Francisco, makers of pneumatic tools and equipment, says he is indebted to his wife's uncle, Manuel Hidalgo, for interesting him in the artifacts of Central America.

In fact, many of the Nelson-owned pieces are gifts from Hidalgo, now a Washington, D.C. businessman maintaining homes both in that city and his native Costa Rica.

Hidalgo's own collection, divided between his two places of residence, is regarded as one of the finest of its kind in the world.

HIDALGO'S collection had its beginnings 20 years ago when he was assisting another of Maria Nelson's uncles on hisCosta Rican farm in the digging of a grave for a dead cow. The diggers uncovered a store of jade, gold, stone and pottery artifacts. And Manuel Hidalgo was off on his collection.

Bill Nelson has visited Costa Rica but once — four years ago when he and his wife traveled south to visit her family.

It was there he became intrigued by Hidalgo and his collection and began to be interested in pre-Columbian artifacts himself. It was there, too, that he acquired a strong affection for his wife's beautiful native land and for its people.

NELSON POINTS to Costa Rica's strong democratic tradition and the absence there of the civil strife that has plagued other Central American states.

He describes the people as "happy and gay, always, it seems, going to parties where dancing is the main entertainment. They love entertainment. And they are an extremely well-dressed people, even to a rather formal degree that contrasts with their free spirits. The men go nowhere without neckties."

Costa Rica also places a strong emphasis upon the education of all its people, Nelson says.

HIS WIFE interjects: "Yes, and that has been the source of some trouble for our people. The Costa Ricans have become so well educated, that there is no one to do the manual labor. Everyone feels himself too well schooled to waste himself on that kind of work."

Costa Ricans in their own land seem to take no great interest in the artifacts from the Indians who inhabited the region centuries ago, Nelson observes.

It is only after they have left their country, as Manuel Hidalgo did 25 years ago, that they seem to acquire an appreciation of the treasures from Costa Rica's past.

NOT ONLY HAS Bill Nelson become a collector of Costa Rican artifacts, but he has become an avid reader and student of the history of that country and of Central America generally.

Maria Nelson smiles: "He knows more about Costa Rica than I do. When there are questions, it is up to him to answer."

Growing up in Costa Rica, she was aware of the Indian artifacts being uncovered in her country only because of her uncle's prominence in the field. And it was only after she became Mrs. Nelson that she acquired an interest in collecting — from her "Yankee" husband.

BILL NELSON gives this

IN THEIR Greenbrae apartment home, William A. Nelson and his Costa Rican-born wife Maria enjoy some of the pre-Columbian pieces that make up their growing collection of artifacts from her native land. Nelson holds a flint sacrificial knife, and before them are some of the 35 pieces of stoneware and pottery that they now own. Most of their acquisitions are the gifts of Maria's uncle, Manuel Hidalgo, a leading collector. But in January the Nelsons will be visiting Central America to accompany Hidalgo into the field and personally add new finds to their collection. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE LATEST ADDITION to the pre-Columbian artifact collection of Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson of Greenbrae, and their most prized possession, is this metate, a gift from Manuel Hidalgo. Handcarved from stone, the metate is estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000 years old. It was used centuries before Columbus by the Indians of Costa Rica for the grinding of the corn that was their staple food, and was uncovered in an ancient Costa Rican gravesite. Costa Rica: Small Land, Rich Heritage

summary of Costa Rica's early history:

"In pre-Columbian, ancient times, it was divided into three sections, dominated by three individual native Indian groups, the Chortega, located in the Nicoya or northwest region; the Huetar in the highlands or central region; and the Borucas, inhabiting the Diguis or southeastern section.

"Each group had a similar, yet individualistic, form of art. The Chorotega, being to the north, displayed a trace of Mayan influence and had a definite cultural advantage.

"THE HUETARS were undisturbed by alien influence and maintained the most distinctive, individualistic arts.

"And the Borucas, being to the south, showed signs of a relationship with the Incas of Peru."

"Thus, we can see," continues Bill Nelson, "that Costa Rica was a meeting place for the influences from the north and south. And yet this small section of land managed to retain characteristics in its art that remained its own, not seen in the whole of Mexico to the north or in South America to the south."

"COSTA RICA," says Nelson, "was the only place in the New World where jade was found in abundance. And some jade carvings found in Costa Rica show Olmec traits.

"So we can speculate that since many of the Costa Rican jade pieces are carved from reworked celts, the Olmecs must have traded as far south as Costa Rica for the raw material, made the celts, and then bartered them back to the natives there for more raw materials. And from this interchange came an impact upon these natives' own carvings."

And the Olmec civilization dates back from about 1200 B.C. to 500 B.C.

THE HUETAR Indians were first discovered by the European world in September, 1502, by Christopher Columbus, admiral and viceroy of Spain, on his fourth and last voyage. It was not until 17 years later, however, that Capt. Gasper de Espinoza ventured into Costa Rica and claimed discovery of the Chorotega people.

While the population of Costa Rica shows a strong Indian as well as Spanish influence, tribal identities and cultures have long since intermingled and disappeared, unlike in some other Central American states.

The latest addition, and the prized piece, in the Bill Nelsons' collection of artifacts is a metate, its age estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000 years, beautifully handcarved from stone.

LIKE MOST of the pieces the Nelsons own, it was given to them by Manuel Hidalgo (Maria's father has also presented them with some artifacts as gifts) after its uncovering in an ancient Costa Rican gravesite.

The metate was used, Nelson explains, by the Indians for the grinding of the corn that was their principal food.

The carving on the Nelson-owned metate has been found only in Costa Rica and parts of Panama. And the only other known metate resembling it is housed in the Costa Rica Museum in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital.

"IT IS DIFFICULT to pinpoint the exact Indian tribe responsible for the manufacture of this metate," Nelson says. "However, it is most likely that it is the work of the Huetars, as indicated by the style."

Protrusions from the metate's face were probably meant as human or animal heads, most likely the former, since human sacrifice was a recognized ritual, Nelson believes.

The Nelson collection also includes a flint ceremonial sacrificial knife, stone tools, various pieces of pottery and two figures of Indians, one a chief, the other a medicine man, in a squatting position.

"All are pre-Columbian pieces, all over 800 years old," Nelson says.

A SHOP IN San Francisco's Marina District, where the Nelsons lived before moving to Marin earlier this year, has two similar figures priced at $480 and $500. The shop also owns a third figure, made from the same lava material, of a man carrying by rope slung over his head what is apparently the head of a sacrificial victim. The price for this rare piece is $10,000.

The Nelsons, with limited space in their apartment, admit that their collection is reaching the point "where we are going to have to do some trading, rather than just acquiring."

Nelson will retain some favorite pieces, but will offer the rest as "trade bait" and is looking forward to the interchange with other collectors.

THE NELSONS also have something else to look forward to.

In January they will be heading for Costa Rica where they are to meet Manuel Hidalgo and go with him to some of that country's digging sites. Then the Nelsons expect the added pleasure that comes from finding for themselves pieces for their collection by working with pick and shovel.

Enroute to Costa Rica they also expect to visit archaeological centers in Mexico and other Central American states.

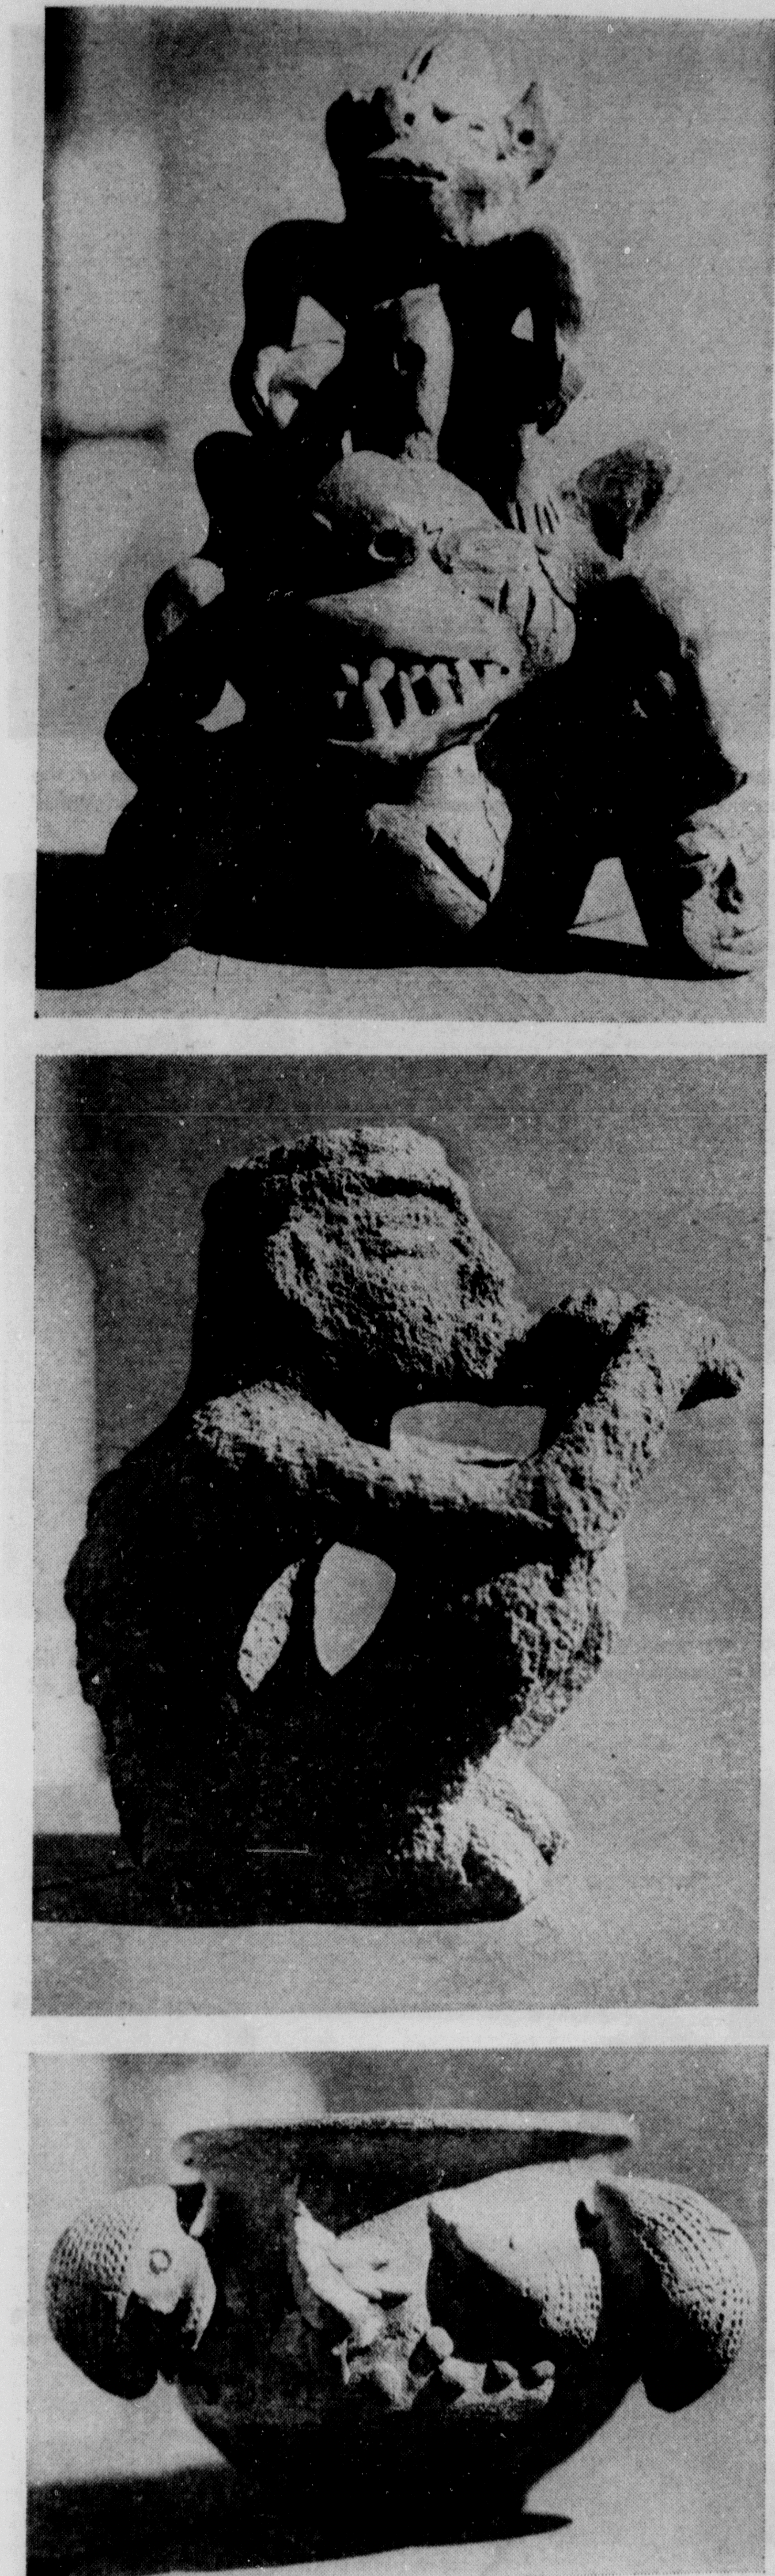
In Costa Rica their destinations will be places accessible only on horseback.

"THE NATIVES adorn themselves with pieces of gold, placing them about the neck and around their arms and legs, and with the dead are buried all the pieces they had, so that they make use of them in the next life, for all these people profess a belief in the immortality of the soul," wrote Fr. Augustin de Zevallos, provincial of the Order of St. Francis and a resident for 20 years of Costa Rica and Nicaragua in a letter in 1610 to Spanish King Philip III.

But buried under Costa Rican soil, by man or time, is much more than golden ornaments and jewelry. There are the tools, the religious vessels, the weapons that help to tell the fascinating stories of cultures that were in existence in the so-called New World long before Christopher Columbus set out on his voyages of discovery.

Bill and Maria hope to find some of these in January, to be added to their collection and to increase their understanding of the way of life of Costa Rica's earlier peoples.

Then, back home, Bill Nelson will be ready to begin the trading with other collectors that will upgrade and diversify their treasures.



THE FIGURES that the William Nelsons have acquired through the years as gifts for their collection of pre-Columbian pieces from Costa Rica offer fascinating insights into a culture that otherwise has largely vanished. But sometimes the tools and vessels are the more revealing of the ancient Indian way-of-life.

"Our knowledge of people and culture of Middle America before the Spanish Conquest stems from many different sources. Archaeologists unearth artifacts and monuments which they date and compare with others to deduce early patterns of trade and influence. Art historians define the main currents of prehistoric style and taste. Ethnologists study living peoples whose cultures often furnish valuable clues . . . Linguists infer prehistoric tribal movements by comparing modern Indian languages and their distribution with known earlier patterns. Eyewitness accounts of 16th Century Mexico and Guatemala . . . provide vivid firsthand glimpses of the New World in its last moments of cultural purity . . . As anthropological research continues, knowledge of the Middle American past is constantly modified and refined. So far it has revealed more than 12,000 years of complex human interrelationships and events that culminated in the panorama of splendor that so awed the soldiers of Cortes." From National Geographic's "Archaeological Map of Middle America: Land of the Feathered Serpent."

BILL NELSON POINTS OUT to wife Maria a feature of one of the stone figures included in their collection of artifacts from her native Costa Rica.

Now, admits Maria, her Yankee husband knows far more about Costa Rican culture and history than she does.

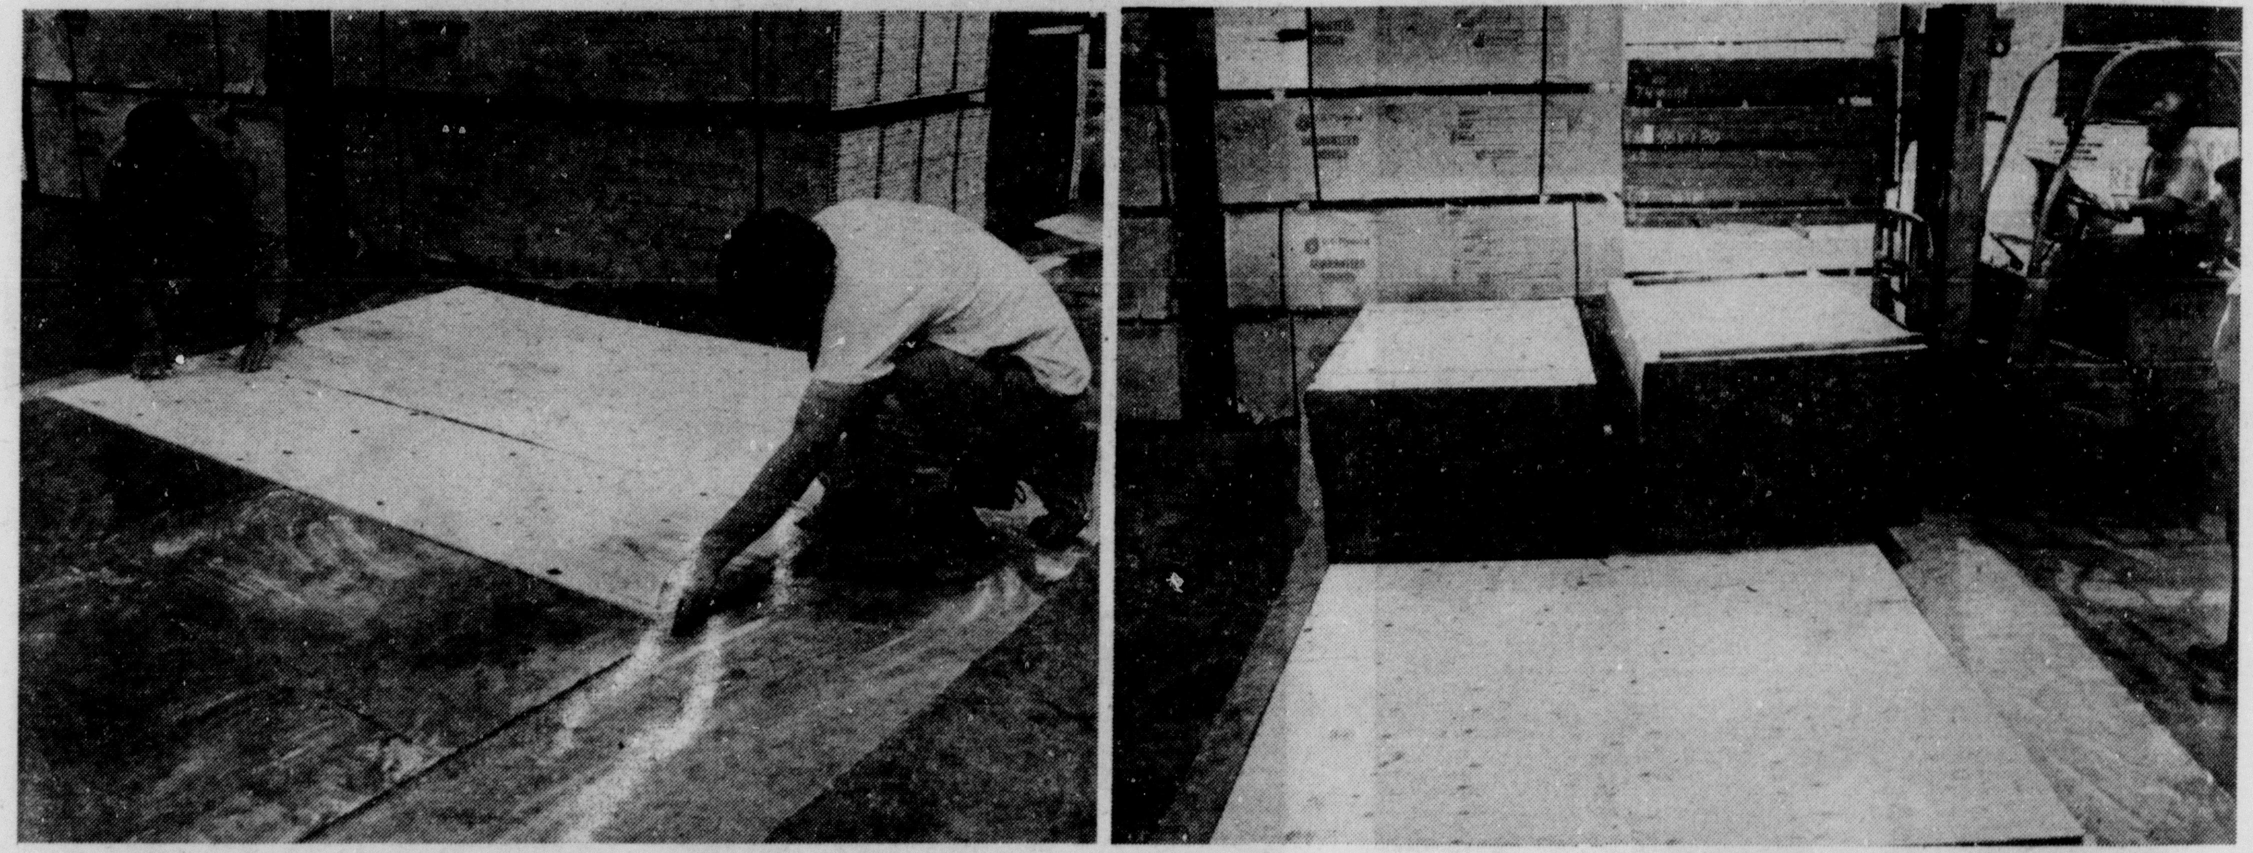
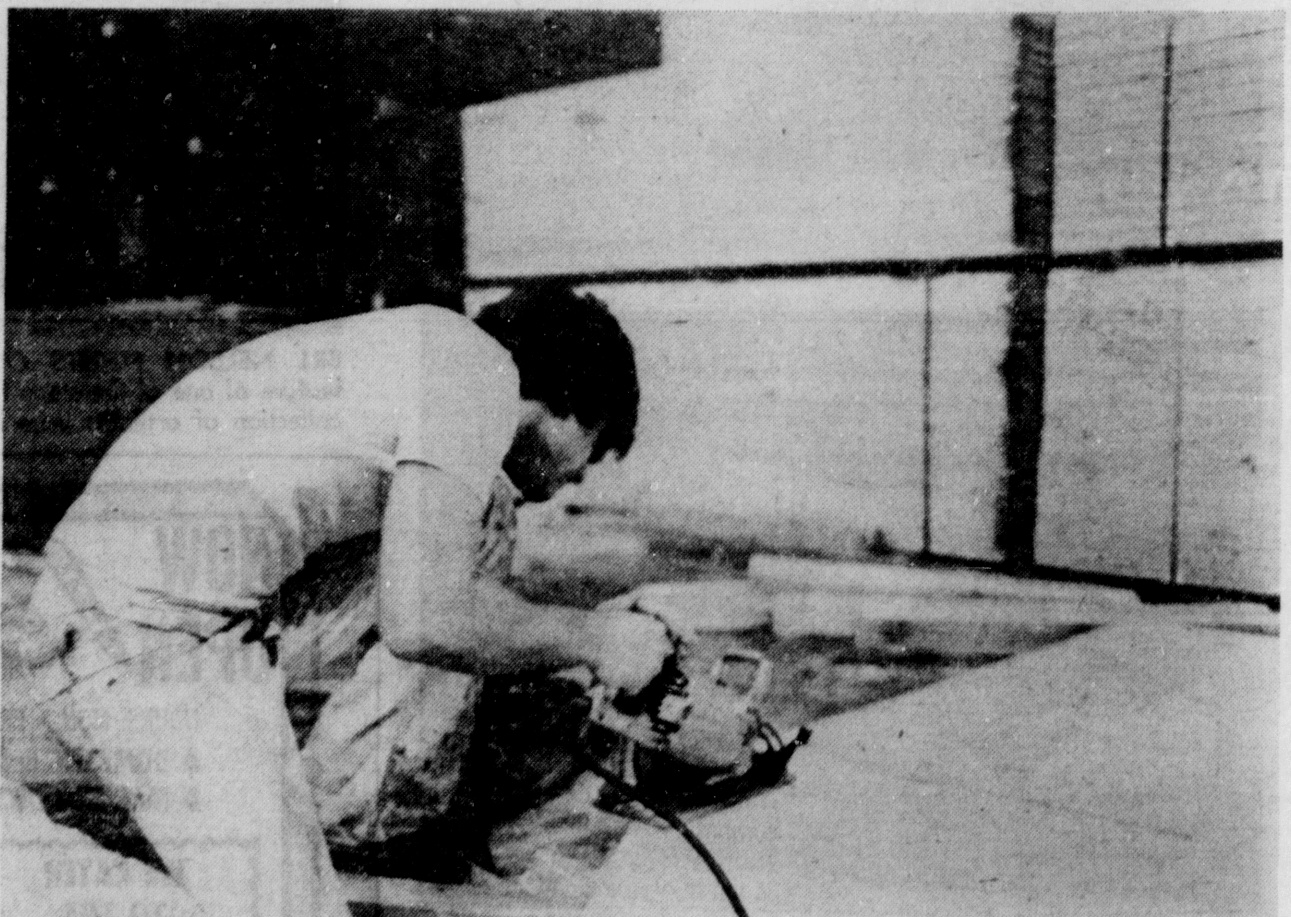
Then, at right, Joe prepares the surface of the plywood for lamination by spreading the adhesive over it. The plywood is Dan Weiss' unusual medium for his painting.



AT LEFT, Hal Weiss and son Joe put into place the second layer of plywood for the lamination. To be joined are sheets of three-eighth-inch plywood and three-quarter-inch plywood. And at right, Hal Weiss, an architect and builder, moves into place the heavy stacks of plywood that provided the necessary weight and compression to achieve the lamination. All this before young Dan Weiss could begin the actual execution of his art design.



NOW DAN WEISS begins with a skill saw to cut from the huge plywood flats the shapes that he will need to execute his design upon the building wall. After being sawed to form, the plywood pieces will be colored, and then affixed to the building wall. The completed painting measures 94 feet in length, 11 feet high, and the young artist believes it is the second largest in the West.

Dan Weiss Has Developed His Own Distinctive Technique For Art

By DON KEOWN

Any one man show of the art of 21-year-old Dan Weiss — and there have been a number of them — requires, first and foremost, a lot of wall space.

Consider the dimensions of young Weiss' latest painting.

It measures 11 feet tall and 94 feet long, and embellishes an exterior wall of a Mill Valley business building at Sunnyside and East Blithedale in Mill Valley.

Says its creator: "Except for a painting done by an artist in a parking lot in the state of Washington, it is probably the largest painting in the western states."

SIZE ISN'T the only distinguishing aspect of Weiss' work. He has developed an original technique that he calls "my environmental paintings."

His materials depend upon whether his work is for an interior or an exterior.

If the painting is to go inside a home or building, then he works with canvas, using scissors to cut it into generous-sized pieces in a myriad of geometric shapes, painting it (often all one brilliant color) and then affixing it to the wall in the desired pattern.

If the painting is for an exterior wall, then he works with plywood, using a skill saw to cut it into the geometric forms for painting and affixing.

HIS PIECES of canvas or plywood may vary from a couple of square feet to 30 square feet of surface, and a thickness of about two inches is preferred.

It's a technique that has already brought Weiss a considerable measure of recognition in Chicago where he is still a student at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and where, in six months, he will receive a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree.

In Chicago, he has had three one-man shows, participated in two group shows, has completed five commissioned paintings, and has shared two large commissions with another artist.

HE WAS APPOINTED to the Illinois Arts Council Advisory Board at 19 as its youngest member by Leonard Pas, the council's executive director who had previously commissioned a Weiss painting for his home.

Other commissions have come for the walls of offices or homes of professional men — doctors, lawyers, etc.

The shared commission was with Othello Anderson for the Western Asbestos Co. industrial building on Chicago's West Side in the heart of the city.

The two transformed a barren and drab exterior wall, exposed to heavy motor and foot traffic, into a strikingly colorful "canvas."

THE CHICAGO Tribune took highly favorable critical notice of their work.

Weiss and Anderson also shared a commission for what they call "the molehill project" —a series of 22 paintings, each artist to do 11, to brighten the subway system's foot passenger tunnels connecting Chicago's Civic Center with State Street.

The two worked with David Stahl, then deputy to Mayor William Daley and ngw the city comptroller, in developing the project.

THE WORK, however, has not come off because of a lack of money. But Weiss is hopeful that the delay is only temporary, and that eventually the necessary funds will be allocated so that the project can proceed.

Exactly five years ago today, on Sept. 16, 1967, Dan Weiss was the subject of a feature story in the San Rafael Independent-Journal.

He was then a San Rafael High School junior and football star, enjoying the thrill of his first one-man art show —at the University of California Student Center in Berkeley.

His interest in art, he told reporter Jim Brewer, had been sparked by his art instructor Mrs. Pat Larrick in his freshman year at San Rafael High.

"SHE INSPIRED me," he said, "and I began noticing the styles used by other artists and worked a lot on my own from there."

But, recalls Weiss, his environmental painting technique had not yet then developed, "and actually I was painting pretty much by the traditional methods at that time, although expressing my own ideas and philosophies."

At that time, too, his art, football and his studies shared Dan Wiss' interest with music, and he was considering a career as a jazz pianist and composer.

IN THE YEARS that have passed, music has become sec-

DAN WEISS, 21-year-old artist, goes about the work of creating one of his "environmental paintings," using plywood sawed into geometric shapes to create his design and color upon the stucco wall of a business building at 85 East Blithedale, Mill Valley, as his media and canvas. WITH BRUSH in hand and using a rubber-based finish, Dan Weiss touches up the colors that fit his preconceived design to the plywood shapes upon the wall of the Mill Valley business building. Here the "painting" is virtually complete, covering the entire wall of the structure on its Sunnyside exposure. The young artist has attracted widespread recognition with similar work in the Chicago area where he is studying and creating. For similar indoor paintings, he uses canvas instead of plywood, but his approach is similar. And he calls the technique "environmental paintings."

ondary to his painting, "although it remains a strong interest and a source of personal enjoyment."

He and fellow painter Othello Anderson, "a very fine sax player," have given five performances in Chicago — for the Goodman School of Drama, for the Art Institute of Chicago, and for churches.

"My roots remain in jazz," says pianist Weiss, "but we did mostly contemporary and original music."

WEISS IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Weiss of San Rafael. His father is an architect and builder.

Says Dan: "I was exposed to the architectural influence all my life — the concept of making use of space, and not letting it use you, and of transforming the unused and the drab into the functional or the aesthetic."

His individualistic environmental painting technique, which he has been practicing now for four years, is, he feels, a natural outgrowth of that influence.

HE HAS BEEN spending the summer in Marin on vacation, but is returning to Chicago now to resume his studies and his work.

The commission for the Mill Valley job came from 20th Century Homes, the owner of the building that houses three businesses and professional offices.

Weiss was especially pleased with the reception given his plans and designs for the painting by the Mill Valley Architectural Commission.

"THERE WASN'T an objection," he says, noting he had approached the commission with some trepidation, after sitting through a long agenda "in which they really seemed to be tearing into things."

The Mill Valley painting consists of 24 pieces affixed to the stucco wall.

To begin the execution of his design, Weiss, working with the help of his father and his brother Joe, joined together four eight-by-four-foot panels of plywood to form 16-by-eight-foot flats with which to work.

A LAMINATION of three-eighth-inch plywood with a layer of three-quarter-inch plywood was achieved with the help of heavy stacks of plywood whose weight provided the necessary compression.

A skill saw was used to cut the plywood panels into the desired shapes and pieces. Neoprene, a rubber derivative, was first applied to the plywood as a cover, then a rubber-based finish applied as the color coat. The colors are a rust or tile red and a soft green that young Weiss had selected as harmonizing with the building and with the Mill Valley mood and setting. The plywood pieces are then put into place and "touched up."

The color of the wall,interior or exterior, upon which he will be working is often a determining factor for Weiss in working out his design and selecting its hues.

HE DOESN'T repaint the wall, but accepts it as it is, and works from there. "I see that as part of the challenge," he says.

Back in 1967, Dan Weiss told I-J reporter Jim Brewer: "Painting has made me sensitive to others. Through it, I have learned to respect people's thoughts and understand why they laugh and cry."

Such statements are typical of the thoughtful, articulate young Marinite, who has found his artistic and social horizons expanding as he has broadened the scope of his canvases to wall-length dimensions. And who has achieved a major reputation in Midwestern art circles even before he has completed his schooling.

Now, returning to Chicago, center of that reputation and site of that schooling, he has left his home county of Marin a striking example of its own of the kind of creative work that has won him the applause of Chicago critics, the confidence of Chicago officialdom, and the patronage of Chicago connoisseurs.

Improvement Club: 70 Years For A Better San Rafael

Civic Group Has Worked Effectively

By DOROTHY GARDINER

The pesky, irritating and frequent disease-carrying mosquito spurred a group of prominent Marin men and women to form one of this county's oldest clubs — and one of the first improvement clubs in the state.

At the turn of the century Marin was infested by swarms of mosquitoes, including the malaria-bearing anopheles species, that made living here akin to residing in the tropics.

Residents and visitors venturing out of doors swathed themselves in layers of mosquito netting, and smoking smudge pots lined thoroughfares throughout the county.

IN THE SPRING of 1902 there was a meeting of "farsighted San Rafael women who saw a need for a village Improvement Society in the growing community," wrote the late Winifred MacIntosh Menzies.

These women, aided by their husbands, organized the San Rafael Improvement Club and declared war on the pesky insect.

Mrs. Menzies, who wrote her history of the club in 1936, joined the group in 1905, a year after she and her bridegroom, Robert Menzies, arrived in San Rafael from England.

(Their home, next to the Robert Dollar estate on today's Mission Avenue, was razed in 1971.)

THE SAN RAFAEL Improvement Club held its first meetings at the old Gordon Opera House on Fourth Street, the Lodge (today's Marin County Historical Society Museum and headquarters) at Boyd Park, and the old San Rafael City Hall.

MRS. ART AVIRON, the current president, presides over a luncheon meeting of the San Rafael Improvement Club in the clubhouse at Fifth Avenue and H Street, San Rafael. The club, formed in 1902, now has a membership of 118, but next week begins a membership drive which, it is hoped, will increase that figure substantially. Eight years ago, the club had 150 members.

By-laws were drawn up by attorney Vincent Neale and his English-born wife was elected the club's first president, a post she held until 1916.

Among the founding members were wealthy San Francisco banking and tugboat tycoon William Babcock and his wife, Julia, who became the club's first treasurer.

YEARS LATER Mrs. Babcock became known as the "matriarch of Marin" after willing her multi-million dollar estate for the formation of the Babcock Memorial Foundation. She died in 1954 at the age of 93.

The Babcock estate, Edgehill, is today part of the Dominican College campus.

Mrs. George Pinckard became the club's first secretary and other founding members included Mrs. Thomas Wintringham of San Rafael; Mrs. Edward G. Stetson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Cushing, the first settlers of today's Mill Valley, and Mrs. Arthur W. Foster, wife of the president of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad Co.

FAIRHILLS, THE former Foster estate, is the site of the residential area that bears that name.

Mrs. Menzies, who came down with "a beautiful case of old-fashioned malaria, chills and fever" after her arrival in Marin, credited four men with "helping the club achieve our present enviable position."

They were Vincent Neale for his "counsel" and "legal knowledge;" Babcock for "aid in every crisis, interest in activities and financial support;" George Page for "community spirit" by assuming duties of "town trustee in order to start proper mosquito control," and

Charles Jensen for "practical advise and assistance."

ALTHOUGH THE club's "main object was to control or eliminate the mosquito," members also "planted shade trees along the hot, dusty roads. This work cost several thousand dollars a year which came from member's dues and proceeds of entertainments," Mrs. Menzies stated.

(By 1907 club members were busy planting some 10,000 trees along San Rafael streets. Many of those lining Fifth Avenue today are survivors of the project.)

The fund-raising entertainment events "were done in a big way," according to Mrs. Menzies, with "affairs in the afternoon followed by some dramatic performance in the evening."

(SOME OF THE plays presented were authored by founding president Neale.)

"Everybody helped, everybody came and to take in $1,000 was an every-day affair," Mrs. Menzies reported, "with some takes over $1,500."

In those days San Rafael was still called the "village." Streets and roads were unpaved and the population so small everybody knew everyone else by name.

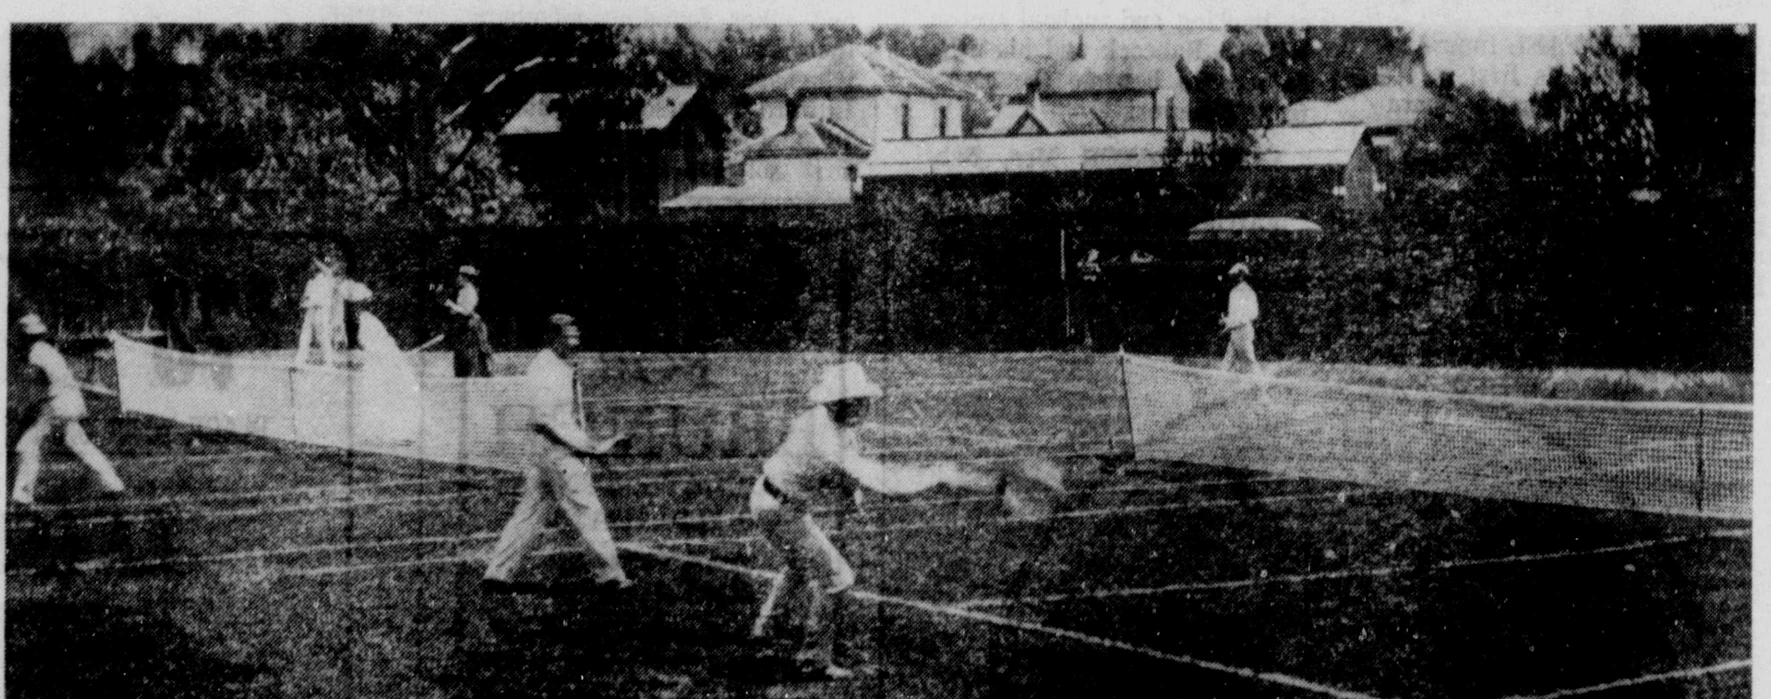
THE CLUBHOUSE of the San Rafael Improvement Club was the Victor Building at San Francisco's 1915 Panama Pacific International Exposition. It was purchased by the club after the fair and brought across San Francisco Bay by barge, then remodeled for the Fifth and H Street site.



BEFORE THE property at Fifth Avenue and H Street in San Rafael became the location for the clubhouse of the San Rafael Improvement Club, it was part of the huge Arthur W. Foster estate, and the scene of spirited lawn tennis games such as the ones under way here.

days when the gentlemen helped as well as the ladies," Mrs. Menzies remembered, with the men often handing over "beautiful, shining five-dollar gold pieces . . . and refusing change."

The entertainments were well advertised with slogans such as: "If you like the mosquito, its hum and its bite, don't come to our show on Saturday night."

According to San Rafael Improvement Club records one such "entertainment," called a Floral Carnival, staged at Boyd Park on May 20, 1911, featured "the high school orchestra, a

SOME OF MARIN'S most prominent women in civic and social affairs have played major roles in the activities of the San Rafael Improvement Club. Mrs. Robert Menzies, left, joined the club in 1905, and in 1936 wrote a history of the organization that is the source of much valuable information on the club's early years and accomplishments. Georgia Wintringham, center, served as chairman of the club's San Rafael Tree Committee for 30 years. Her mother was one of the founders of the club. And Mrs. William (Julia) Babcock, matriarch of Marin society, was one of the founders and the club's first treasurer.

maypole, dancing, kinder-symphony, Punch and Judy, booths, grabs, peanuts, guards of honor, scouts and knights."

MRS. MICHAEL H. DeYoung, wife of founding co-publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle, performed.

(The DeYoung's former San Rafael country home, Meadowlands, is also preserved today as part of the Dominican College campus.)

The show also featured vaudeville, sideshows, confetti and a supper served on the grounds.

If the club collected the sums Mrs. Menzies reported, the turn-out must have been tremendous with 25 cents admission charged for adults and a dime for youngsters.

THE CLUB USED the funds to hire Paul H. Eckelman, a pioneer in mosquito abatement, who made a study categorizing the variety of mosquitoes plaguing the county.

On June 1, 1907, property owners were sent a notice reading:

"If you are troubled by mosquitoes, they are probably bred locally, possibly on your own premises."

Those needing "help" were to send for Eckelman "who will assist you in your search."

GALLONS OF crude oil were dumped into ditches and low-lying marshlands, favorite breeding grounds of the insect.

Improvement Club members also watched street conditions and at a Feb. 6, 1908, meeting Flora Gow reported:

"Some of the streets are in very bad condition . . . especially Second Street. If gravel were put in the streets it would make them both look better and would be more convenient for traffic."

THE CLUB'S pioneer interest in trees and town beautification eventually led to involvement in conservation, decades before ecology became popular.

According to club records in 1919 the organization was responsible for the appointment of a warden to look after San Rafael's trees.

The following year the city charter was amended, establishing a San Rafael Tree Committee.

am's daughter, Georgia, who as a teen-ager began attending Improvement Club meetings along with her mother, served as chairman of this committee for 30 years.

(After Miss Wintringham's death at age 83 in 1968 the members of the club planted a tree intheir clubhouse garden in her memory.)

For years the club's Tree Planting and Preservation Committee, under the leadership of Miss Wintringham's mother, supervised the spraying and trimming of trees throughout the city.

IN 1915 THE club was "influential" in forming the Marin County Mosquito Abatement District.

By this time, according to club records, the malaria-carrying anopheles species had been exterminated in the county.

According to an undated article in the club archives published in the San Rafael Daily Independent under the column, Marin County 20 Years Ago (that presumably ran in 1935):

"The San Rafael Improvement Club relinquished its mosquito abatement work and turned over its equipment to the Mosquito Abatement District No. 1.

"IT RECOMMENDED that Paul Eckelman who had been employed by the club for 11 years to carry on abatement work be retained ..."

Relieved of time consuming mosquito abatement duties, the club now turned its attention to finding a permanent clubhouse.

In 1915 the members leased about an acre of land at Fifth Avenue and H Street from Arthur W. Foster. The site, part of Foster's mammoth estate, was occupied by tennis courts.

FOSTER WAS to be paid $100 annual rent and the club held an option to purchase the property for $2,300 in "United States gold coin."

The next year, when buildings erected for the 1915 Panama Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco were put up for sale, the members decided to purchase the Victor Building.

In the meantime, the building was given to Leon Douglass, chairman of the Victor Co., who

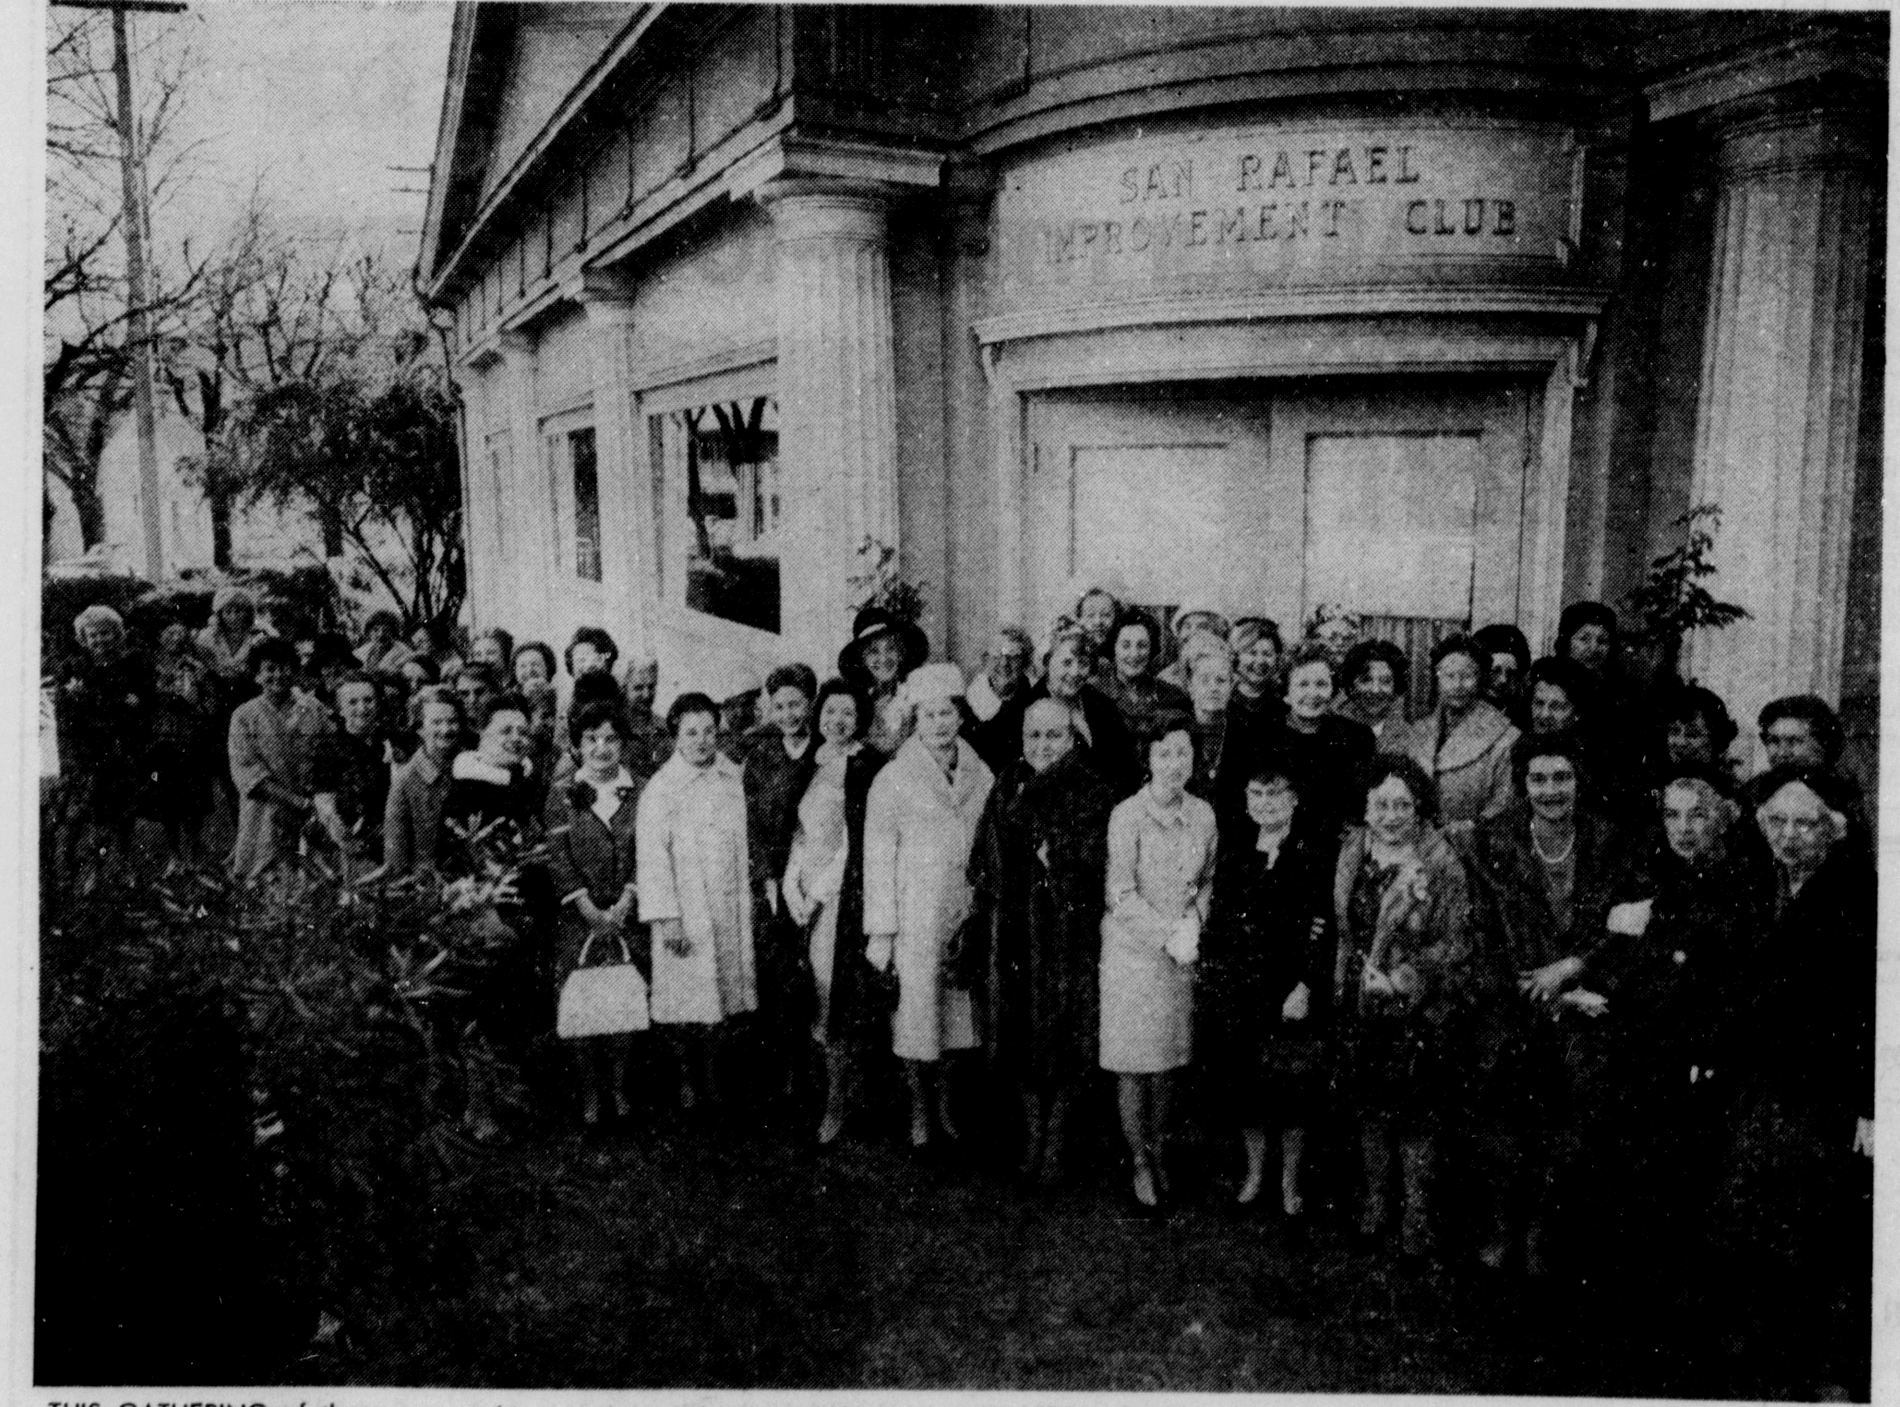
THE YEAR WAS 1924 and the women of the San Rafael Improvement Club, in the costumes of many lands, were enjoying an All-Nations Luncheon at their clubhouse. It was just one of many special events conducted by the fast-growing and very-active club. Mrs. Fred E. Sawyer was then president.



THIS GATHERING of the women making up the membership of the San Rafael Improvement Club was photographed at the same site as the picture at the top of the page, but 43 years later — in 1967. The club was celebrating more than 50 years at the Fifth and H location.

resided in a palatial home on Lincoln Avenue. (This home later became the Paloma Inn.)

DOUGLASS, NOT wanting the structure, sold it to a man called Sonnenchien "for a trifle," according to Mrs. Menzies' history.

The club eventually purchased it from him for $500.

According to an article by the late Florence Donnelly, Independent-Journal historian and an honorary member of the club, published Sept. 1, 1962:

The "building was brought across the bay in sections by barges from San Francisco and up the San Rafael Canal to be assembled" on the land leased from Foster.

THE BUILDING had neither "a ceiling or roof," according to Mrs. Donnelly, and had to be remodeled with the pillars that today face the street, "added for support."

Work finished in 1916, the clubhouse opened with a performance of Anatole France's "Dumb Wife."

With the outbreak of World War I, the members became involved with war work and "interest lagged and dues fell off. We could hardly keep our club going," Mrs. Menzies recalled.

THE CLUBHOUSE was turned over to the Red Cross as a temporary headquarters and one member suggested the "sale of the property and division of the proceeds among the five or six of us who are left," she added.

The club was saved due to the efforts of founding member Marion Stetson, who was then president, Mrs. Menzies recalled.

In 1921 the club founded the first Parent-Teacher Assn. in San Rafael and a year later the Improvement Club was reorganized joining the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

(TODAY THE San Rafael Improvement Club is a member of the Federation's Golden Gate District. Last April the district presented two awards to the club for projects on California Heritage and Scholarship and Public Education.)

In 1923, at Mrs. Babcock's urging, the members picked up their option and purchased the clubhouse site.

During the next four decades membership grew into the hundreds. There were performances, luncheons and meetings, including many where members dressed in costume such as an All-Nations Luncheon in 1924.

THE CLUB members worked for roadside improvements, with one of their main projects the paving of the road leading to Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

They had a hand in naming the Ross Valley's Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and launched one of the first campaigns against billboards in the county.

In 1925 a spruce on the clubhouse property became the first outdoor tree to be lighted in the city at Christmas.

LATER THE women raised funds to pave H Street in front of the clubhouse, and in 1931 they formed the first Junior Women's Auxiliary in Marin.

Retaining their early interest in conservation they supported the founding of the Tamalpais State Park and later became a founding member of the Marin Conservation League.

During the dark days of the depression members raised funds to help the unemployed. In 1942 they brought the first Mobile Blood Band to Marin, loaning the clubhouse as the first blood bank headquarters.

DURING WORLD War II scrap metal drives were held, first aid classes given and thousands of cookies baked for service men overseas.

From the earliest years the club has also supported such organizations as the Marin Symphony, the Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scouts and has contributed generously to scholarship funds across the county.

Today the San Rafael Improvement Club continues to raise funds to support such projects as the planting of trees in the "fire-scarred acre in the Donner Burn of the Tahoe National Forest," reported Mrs. Art Aviron of San Rafael who is beginning her second term as club president.

TIME AND money are also given to such organizations as the Marin Music Chest, Marin Art and Garden Center, Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc. and rest homes.

The club for many years also has awarded a yearly $250 scholarship to a woman student at the College of Marin.

Funds today are raised from luncheons, fashion shows, art exhibits, bridge parties and the sale of Christmas decorations made by members of the club's garden section.

FUNDS ARE also obtained from the rental of the clubhouse for weddings and to such groups as the Weight Watchers. Use of the clubhouse is also donated to the Goldenaires, a group of senior citizens, and to the Marin County Historical Society.

Last year the club raised "about $600," Mrs. Aviron reported, adding that "it wasn't enough" and that the members hope to increase the amount this year.

Restoration and upkeep of the clubhouse property is a continual drain on the club's resources. This year concrete must be reinforced and flooring repaired, she added.)

ANOTHER PROBLEM facing the club is a falling off of membership, with 118 now belonging to the organization, Mrs. Aviron said.

When she joined the club eight years ago membership stood at 150.

In the old days "women wanted to get dressed up and out of the house," noted Mrs. Louis L. Walsh of San Rafael, club historian who served as president in 1941 and 1942.

Today, with so many clubs and organizations across the county, "they want to stay home and rest," she added.

MRS. AVIRON, who believes "a project is necessary to keep people interested," hopes the club will begin taking a more active role in civic affairs this coming year.

County and city officials will be welcome to speak at monthly meetings, usually held on first Tuesdays at the Improvement Club, she said.

(The club holds monthly meetings from September through June with the club's garden and book review sections also holding independent meetings at the clubhouse.

A MEMBERSHIP drive will be launched on Tuesday when the members begin their 71st year, according to Mrs. Aviron.

Mrs. Ragnar Thaning of San Rafael, newly elected membership chairman, will hold a series of orientation teas at her Culloden Park home.

Mrs. Thaning, chairman of the club's Lucas Valley Hospital Auxiliary at the County Farm 10 years ago, hopes to interest new members in volunteer work, possibly at Sonoma State Hospital where members now send handmade pieces of clothing and other articles to mentally-retarded youngsters.

A SECTION on the American home will also be inaugurated this year, Mrs. Aviron announced. Special meetings on interior decoration and gourmet cooking will be held throughout the year. Mrs. C. J. Fitzharris of San Rafael is chairman of the new section.

The San Rafael Improvement Club also has a representative on the Marin Motion Picture and Television Council and it sponsors a "Dial-A-Review" service at a local library where a list is available of television programs suitable for children.

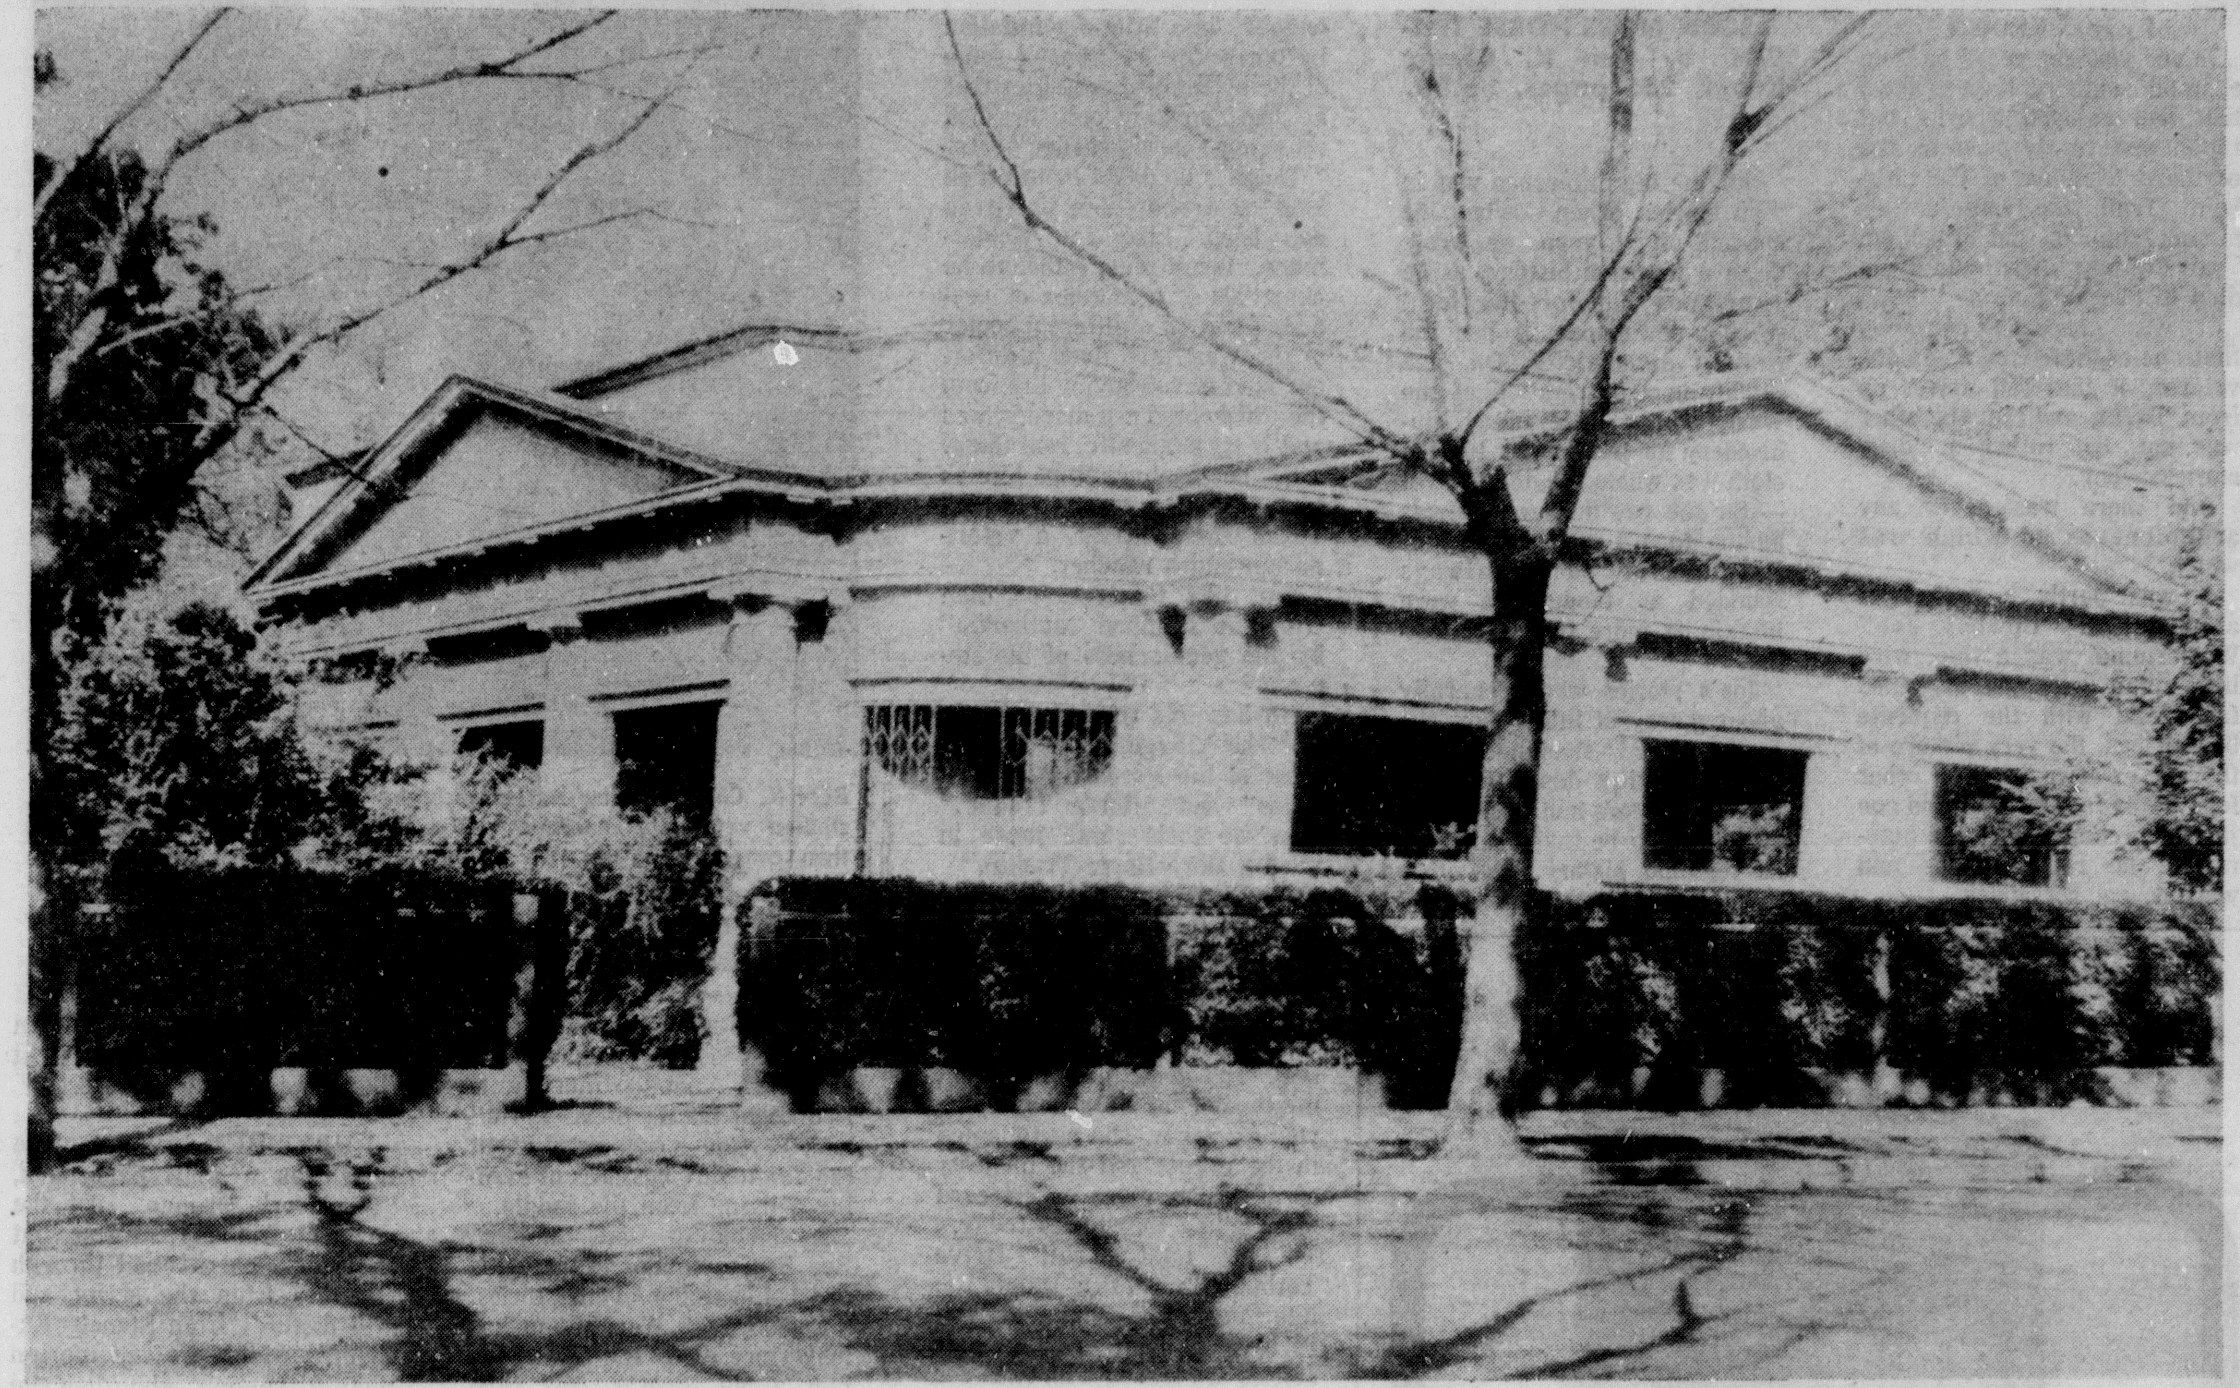
The traditional interest in conservation has been maintained with an Improvement Club member serving as a representative on the Marin Conservation League. Other members volunteer time to staff the league office on Mondays.

IN RECENT years the club has also collected Betty Crocker coupons that, when redeemed by the firm, made possible the purchase of two kidney machines to be used in the Bay Area.

Last year members donated 13,000 hours of volunteer work on such projects as visiting the elderly in both convalescent and private homes.

This month, as today's San Rafael Improvement Club members begin their 71st year, they are following in footsteps of a group of women described by Winifred Menzies as:

"... not thinking of themselves but of how they can make San Rafael a better place to live in ..."



AN ESTABLISHED LANDMARK in the city of San Rafael is the San Rafael Improvement Club's clubhouse, reflecting the architectural taste of a bygone era, but still very much an impressive structure. Many Marinites, too, can recall the hedge surrounding the clubhouse from their earliest years in San Rafael.

"Of course, when he mentioned automobiles, it was just kind of a passing word. They hadn't cut too deep into the horse business; no such thing as a tractor existed to my knowledge; and nobody was too much worried about the future of the horse. We just assumed that we'd always have to have thousands of them and that they would be with us forever."

Ben K. Green in "Some More Horse Tradin'."

The Genuine Cowboy

By DON KEOWN

SOME MORE HORSE TRADIN' by Ben K. Green; Knopf, 255 pages, $6.95.

In our younger years back in a small southern Kansas town that had enjoyed a brief but rough and rowdy past as the northern terminus of the Chisholm Trail, the community's membership in the Chisholm Trail Cowboys' Assn. had dwindled to two old-timers.

It was generally conceded that one of these was a genuine veteran of the trail drives up from Texas, and that the other was not, but rather a "drug store cowboy."

And there was never any argument as to which was which.

It was partly a matter of appearance. "Cowboy Joe" Weidermann was a thin, wiry little man with sun-darkened face, and with the requisite bowed legs, the very picture of the old ex-cowpoke. The other fellow was fat and fair, and one just knew that before the automobile he rode buggies and wagons, not horseback.

But the big difference was in their stories. When Cowboy Joe spieled off a yarn, or wrote down a piece on history, as he sometimes did for the local weekly newspaper, it has the ring of authenticity. Oh, Joe might, in the tradition of the West, add a little fancy embroidery for trimmings. But the cloth was whole. When his rival — for the two men were rivals as the town's official relics of its colorful past —always sounded as though he were imagining more than recollecting.

Joe's stories were generally about a way of life — how the cowboy lived, sleeping on the ground, eating dust, prodding reluctant steers and dogies. His stories could be taken seriously as regional history. The other man's could not. He was simply engaged in a little ego inflation by borrowing for himself some of the events and activities that he had probably only brushed up against in his earlier years.

There is no doubt as to which kind of cowboy Ben K. Green has been. Like Joe Weidermann, Ben Green, although he came along a number of decades later, in a different sector of the West, and lived a different kind of cowboying life from the Chisholm Trail drivers, was and is the authentic, real thing.

His biography stamps him as such. He has been a young Texas horse trader, a veterinarian and a rancher.

But, like Cowboy Joe, Ben Green is stamped "authentic" by the genuineness of his stories.

He has told them previously in "The Village Horse Doctor: West of the Pecos," Wild Cow Tales" and "Horse Tradin'." Now he teels some more in "Some More Horse Tradin'."

One might suspect that Green's stock of tales would be running thin. Not so. His newest collection is still filled with the flavor and the feeling of the Old West, told with wit and perception, and with just the right mixture of the brashness of the young cowboy who participated in the events and the modesty of the older, more experienced man telling the stories today.

"The Last Trail Drive Through Downtown Dallas" is hilarious. "The Shield Mares" is a spellbinder. And shorter stories are loaded with chuckles —and with insight into a way of life whose practitioners are becoming fewer and fewer upon his earth.

Ben Green's basic honesty is reflected in the fact that he doesn't always emerge the victor in the give-and-take of the trades that he recounts. It was a business back in the early 1900s in which "to cheat" the other man wasn't necessarily to have played unfair. In fact, that was the point of the whole transaction.

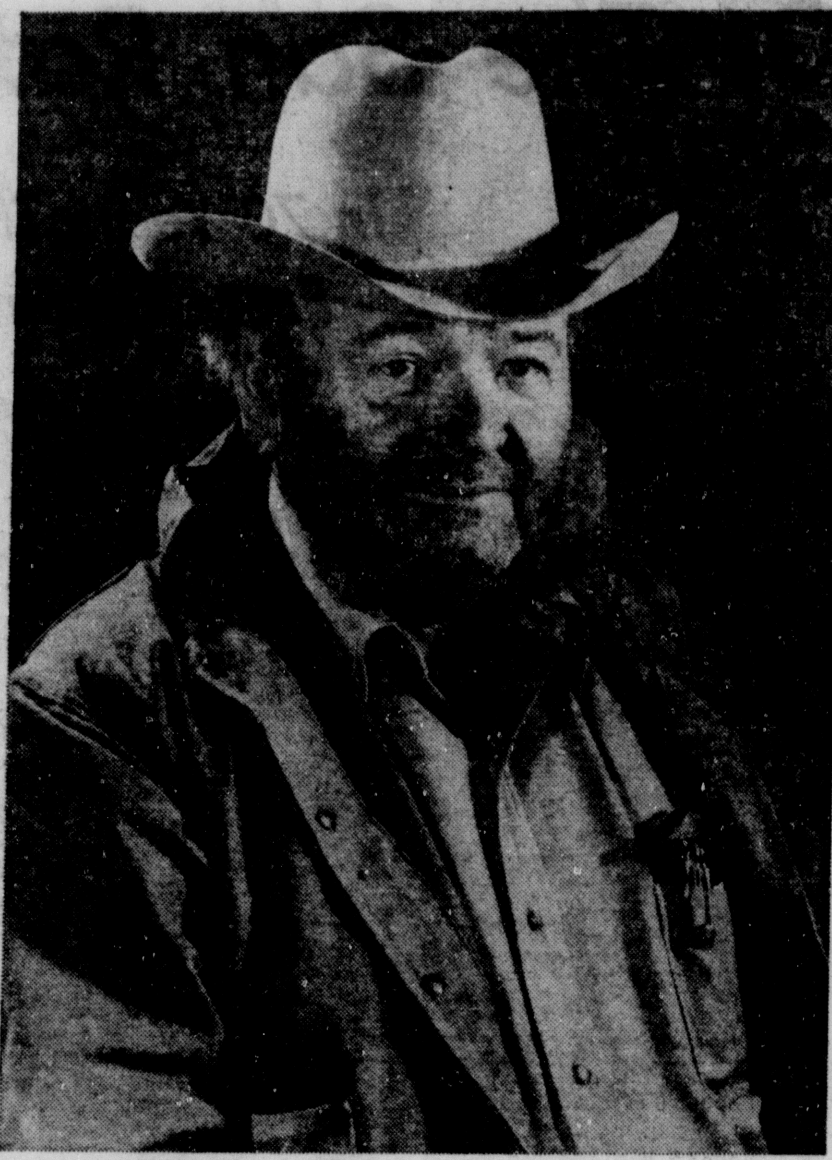
Some may blink at this kind of business ethics —although it was not confined to horse trading, and is hardly unknown today. More will flinch at the cowboys' attitude toward horses and other stock, as candidly recalled by Green. The sentimentality of the cowboy for his horse, or for horses in general, depicted in the movies and celebrated in western ballads, is largely missing from Green's stories. The cowboy regarded his mount as transportation, pure and simple, and treated him according to his performance.

And the cowboy could at times be guilty of appalling cruelty to a horse with a spirit and mind of its own, who balked at bending to man's will. There are more than a few incidents of this in Green's tales.

But it is an honest portrayal of the attitudes of what Green describes as "a rough young cowboy .. . not too much worried about the ills of the world" and very much concerned about the day-to-day business of earning a living from the saddle.

In including that thinking, Ben K. Green adds to the value and believability of his stories.

Cowboy Joe Weidemann has long since died. The town gave him a big funeral. (His rival received only the customary rites when he passed on to that great cattle trail —or drug store — in the skies). Thankfully, we still have a few Ben Greens around who can tell it like it was in the Old West.



BEN K. GREEN, after an early career as horse trader and cowboy, studied veterinary medicine in the United States and abroad, and then practiced in the Far Southwest in one of the last big horse countries in North America. Now back in his hometown of Cumby, Tex., he is a rancher and the author of four books recounting cowboy life in the Old West.

PUBLISHED by Ballantine Books as a $3.95 paperback, "Clockwork Orange," not the novel by Anthony Burgess, but the story told instead through excerpts from the script and still pictures from Stanely Kubrick's much-praised motion picture version, the dialogue matched to the illustrations. An attempt, claims Kubrick, at a new and meaningful way of presenting a book about a film.

Sleuths & Suspense

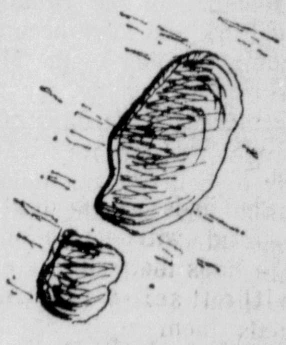
THE PLAYERS AND THE GAME by Julian Symons; Harper & Row, 217 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

In the suburbs of Rawley, a country-club atmosphere that will be familiar to all Marin readers even though it's in England, someone who who likes to call himself Dracula is killing for pleasure.

With his accomplice Bonnie he abducts young girls and tortues them to death with bizarre impersonality reminiscent of the Moors Murders and the Lonely Heart Murders.

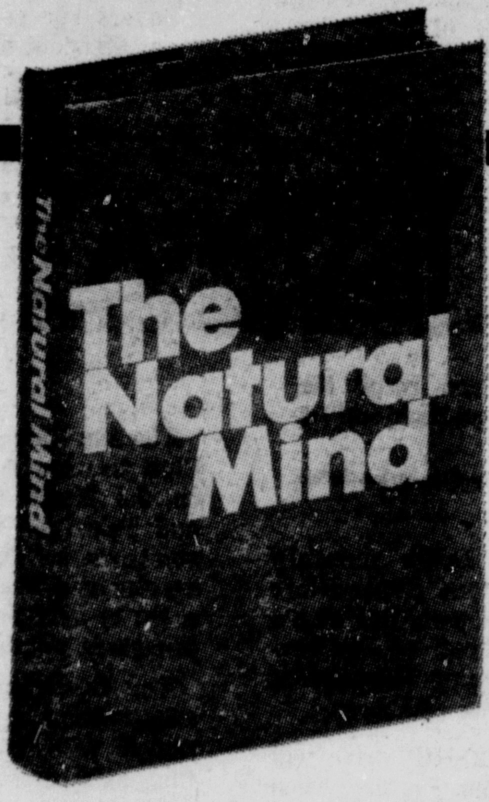
All the while we follow the fortunes and misfortunes of a typical set of Rawley residents (with all their typical vices), we are aware that this maniac must be one of them. If you read very, very carefully there is one, just one, word clue to his identity.

So in this sense it is a traditional detective novel with the murderer revealed at the end. And a jolly good one too.



But Julian Symons, a truly adult author, has also written a brilliant novel on many layers. It's a deeply probing psychological analysis; it's touching and tragic, particularly in the central character who is subjected to the terrible pressures of success in the business world; and it's gripping in the extreme.

While highly recommended, this crime novel is not for the squeamish, since in its entirely convincing characterization some details of the horrific crimes are given.



THE NATURAL MIND offers a new way of looking at an old problem and a new hope of transcending it: the problem of the drugs that have become a part of life in America today.

The danger lies not in the drugs themselves but in an individual's misunderstanding of the relationship between the drugs and the states of consciousness it triggers.

Visitor Looks At U.S. Schools

SPEARPOINT by Sylvia Ashton-Warner; Knopf, 224 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Sylvia Ashton-Warner (Henderson), New Zealand teacher and open classroom advocate noted for her earlier book, "Teacher," came to the United States to help start an experimental school in the Colorado Rockies. What she found, and her impressions of American children and American education, are related in "Spearpoint."

Miss Ashton-Warner writes with exciting imagery and great imagination. Her philosophy of education is imaginative, too; and it is direct, clear, free from the fuzzy uncertainty that has produced its own meaningless language in American education circles.

As Mrs. Henderson, teacher, she has a formula: "Release the native imagery of our child and use it for working material." She has her own devices for doing this, and she tries them at the Colorado experimental school.

But permissiveness as it reigns in this "modern, progressive" school appals the modern, progressive teacher from New Zealand. There is no order, no discipline; since everyone is equal, the teachers are servants (or baby-sitters) of the children.

Reason is replaced by "I wanna" or "I do wanna." Mrs. Henderson, teacher, concludes that America's religion of the future may by "Wannadowanna."

She finds the children bright — and without enthusiasms. She finds them beautiful — and without self-discipline. She finds them knowledgeable beyond their years — and unable to think for themselves, instead becoming mirror-images of what they have seen on television.

"Spearpoint" is not a coldly critical book; in fact, it is a warm one. The writer loves the children. She makes allowances for the befuddled American teachers. But her keen perception leaves her troubled over the future of a people who have so lost their way in the education of their offspring.

The book is like the children: delightful, and deeply troubling.

'Women Of The Seventies'

WHAT'S A NICE GIRL LIKE YOU DOING IN A PLACE LIKE THIS? by Joyce Teitz; Coward McCann and Geoghegan, 285 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

The author describes her book as a look at female liberation in practice, but most Feminists will tell you that no woman can truly be "a liberated woman" until inequities in the law, social custom and insoitutions have been ended.

Yet Joyce Teitz attempts here to get beyond the argument and rhetoric to look at what she terms "women of the Seventies." She presents the life styles of 11 very different women in America who are outstanding because of their own accomplishments. You have probably heard of very few of them.

Though she has done something of a superficial job perhaps because she attempts to characterize so many individuals, Miss Teitz makes her point. She finds common denominators among the 11 women that may characterize "the woman of the Seventies": social and economic security and independence.

"They don't have to marry. If they marry and their husbands die, they will not find themselves in quite the void of the widow who derived income and status entirely through her husband."

They do not live in "a kind of feudal protectorate" as do many other women. They have a sense of doing something worthwhile, of having a purpose. They are livelier than most other women; they have wider social options, says author Teitz. And they have professional competence, carefully acquired. They have developed decisiveness and confidence, which most women, because of their continual conditioning, often lack.

Miss Teitz finishes with a plea to women to take control of their own lives. She herself is a 28-year-old Harvard lawyer. And, it is quite evident, in control of her own destiny.

Life Of A Librarian And Children's Friend

ANNE CARROLL MOORE, A Biography, by Frances Clarke Sayers; Atheneum, 284 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Jean Day.

Anne Carroll Moore is the story of a life, and, because she was so important a part of it, of a great movement. She lived from July 12, 1871, until the day of John Kennedy's inauguration, Jan. 20, 1961, nearly 90 years. During these years the concept of a special part of a library with libarians trained to introduce children to the world of reading was born and came to universal acceptance.

Mrs. Sayers tells of the New England childhood as the youngest, and only daughter of the eight children of Luther and Sarah Moore of Limerick, Me.

Luther Moore was a lawyer and a farmer, who recognized the special gifts of his daughter very early and encouraged her interest in books and study. After his death in 1892, Anne became involved in the rearing of two motherless nieces, so she was 24 when she entered Pratt Institute Library School in Boston.

Upon graduation, she became head of the Library for Children at Pratt, a venture only two months old at the time she took over. She stayed there 10 years, until September of 1906, when she came to New York Public Library to head the work with children — a post she held until her retirement in 1941. In 1942 she taught at the graduate school of librarianship at University of California Berkeley. During her career she filled many assignments lecturing and teaching at the university level throughout the country.

She was also an authoritative critic of children's books.

Upon this barebones outline of a rich, varied life, Mrs. Sayers fills in all the fascinating details of friendships with authors, such as Walter de la Mare and Beatrix Potter. She delineates the many battles fought in the course of opening up the world of books to all children without the old emphasis being placed on clean hands.

The story of ACM's involvement with the case of Leo Frank, accused of murder in an anti-Semitic community in Georgia and convicted, despite the sustained efforts of the lady who had put books in his young hands, is a spellbinder. The text of many letters written by ACM and by others to her are a treat, because of the revealed personalities of all the writers — from the sparse New England phrases of her father to the beautiful prose of Walter de la Mare.

Clear, concise expression marks Mrs. Sayer's style, and the book flows with ease from high point to high point with no untidy wandering.

I have been told that in the 1930s Mrs. Sayers alternated Saturdays with Marion Hayes Cain of local children's theater fame in telling children's stories in the Sausalito library. A Sausalito lady, familiar with that period, avows that the cat in the title roll of "Mr. Tidy Paws," Mrs. Sayers well known children's book, also lived in Sausalito.

In any case Frances Clarke Sayers succeeded ACM as superintendent of children's work in the New York Public Labrary and held this post until 1952. Now the widow of Alfred Henry Paul Sayers, she lives in Ojai, Calif.

Problems Of The Woman

SPEAK TO ME OF LOVE by Dorothy Eden; Coward McCann and Geoghegan, 384 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

This readable novel is about Bea Bonnington, Victorian heiress, who marries for love but is married for her money.

Her life-long devotion to a charming wastrel husband has various effects on her children and her career.

For Bea, an early-day fem-lib type in spite of herself, inherits and successfully manages a great London department store.

The situations and conflicts with which Bea is confronted are those which fascinate most women readers.

Can a woman give equal affection to her husband and to her children? Will the demands of her career damage her children? Is forgiveness — of children, of an erring husband — always the "right" thing?

Dorothy Eden, widely read author of family and Gothic romances, shows Bea Bonnington coping with these questions, coming to terms with the facts of the female condition.

Mrs. Eden writes believable dialogue, colorful descriptions — especially of Victorian costumes and interiors — and her plot moves swiftly.

It's The Walker Who Sees Rome The Best

The Travel Pages

By KIMMIS HENDRICK
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

ROME, Italy — Let's reverse the old saying and make it that all roads lead "from" Rome.

This is really the way most travelers think of this great city. Afterward, anyway. They think of the world's debt to Rome's 2,500 years of history for influences on law, literature, religion, business enterprise and art.

It's the walker who sees Rome best, learns most, has most to remember.

THERE ARE other ways to see it, as by American Express or CIT tour trips. But first-timers will be glad they took the advice of old-time Rome lovers and parked their car in some garage. Rome traffic has to be seen to be believed, and it's more fun to see it than to get snarled up in it.

What's on the list for a first visit?

The Roman Forum, of course, and the nearby Coliseum. The Piazza Navona and the Pantheon. St. Peter's — and preferably for a second day — the Vatican Museum, especially the Sistine Chapel. The hills of Rome, particularly the Palatine and the Capitoline. And inevitably the fountains.

AND ALL MIXED in with these treasures, dynamic and fascinating, the modern city. There's no "old" Rome set apart from a "new" Rome; they're of a piece.

Anybody, man or woman, who walks down the handsome Via Condotti for the first time may get so distracted by the shops that a whole Rome visit will become a shopping spree. Silk ties and custom-made shirts for men, knitwear and leather goods and jewelry for women, children's clothing — at least they'll keep window gazers excited for hours.

Rome's restaurants offer further temptation.

THE FIRST TIME my wife and I went to Rome, a movie-making friend said, "Be sure to have lunch or dinner at Tre Scalini in Piazza Novona — and don't miss the dessert!" He meant the restaurant's ice cream specialty, for which we have returned innumerable times — chocolate tartufo.

Rome's the place you see everybody. It's Italian, yes, but thoroughly cosmopolitan. It's keyed to travelers. It's not necessarily expensive. Our last lovely lunch at Tre Scalini cost less than $4 each.

Ranieri's near the Spanish Steps is another fine restaurant famous for a kind of quiet elegance. Many people think Il Passetto near the Piazza Novona serves the best food in Rome.

THE POSSIBILITIES seem beyond numbering; consult the guidebooks of Frommer and Fielding, or that invaluable guide published in limited edition by the Holland-American Line called "Hand-Me-Down."

Anyone longing for scrambled eggs or a chicken salad will enjoy Babbington's Tea Room, also near the Spanish Steps. And if you want a budget-keyed cafeteria where the food is tasty and the chances of meeting other travelers are excellent, try Falcioni's near the main railway station — downstairs.

Rome's main station, by the way, is beautiful. It's where you'll arrive if you come from Milan, for instance, via Italy's crack train known as the Settebello or where you'll leave for many places.

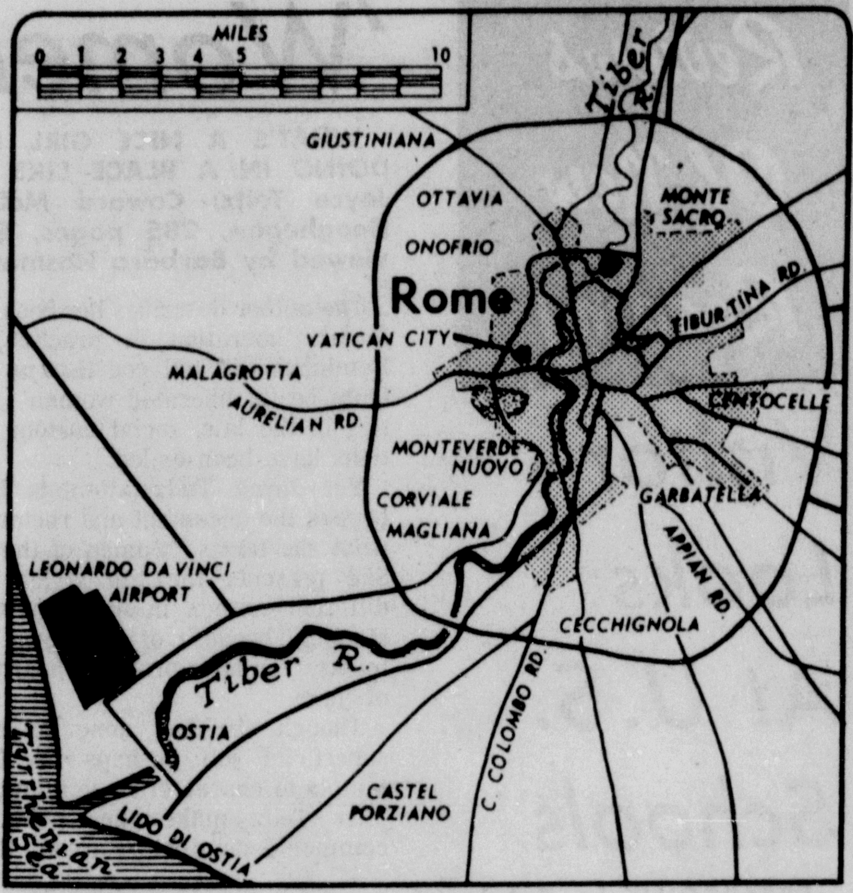
THE AIRPORT bus will also let you off here.

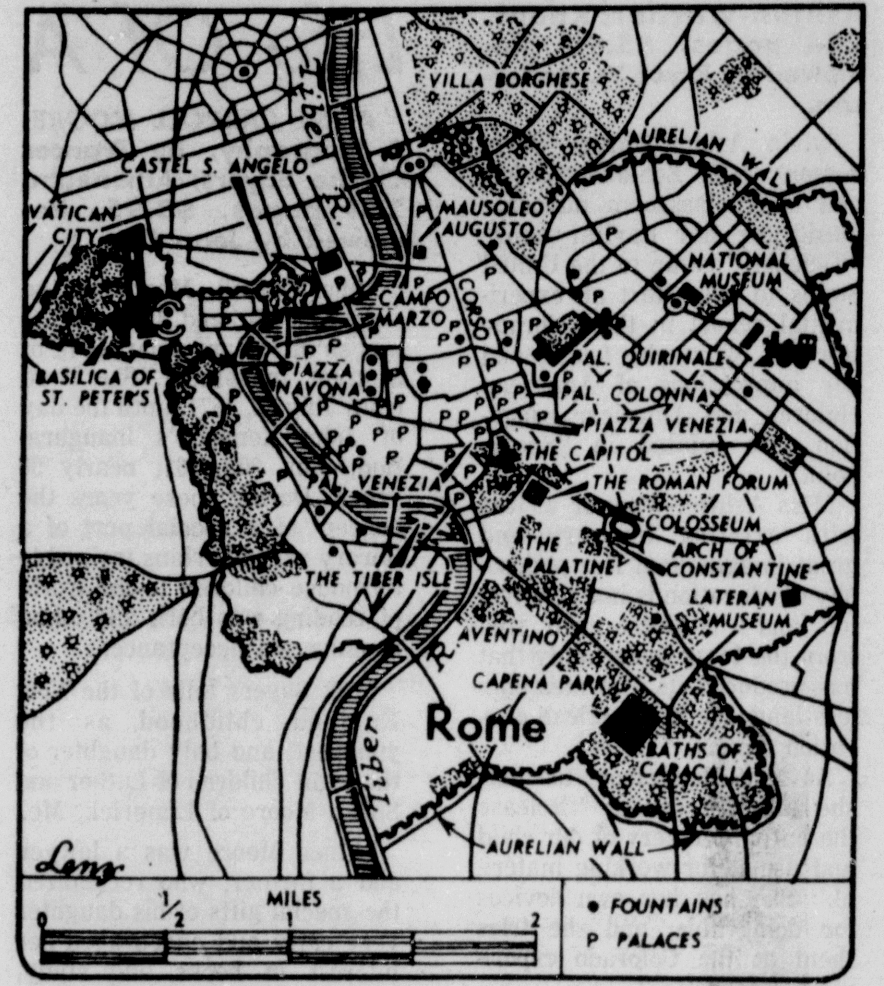
Hotels? Rome's luxury hotels hardly need mentioning, such as Hassler, Excelsior, Cavalieri Hilton. Good service is the Rome tradition and many less expensive hotels provide great comfort. In fact, here's a city where rates beginning at around $7 for a double room but ranging much higher all seem to have one thing in common — hospitality.

For budget travelers, nothing is more homelike or better managed than the Venezia, near the station. Among pensions, the Dinesen is one of the most famous, but the list fills pages.

It's important to get reservations ahead for Rome; it's a busy city.

ONE HELPFUL, thorough guide to Rome is Fodor's paperback written by Georgina Masson and entitled simply "Rome."





Some people spend days seeing nothing but the churches, those rare repositories of history and art. Santa Maria Maggiore (and back of it, Rome's quite new Upim, the Italian equivalent of Woolworth's) is one of our favorites for splendor. And we love St. Paul's within the Walls on the Via Nazionale for its staunch Protestantism.

On our first Roman holiday my wife and I took the CIT tour to Hadrian's Villa, that proof as Marguerite Yourcenar, author of "Memoirs of Hadrian," once commented, that "one can contract at will the distance between the centuries." Next trip we fixed a picnic lunch, took the local bus for Tivoli, and spent a grand day wandering around Hadrian's great palace on our own.

WE'VE ALSO gone picnicking, via subway, to Ostia Antica, that nearby ruin as memorable in its way as Pompeii. But we've taken the highly recommendable CIT tour to the Etruscan country, with its thousands of tombs decorated in startlingly fresh recollection of that ancient civilization's life style. It's hard to explore it by yourself.

California Coastline Beckons To Fisherman

WATER
PURPLE SNAKES
HOG'S EYE CAVES

Early fall is the time to fish the redwood coast of Northern California.

It's a change-of-pace area, sparsely populated and still subsisting in measure on the bounty of the sea. It's great for sightseeing among the magnificent redwood groves, lakes and rivers, with a 400-mile coastline that looks much as it did to the Manila galleons.

Along this savage coast, tiny fishing ports appear suddenly when visitors happen on one of the "dog-hole" coves that used to shelter lumber schooners. Now these little towns cater to artists and to the casual fisherman who wants to spend a day trying his luck out in the placid Pacific.

"PARTY BOATS" schedule regular departures to the fishing grounds nearby, prices include tackle for the casual angler, and kids are welcome.

Catches include the fighting king and silver salmon, in weights to 30 and 40 pounds if conditions are right. Also rock cod, snapper, halibut and succulent bottom fish.

As the morning fog lifts, one bonus is the sight of cliffs and forests that greeted Cabrillo and Heceta, the early explorers.

Starting in the south, on Highway 1, the first sportfishing port is Bodega Bay. Then in succession come Point Arena and Noyo, the latter in a rivermouth south of Fort Bragg.

MOST POPULAR party-boat center in the north is Eureka, on capacious Humboldt Bay. Most boats leave from Fields Landing, south of town, and within 20 minutes occupants can be trolling for salmon at comparatively shallow depths just outside the harbor entrance.

Good fishing is available at Trinidad, with its sheltering headland where the Spanish landed in 1775 to claim this land for King Carlos III. Finally there are boat-spaces almost every day at Crescent City, a man-made haven amid offshore rocks.

Two rivermouth salmon spots occur where the mighty Klamath meets the sea south of Crescent City and on the equally productive Smith River, near the Oregon border.

AT ALL THESE ports, convenient canning and smoking facilities make it possible for the visitor to carry off his catch for use another day.

Altogether, a fishing break in the Redwood Empire makes for an unusual holiday between looks at the timeless groves, the wine tastings and other pleasures.

For full information and maps of the Redwood coastal area, send 25 cents for postage and handling to Redwood Empire Assn., 476 Post St., San Francisco, 94102.

Cruising The Heartland Of Europe

By JOHN F. LOCKE

The Rhine River has been an important source of commerce, history and legends for centuries. It flows through the industrial heartland of Europe.

On a four-day cruise from Basle, Switzerland to Rotterdam, Holland vis France and Germany, this writer saw at least 1,200 barges, numerous day excursion boats, 52 trains both passenger and freight and both northbound and southbound, a large number of ferries, and innumerable pleasure boats.

BETWEEN BASLE and Strasbourg the river drops 400 feet. To ease the passage of barges and boats, there are 12 double locks, each pair having one basin for downstream traffic and the other for upstream. Each basin can accommodate a large excursion boat (300 feet long, 30 feet in beam and 30 feet above the water line) and at least two barges (these are 200 feet long, 15 feet wide and ride 2 or 3 feet above the water when fully loaded.)

The approach is guarded by red and green traffic signals much like those on a highway. Each boat blows its whistle and waits for the signal to change from red to green. The gatelifts up, the boat moves as far forward as possible, ties itself with a cable to a huge hook in the concrete wall of the basin, the other boats move in, and the gate is lowered behind you.

The effect is much like going into an oversize bathtub. The plug is pulled and the water level is lowered in about 15 minutes. The forward gate rises slowly and your cruise boat sails out with muddy water dripping onto its decks.

THE MOST beautiful part of the river is that north of Rudesheim, Germany, where the river flows between high wooded hills past mile upon mile of green terraces. The latter shelter the vineyards whichq produce Rhine Wine.

The hills are dotted with castles in all conditions, crumbling, deserted or restored and lived in. From time to time your boat passes old churches with their tall spires standing out against the sky and hills. All along the river are stone houses centuries old.

PASSENGERS ON the excursion boats that sail the River Rhine can laze upon the deck, their stomachs filled with good food, and watch the castle-lined shore slip past their boat.

In this area also are the high jagged cliffs from which the Lorelei have enticed mariners to come ashore. Somehow these wily maidens failed to stop us in spite of some hotblooded young Swiss soccer players on board.

ON AN ISLAND in the river is an old crumbling tower, formerly a toll station, the Mouse Tower made famous by a poem of Longfellow.

An even more fascinating bit of history is to be found in Heidelberg, whose castle was started in the 14th Century. A certain Louis XIV burned it in one of his many wars, and it has never been restored. What makes this fortress so attractive are the dukes who ruled the city for centuries. They collected their taxes in the white wine produced in the Neekar Valley, storing these liquid taxes in the world's largest wooden keg, a 58,000 gallon affair. When the keg was full, they threw a real bang up party for their friends. Once the barrel was empty, they started collecting all over again.

What a pity that this keg is no longer usable!

IN THE SUMMER there are five excursion boats which sail up and down the river, boats with names like Britannia, Europa and Helvetia. The downstream cruise takes four days, the upstream one five.

Each boat has a large lounge with picture windows, where morning bouillon, afternoon tea and various goodies from the bar are served.

The lounge is toward the bow, the restaurant toward the stern. The restaurant is staffed by very efficient and pleasant waiters who make these river runs in the summer and serves on cruise ships like the Hapag Lloyd's Europa in the Caribbean during the winter.

The food is plentiful and of good quality but it doesn't give you that stuffed feeling formerly typical of Transatantic liners. The cabins are small but well appointed and comfortable with air conditioning. A feature of the cuisine of these excursion boats is their excellent selection of Rhine and Mossell wines, those world famous white wines.

THE COST OF such a cruise is 'under $200 depending upon the current exchange rate, with no reduction for the shorter downstream sail but half fare for children under 12. Although the cruise goes through four different countries, the currency used on board is that of Germany, the deutschemarke.

The cruise tickets do not include the shore excursions, which are optional.

SO NICE TO COME HOME TO...

IN THE MOTHER LODE, off Highway 49, midway between Placerville and Auburn, on the edge of a grassy meadow shaded by Ponderosa pines and giant oaks, at left, Sandy and Steve Luckman have created their Camp Coloma, a new California campground-resort on the American River and an ideal stopover point for the recreation vehicle traffic. Ninety areas have been cleared and equipped with water, electricity and sewage services. Other facilities include air-conditioned cabins, a general store, shower and laundry facilities, barbecue areas, toilets and playgrounds. The camp's river frontage, center, brims with trout for fishermen. And an added treat for the youngsters is a farm with barn, right where they can watch and touch small animals. Camp Coloma is only a short walk from Sutter's Mill where James W. Marshall discovered gold. And finally there are hayrides, raft rides, biking, hiking and other family activities. "A natural oasis" is the way the Luckmans describe their camp.

A Lovely Region Of Lakes And Poets

England's Lake District is traditionally associated with poets, but you don't have to be proficient in rhyming to enjoy its mountains and lakes. Better qualifications would be a yen for hiking, an appetite for unadulterated natural beauty and lake-fresh fish.

American naturalist Edwin Way Teale has described the region as being "without doubt one of the loveliest parts of the world."

Lakeland, as the area is also known, lies in the counties of Cumberland, Westmoreland and Lancashire, some 260 miles northwest of London, and contains some 3,000 square miles of surprises and contrasts.

THERE ARE whale-backed fells (mountains), soft-green dales and daffodil-carpeted meadows, spikey crags and wooded lake shores. There are hundreds of tarns (a form of pond) and lakes, including England's largest, ten-mile-long Windermere. England's highest mountain — 3,210-foot Scafell Pike — is one among a couple of hundred.

Lakeland is an alpine region in miniature, alive with rivers, streams and waterfalls, and abounding in birds and game.

It's no wonder that the area beguiled William Wordsworth, Robert Southey, San Coleridge and many other 19th Century poets, making Lakeland a kind of Big Sur of its day. John Ruskin wrote that it was "a place almost too beautiful to live in."

YOU CAN visit Dove Cottage in Grasmere, where Wordsworth lived, walk the streets of Cockermouth, where he was born.

For a different literary pilgrimage, you can visit the seventeenth-century farmhouse near Windermere where Beatrix Potter lived. Now a museum, the house contains memorabilia associated with Miss Potter's children's classic, "The Tale of Peter Rabbit."

Good centers for exploring Lakeland are Keswick, Bowness, Penrith, Windermere, Grasmere, Ambleside and Coniston. The towns boast interesting old inns and hotels, like the Langdale Chase and Old England hotels in Windermere, the Kirkstone Foot in Ambleside, or Michael's Nook Country House in Grasmere.

THE RESTAURANT at the Sharrow Bay Country House Hotel, near Penrith, is worth a trek. In 1971 it was rated one of only nine three-star restaurants in Britain.

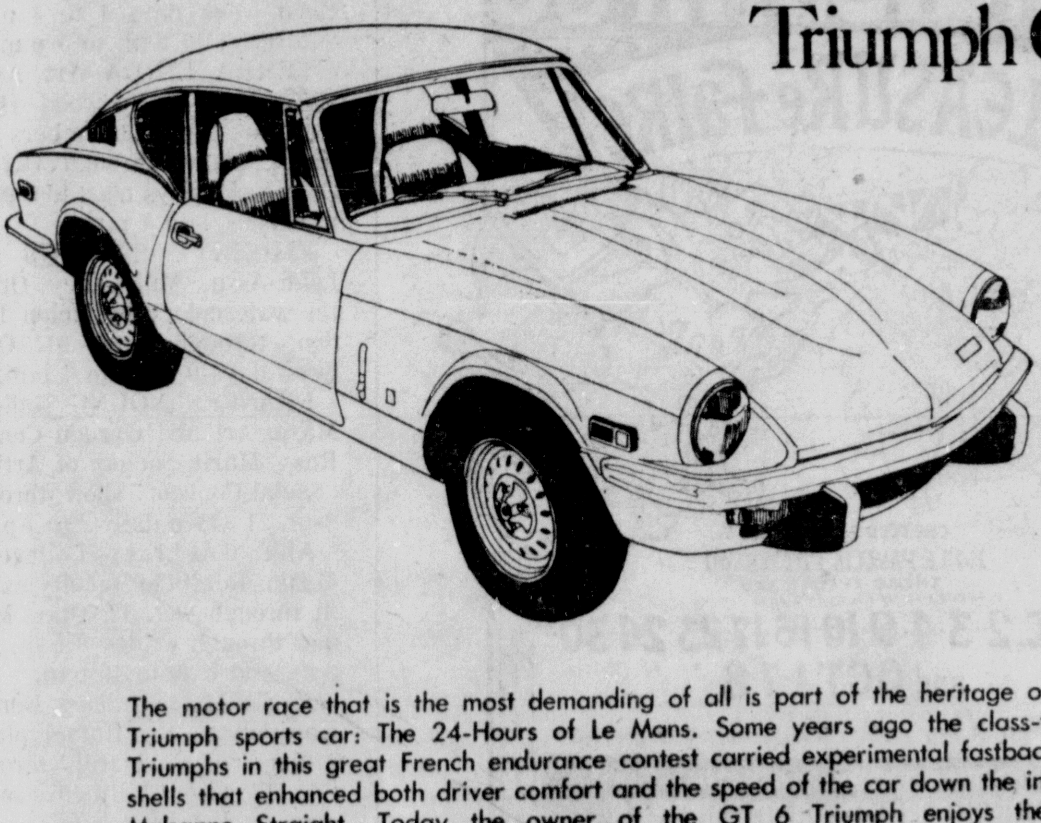
Distances are small in Lakeland. Using Windermere as a base, for example, you can easily explore the region by car or bus. Lake steamers are available, too. It's a hiker's paradise, and a natural for the rock climber, fisherman or bird watcher. Pony-trekking, sailing and golf are other popular pastimes.

For those who prefer to watch, there is the Grasmere Sports, an event that includes a primitive form of wrestling, fell-running (races to the top of the nearest mountain and back again), and hound trailing.

THIS IS hound-and-fox country and it produced one of the most famous hunters of all time, the man immortalized in ballad: "D'ye ken John Peel . . . with his hounds and his horn?" Like other men of Lakeland, all of whom are said to have a streak of wild Viking blood in their veins, Peel followed his hounds on foot, often for 30 miles in a day.

Lakeland is sheep country, too, so agricultural shows and sheepdog trials are not hard to find.

The area is one of the best places in England for buying quality handicrafts — woodwork, wrought iron, metalware, jewelry, pottery, embroidery and etchings. Two permanent exhibitions of locally made crafts can be found in Grange-in-Borrowdale, near Keswick, and at The Cartmel Forge, near Grange-over-Sands.



Triumph GT-6

The motor race that is the most demanding of all is part of the heritage of every Triumph sports car: The 24-Hours of Le Mans. Some years ago the class-winning Triumphs in this great French endurance contest carried experimental fastback body shells that enhanced both driver comfort and the speed of the car down the infamous Mulsanne Straight. Today the owner of the GT 6 Triumph enjoys the same aerodynamic stability and cozy encapsulation in the professional cockpit of a genuine Grand Touring coupe that looks far more costly than it is.

Garden In A Bottle

Certain plants root in water, you probably knew. But did you know that some plants will grow in a bottle of water the year-around.

To start a bottle garden, all you need is a bottle or container, water, and cut limbs or stems from the selected plant. United States Agricultural Departament Research Service scientists advise that any waterproof container — canning jar, beverage bottle, goldfish bowl, vase, etc. — can be used.

Their plant recommendations include the geranium, impatiens, peperomia, wax begonia, hibiscus, coleus, aucuba, ivy, aglaonema and grape ivy.

These are well suited to bottle gardening, they say, because many already have embryonic root systems at each point where a leaf originates.

CUT THE STEM just below the node (the point where a leaf originates). The cut should be a clean one made with a sharp implement so that the stem is not damaged.

REMOVE EXCESS stem and make the cut closer to the upper part of the plant. Put plant in water at once. All damaged or dying foliage should be removed from the plant stem.

TO BEGIN your bottle garden, was the container with warm soapy water, rinse, and then dry the container before filling with fresh water. Also wash the plant material with soapy water and vegetable brush.

BY USING florist's foam, you can make a garden out of individual leaves cut from a long vine. Each node should be inserted into the foam so that the pre-formed root can develop rapidly. Insert leaves in a circular pattern.

ADD FRESH-CUT flowers to your "garden," watering every three or four days, and replacing fading flowers with other cut flowers.

Gardening Pages

HERE A group of containers with plants have been arranged to create a true garden in bottles. The plants are, left to right, English ivy, the aluminum plant and peperomia, all good choices. Remember to add water to replace that lost by vegetation. And the entire container of water should be replaced at monthly intervals to control the growth of algae, so your container will remain clean and clear. For best results add a water-soluble house plant fertilizer at one-fourth or one-fifth the ratio recommended for potted house plants.

(U.S. Department of Agriculture photos)

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Maric gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Winter Sweet Peas should go in the ground without delay. You want them full grown before the arrival of winter.

✓ September feedings keep many plants blooming — into fall. Roses are prime examples. Lawns may also be fed.

✓ Plant cool season vegetable crops now. Peas are good in the cool months, as are many leaf crops such as cabbage, kale and broccoli.

✓ Bedding plants for winter color are available — or will be available in the immediate future — in local nurseries. Plant early to enjoy a maximum of bloom from Calendulas, Pansies, Violas, Stocks, Snapdragons and Iceland Poppies.

✓ Buy potted Chrysanthemums in bloom to take the place of those you forgot to plant last spring.

✓ It is planting time for the earlier autumn-planted bulbs, while others will be coming on soon.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

So you are going to buy carpet? . . . And if you are the average person, you know very little about it. What to buy, where to buy, looms ahead of you, so you decide to shop around.

Everyplace you go tells you something different and you become so confused, you are just about ready to give up the whole idea.

In order to eliminate some of the confushion, here are a few tips . . . Think about color, you might as well eliminate the colors that won't do for one reason or another. Never buy a color you don't like simply because it's the fad of the day. After all, you have to live with it for several years, long after its popularity is gone.

Decide on what texture and patterns are right for your particular decor. Have a general idea of the key areas to be carpeted. In addition to these facts, it is helpful to take along samples of colors and swatches of fabric being used.

Last, but most important, as in all purchases you make for your home, you want to do business with a reliable firm. One with a good reputation for satisfied customers will likely stand behind the products they sell.

We have earned that reputation, and we invite you to discuss your carpet needs with us.

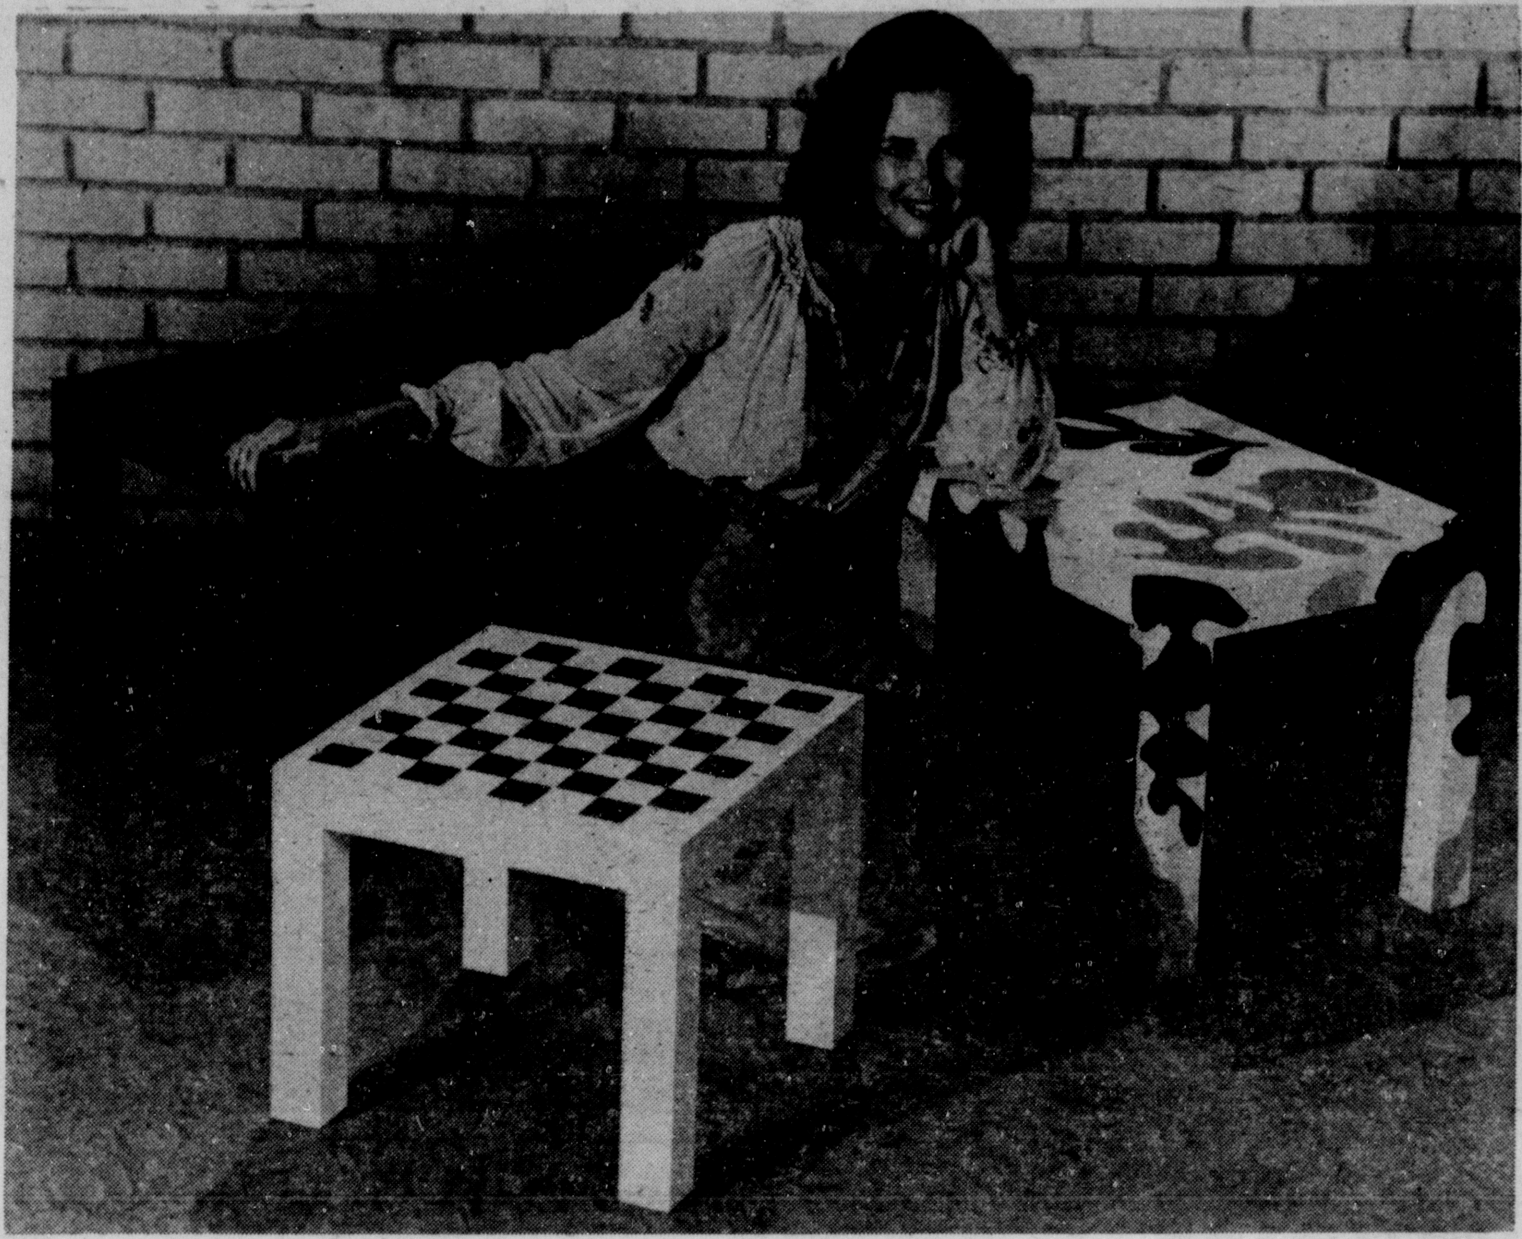
Mix 'n' Match Parsons Tables You Can Build



TRADITIONALLY, the Parsons table is a square or rectangular table with apron and leg widths measuring the same width. The design, quite similar to early Chinese tables, was originated by and named for the Parsons School of Design in New York. Its chief virtue lies in its simplicity. But we are into an eclectic age that frowns on too much sameness. Even the Parsons table has taken on an individuality. Steve Ellingson suggests that you build your own set of these useful tables, then decorate them to suit your personal taste, either coordinating the finished or doing each one differently. Actress Dayle Haddon, no plane Jane herself, shows you three possible decorating styles, with one table painted black and white with "wet look" enamel for the chessplayers, another treated in wild colors and mod designs, and a third finished in the more traditional oiled walnut. To help you along, Ellingson offers his pattern and construction instructions for Parsons tables, plus suggestions for decorating. Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Parsons Tables Pattern 503. Some other Ellingson patterns: No. 338, Colonial drop leaf coffee table, $1; No. 393, revolving album rack, $1; No. 414, magazine end table, $1.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Treat Child As An Individual

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Your children may have to share a room, but that doesn't mean they have to share an identity, does it?

How many of you parents have been heard to say, "My girls are nothing alike!" Well, if that's the case, try to give them a little room for expressing their differences.

You can start with the basic ingredients: twin beds, similar bedcovers (although the colors could be individual) and a proper amount of storage.

But why not stop there and let them expand on the idea?

ONE FAMILY I know has really encouraged the younger set to set up hobbies and all the accoutrements in their bedroom. What did they get? Three tanks of fish, one turtle box and rug-covered wooden tree for their cat to scramble up and down!

Of course the presence of the fish indicated that a counter was needed to hold the tanks, and a place had to be created for storage of little nets, boxes of food and plastic accessories.

Water splashed out during tender-loving-care time and so the countertop had to be surfaced in Formica (sea blue, naturally,).

ELECTRICAL outlets were needed close by, so father had to tackle that assignment. Mother added a roll of paper towels, mounted on the wall next to the tanks, and that's saved a lot of near diseasters.

The funny thing is that the family frequently gathers in the children's room to watch the fish. So a stack of colored plastic cubes found their way into the kids' room. Bookshelves began to overflow with handy gifts from aunts and uncles.

And the children next turned on to birdwatching!

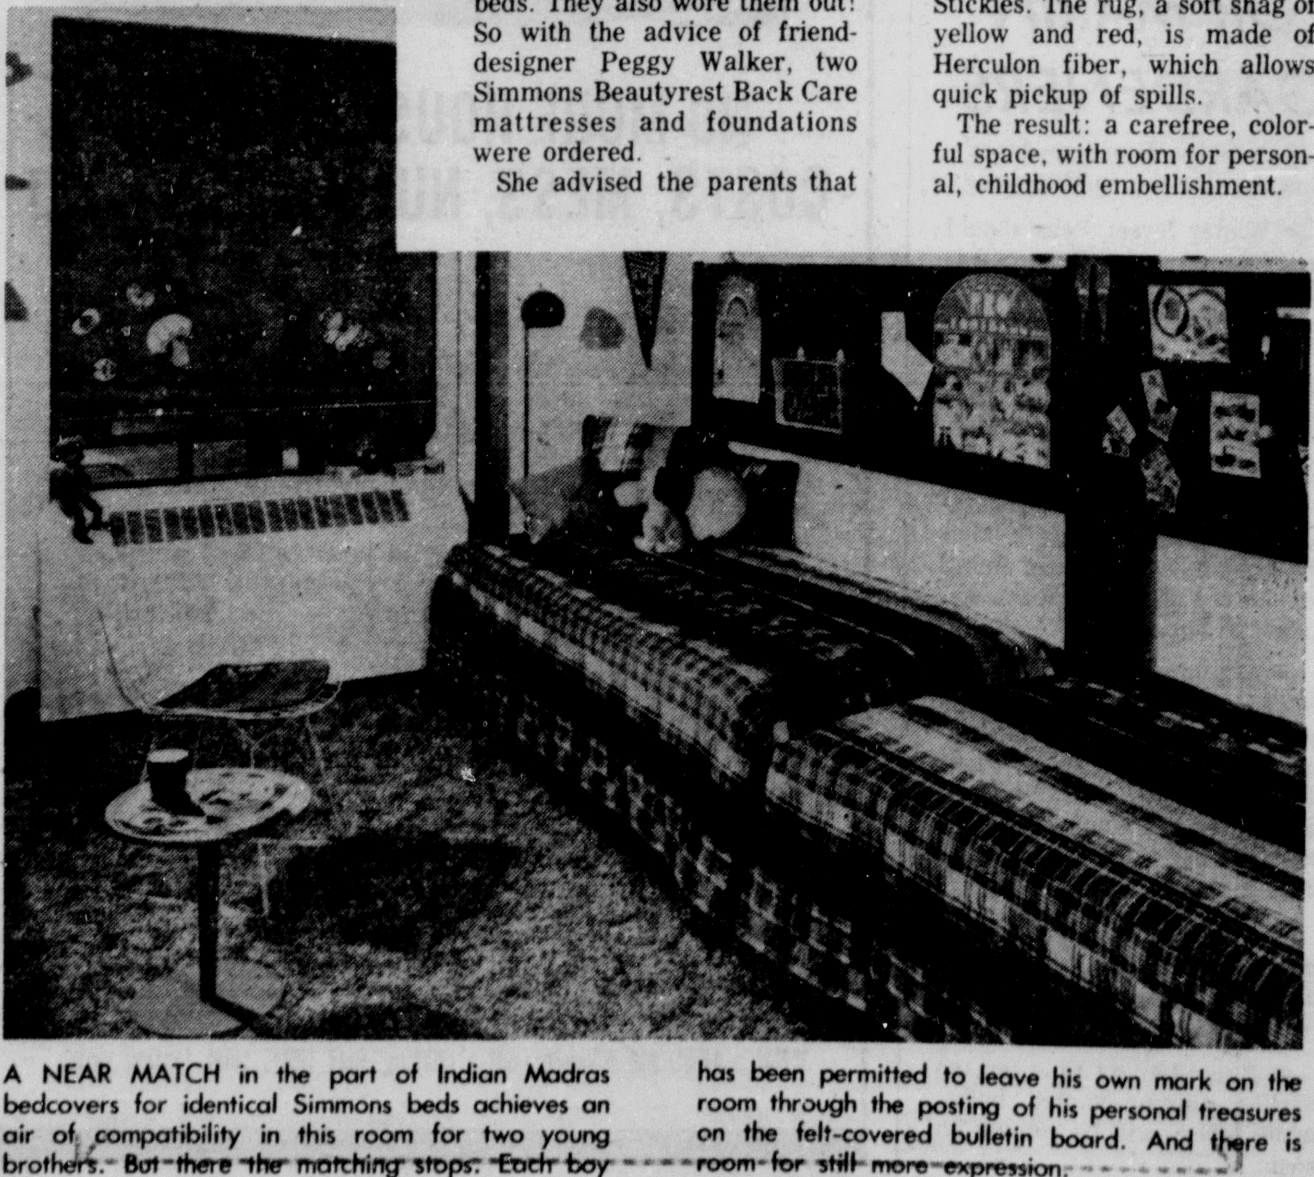
IT WAS AMUSING to watch the way activity revolved around a simple hobby. Yet at the same time it's a lesson in how not to overload a child's room with things parents think are essential.

Another young family, living in a city apartment, had two young boys outgrow their bunk beds. They also wore them out! So with the advice of friend-designer Peggy Walker, two Simmons Beautyrest Back Care mattresses and foundations were ordered.

She advised the parents that the best time to invest in good sleep support is when the young are growing, instead of after back trouble develops.

THE ROOM was eight by 10 feet, so the beds were placed foot to foot along one wall. A great big bulletin board was made of homosote (a pressed board) and covered in navy-blue felt. Some exposed plumbing pipes were painted the same blue, and a bright new window shade was decorated by the children with Rickie Tickie Stickies. The rug, a soft shag of yellow and red, is made of Herculon fiber, which allows quick pickup of spills.

The result: a carefree, colorful space, with room for personal, childhood embellishment.



A NEAR MATCH in the part of Indian Madras bedcovers for identical Simmons beds achieves an air of compatibility in this room for two young brothers. But there the matching stops. Each boy has been permitted to leave his own mark on the room through the posting of his personal treasures on the felt-covered bulletin board. And there is room for still more expression.

The Chronic Problem Of Chair Rungs

By ANDY LANG

The rungs of a chair have an annoying habit of coming loose over a period of years, especially when there is either too much or too little relative humidity in the room where it is used.

If at all possible, the loose rung should be removed, doing this very carefully so as not to cause further damage or mar the finish. All glue should then be scraped from the holes in the legs of the chair as well as the ends of the rung.

Do not sand the joint for any reason, since this will enlarge the holes and make the repair more difficult.

GLUE IS THEN applied to both the holes and the ends of the rung, but not if it appears that there will not be a tight fit. In that event, it is necessary to take up the slack in some way. This can be done by cutting thin kerfs in the ends of the rung and inserting tiny wedges in them. Another way is to wind some silk thread around the ends of the rung. Sometimes, winding some strands of fine steel wool around the ends of the rungs will suffice.

In any of these three choices, apply a little glue to the holes, before putting the pieces together. If any squeezes out during the reassembling, wipe it off immediately, using a soft cloth and warm water.

The joint must be kept tightly together while the glue hardens, in most cases as much as 24 hours, more if possible.

IF YOU HAVE bar clamps, this is simple, but be careful to place small, softwood blocks under the jaws of the clamps. Set the clamps to the desired positions before applying the glue. If you do not have clamps, you can make a kind of tourniquet with some rope or heavy cord, winding it around the two legs that hold the rung in place.

Here again use some padding so the rope doesn't damage the legs. Place a stick in the center and turn it and the rope together, an action which will draw the legs together. When sufficient pressure has been applied, rest one end of the stick against the rung so that it doesn't spring loose.

If necessary, tie it in place.

WHEN A CHAIR rung will not come out without danger of further damage: After drilling a pilot hole, drive a nail through the end of the rung from the inside of the chair leg. Use a finishing nail so that it can be driven slightly below the surface and the hole filled with wood putty or plastic wood.

Another solution is to drill a tiny hole through the leg so that it stops just before it reaches the end of the rung. A glue injector is then inserted into the hole, which permits glue to reach the inside of the joint.

Whatever method you use to repair a loose rung, do it. Or some day the chair will collapse when some one sits on it.

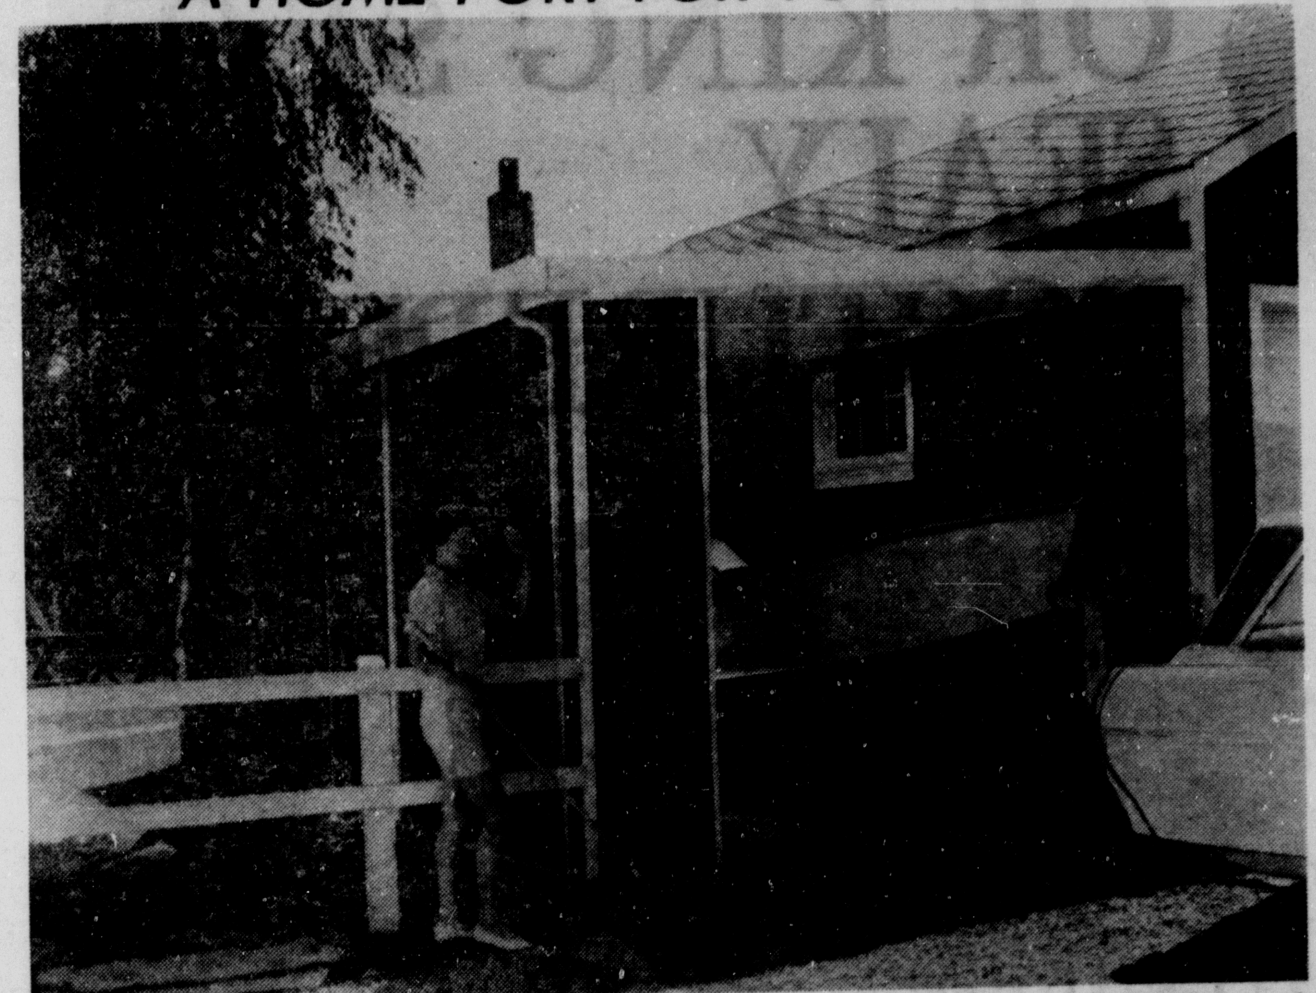
A HOME PORT FOR YOUR BOAT



HERE'S A STORAGE port for your boat, 24 feet long, that attaches to your house or garage, thus cutting construction costs. Not only does the structure provide shelter for your boat in bad weather, but it also offers storage for your boating gear. And you might want to consider the project, not as a boat port, but as a carport, to serve the family automobile or the second car. To get the pattern and instructions, send 25 cents to American Plywood Assn., 1119 A St., Tacoma, Wash., and inclose this clipping with picture to make sure you get the right handy plans set.

SIDNEY POITIER plays Virgil Tibbs, a visiting black big city homicide detective, while Rod Steiger, in background, has the role of a small town sheriff in "In the Heat of the Night," one of the better suspense-mystery movies of the 1960s. It will be shown tonight at 9 o'clock on Channels 3 and 4. For Poitier, the film launched a series of Virgil Tibbs pictures.

KARL MALDEN, an Academy Award winner, is cast as Detective Lt. Mike Stone, and Michael Douglas, right, as Assistant Inspector Steve Keller in the new "The Streets of San Francisco" series that premieres tonight at 9 o'clock on Channels 7 and 11 with a special two-hour-long episode. Douglas is the son of actor Kirk Douglas.

Jean Shepherd, Traveling Man, Pokes Into The Small Corners

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Shepherd is an old-fashioned traveling man. When the mood hits, he wanders about this nation, gabbing with people, fishing, drinking beer and generally seeing if all is in order.

The last time the mood hit, he decamped with a six-member crew, a $250,000 portable videotape recorder and the blessings of the Public Broadcasting Service to put his footloose findings on the record.

The result was "Jean Shepherd's America," 13 half-hour UHF essays on life in such locales as a Milwaukee brewery, a snowbound motel near Pueblo, Colo., and the Skowhegan branch of the Kennebec River in Maine.

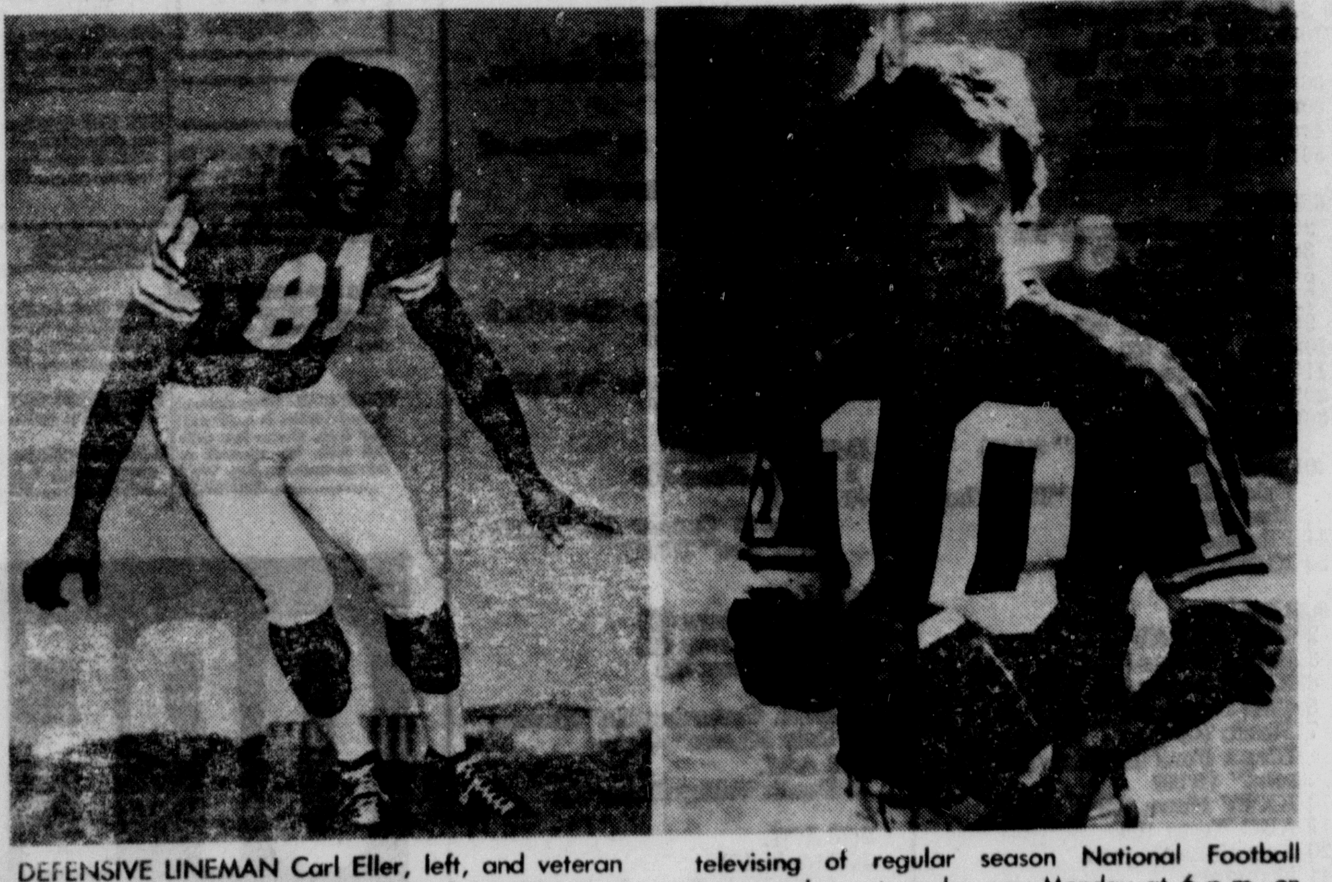
The show poked and prodded into small corners of America, dwelling at length on the incredible beauty we often never see in this country and occasionally on the jarring ugliness we always do.

The series was produced at WGBH in Boston. For reasons known but to PBS, it started running Easter Sunday a year ago and finished in the summer, a time most viewers are trapped in a station wagon somewhere near Disneyland.

It's making the rounds again now on more than 200 PBS stations and is well worth seeing, if for no other reason than that the tour guide is Shepherd.

He's a Chicago native, proprietor of a late-hour talk show on WOR Radio here. He tells meandering, wonderfully funny stories about things he's seen as boy and man and ties the good memories of the past to whatever he's doing in the present.

Shepherd doesn't know if another "America" series ever will be made. Money is the problem. PBS doesn't have much and may have less after Congress inspects its budget next year.



DEFENSIVE LINEMAN Carl Eller, left, and veteran quarterback Fran Tarkenton will lead the Minnesota Vikings against the Washington Redskins as the televising of regular season National Football League play gets under way Monday at 6 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Actor Larry Blyden, co-producer and co-star of Broadway's current revival of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," will be the new host when the syndicated "What's My Line?" television program begins taping for another season. Arlene Francis and Soupy Sales are back as regular panelists.

Marlyn Mason, Collin Wilcox-Horne, Frank Aletter and Julie Gregg have been signed to guest star on a segment of "Banyon" starring Robert Forster.

ON THE STEREO SCENE WITH ATLANTIC

By JOHN SUNIER

The Atlantic group of record labels have had such a large batch of excellent releases since I last turned my attention to them in these pages that I'm forced to limit things to a sort of checklist:

EAGLES — Asylum Records SD-5054: A very exciting rock quartet full of snap and verve re: their big hit, "Take It Easy." Good stuff.

EMERSON LAKE & PALMER — "Trilogy" — Cotillion SD-9903: E. L & R's latest release re-establishes this group as leaders in the jazz-classical rock instrumental area after their pretty sorry treatment of "Pictures at an Exhibition." Very trippy.

YES — "Fragile" — Atlantic SD 7211: A group with many fresh ideas about where today's rock is at. Several keyboard instruments including harpsichord, Mellotron and synthesizer are featured, along with Jon Anderson's vocals in tracks ranging from gutsy blues to an excerpt from Brahms' 4th Symphony.

THE ROLLING STONES — "Sticky Fingers" — ATCO COC 59100: The famous zippered album has been out for a while now, and succeeded by the "Exile on Main St." double album. Since I don't usually even devote space to LPs as worthless as the latter, I'll say a good word about the former. "Sticky 'Fingers" highlight is probably "Wild Horses," but "Sister Morphine" is good Stones material too.

"BOBBY SHORT LOVES COLE PORTER" — Atlantic SD 2-606: In a leap of light years, may I call your attention to a wonderful collection which will probably never be found in the vicinity of a Stones album. Bobby Short is very New York and very 1920s and 30s in his treatment of 22 mostly rarely-heard Cole Porter gems. Great nostalgia trip!

THE CONCEPTION CORPORATION presents Conceptionland" — Cottilion SD 9051: A number of wild and strange humor LPs have appeared lately on the heels of the madcap Firesign Theater. This one unleashes four similar satirists on a trip to an absurd Dizzyland featuring such attractions as "The Ego Trip," "Bummerland" and "Test Your Weakness." "All-Night Obituary of the Air" is also a laugh-provoker.

GEORGE CARLIN — "FM & AM" — Little David LD 7214: By now Carlin's humor is surely familiar to most radio listeners or TV viewers. My favorite characterization was "Son of WINO," in which the hip humorist captures perfectly the frantic KFRC-type radio format. "The 11 O'Clock News" convulsed me too, especially the weather report: "Continued dark tonight, followed by scattered light tomorrow morning."

"ARETHA LIVE AT FILLMORE WEST" — Atlantic SD 7205: Aretha has been doing lots of recording lately, and this is some of the best, taped last year at a live appearance at Fillmore West. "Respect," "Love the One You're With," and "Dr. Feelgood" are among the tunes she gives high-powered treatments. King Curtis is the sax soloist and band leader, and on "Spirit in the Dark" Ray Charles makes a surprise appearance that brings the house down.

ARETHA FRANKLIN — "Amazing Grace" — Atlantic SD 2-906: Aretha, who began her career in the church, has returned there — to Rev. James Cleveland's Baptist Church in Los Angeles — for a dynamite gospel album that may well change the course of popular music. If you were turned on by the wonderful spirit of the first Hawkins Singers album ("Oh Happy Day"), don't miss hearing Aretha, the Southern California Community Voir and Cleveland on piano in thrilling versions of "Amazing Grace," "Mary Don't You Weep," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and other gospel numbers. Recorded in the church with a full congregation present, this is a thoroughly inspired musical experience.

"HEAVY SOUL" — Atlantic SD 2-500: This xargain-priced two-LP package provides a fine opportunity for those of us honkies who like some but not all soul music to sample a bit of the best. Just a few of the artist represented in this high-voltage set: Brook Benton, Wilson Pickett, Aretha, Sam & Dave, Clarence Carter, and Roberta Flack and Donny Hathaway.

"HISTORY OF ERIC CLAPTON" — ATCO SD 2-803: This important double-disc package of re-issued material traces one of the best guitarists in rock from his beginnings with the Yardbirds through the classic Cream to today's Derek and the Dominos. "Spoonful," "Sunshine of Your Love," and the breathtaking "Layla" are some of the high points in the 16 tracks.

"LIVE CREAM, VOLUME II" — ATCO SD 7005: More reissued gems featuring Jack Bruce and Ginger Baker by Clapton's side in live tapings of the late lamented group's favorites such as "White Room."

BEE GEES — "Trafalgar" — ATCO SD 7003: British history seems to be the Bee Gees' inspiration in their latest LP, with a beautiful cover painting of the Battle of Trafalgar and a tune of that title. The Gibb brothers' high-voiced harmonies receive tasteful support from strings directed by Bill Shepherd. I liked "Lion in Winter," and "The Greatest Man in the World."
